POLICE BEAT

Debris from Jeep left at scene

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Debris at the scene indicated the vehicle was a Jeep Grand Cherokee between the years of 1996-1998, police said.

Police are investigating a single-car accident involving a gray Jeep Grand Cherokee that damaged a granite post and chain fence on Atlantic Avenue in the aftermath of the storm last week. The 64-year-old homeowner discovered the damage to his fence, estimated at $3,000, when he went out to shovel at about 11:20 a.m. on Tuesday (Dec. 22).

Debris at the scene indicated the vehicle was a Jeep Grand Cherokee between the years of 1996-1998, police said.

Police were able to obtain part numbers from the pieces left at the scene to determine the make, model and range of years. The Jeep should have significant front-end damage, police said. Detectives are investigating and checking vehicles in Cohasset that fit that model and age.

Cell phone

An 18-year-old Cohasset woman was cited for impeded operation (talking on her cell phone) following a single-car crash on Sunday (Dec. 27) at 5:45 p.m.

Police said the teen was driving a 2008 Jeep Liberty SUV on Sohier Street (between N. Main Street and Ripley Road) when she rear-ended a parked 2003 Ford Explorer. No injuries were reported. Her Jeep had to be towed, police said. There was some damage to the Explorer but it did not have to be towed.

Black ice

At 6:30 a.m. on Monday (Dec. 28) a 39-year-old Scituate woman in a 1997 Ford hit black ice on Route 3A by Red Fox Lane, then went into a spin and hit a guardrail, police said. No injuries were reported but her car had to be towed. Mass. Department of Transportation was notified about the icy conditions. The car had leaked fluids and the fire department conducted the cleanup.

Icy roads

Police officers, who are on patrol, routinely notify the state Department of Transportation and the Cohasset DPW about icy road conditions. The officer calls the supervisor (usually a sergeant) about the road conditions who then notifies the appropriate agency.

Logged

A 39-year-old Sohier Street woman reported receiving annoying phone calls last week that were likely the result of kids playing around, police said. She did not want to pursue the matter but wanted the incidents logged.

Parking lot

A 1999 Buick Le Sabre, operated by an 89-year-old Scituate woman, was damaged in the parking lot outside Walgreen's last week, police said. The woman came outside and noticed that the rear-door molding on the driver's side was missing. Where she was parked there were no video cameras, police said. The incident was reported at 2 p.m. on Wednesday (Dec. 23).

Snowboarding

Police responded to a call from the Swim Center about youth snowboarding on the hill there last Thursday (Dec. 24) at 10:35 a.m. Police sent the group along. The Swim Center has posted interim no-trespassing signs.

Fireworks

Complaints about hearing gunshots from a Pleasant Street caller turned out not to be gunshots but fireworks at about 11:22 p.m. on Christmas Eve, police said. Apparently the revelers ran out of fireworks, as the area was soon quiet.

Raccoon

A Flintlock Ridge Road resident reported a sick raccoon in the middle of the road at 4:23 p.m. on Saturday (Dec. 26). The animal was staggering around and had to be destroyed for public safety reasons, police said. There was no evidence that the raccoon had come in contact with people.

Warrant

Police assisted a constable in serving a capias warrant for child support on a Cohasset resident on Monday. The resident was arrested by the constable and taken to court. Constables handle civil matters, police said. A capias warrant is a civil warrant for arrest.

Outage

There was a power outage Tuesday (Dec. 29) in the West Corner area caused by a large tree that fell onto power wires near 700 Jerusalem Road. The power outage caused the temporary traffic lights at the West Corner bridge project to fail, police said.

Two police officers were hired by MassDOT (Dept. of Transportation) to hand control traffic until power was restored. The power was out from about 3:30 to 5:30pm.

The tree came down due to high winds, police said.

Home Instead SENIOR CARE®

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

FOOD SHOPPING ASSISTANCE

For seniors who remain at home, do not drive, or have trouble walking, homecare assistants can provide valuable food shopping services. Before going to the store, they will sit with their clients and plan meals and snacks for the next few days or for a week. They can check to see what foods are on hand and make note of staples, like milk and bread, that need to be replenished. They will put emphasis on selecting low-fat, nutritious items like fruits and vegetables, lean meats, fish, and eggs. Homecare assistants' purchases can provide their senior clients with sufficient ingredients to prepare more than one meal and freeze the balance in meal-size portions.

Simply having someone to help with the groceries and other errands can drastically increase the length of time that your loved ones can stay in their own homes.

We can provide you with an experienced and bonded caregiver who can take care of tasks like grocery shopping and menu planning, which will free up your time and make your loved ones' lives easier. Our companions can also help with other daily tasks like cooking, bathing, cleaning, transportation and errands. Call 781-878-2994 today to learn about our wide variety of services, including a flexible schedule of care, from occasional respite to 24-hour care. We are located at 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. The home healthcare worker can limit canned and frozen product purchases to those that are low in sodium, saturated fat, and cholesterol.

To you, it's about finding a trusted partner. To us, it's personal.

Blustery turbine talks and bleak budget news

By Nancy White and Mary Ford
NWHITE@CNC.COM

As Cohasset says goodbye to 2009, it's a good time to reflect on the past 12 months. It was a year of high marks for Cohasset students whose MCAS scores continue to make the grade and for those young people who volunteer — whether at CSCR (Center for Student Coastal Research), Student Council blood drive, or at ASP – just to name a few.

The "Greenbush Guys" in Making Tracks kept the town informed of much more than train issues. They also watched over sewer and water main work. The best news being that the Little Harbor sewer expansion has almost finished up at last.

It was a year of challenges for Cohasset, which inked an inter-municipal agreement for regional dispatch. How the police station will be manned at night is still to be worked out. The School Committee had to grapple with upset parents and policy issues over President Obama's back-to-school speech.

Wind turbines, Treat's Pond, Cat Dam and other issues kept town officials busy over the past 12 months. The town said goodbye to popular Police Chief James Hussey who returned to Boston. And the town lost a bundle of energy with the passing of Linda Elworthy, director of Elder Affairs.

The town also honored long-time volunteer at Rosie's Place, JoAnne Chittick, who has also captured so much of Cohasset's charm in her paintings, as Citizen of the Year.

So here's a look back with text, quotes and photos from stories that appeared in The Cohasset Mariner in 2009. But hold onto your hats and stay strapped in because we're sure that 2010 holds a lot for Cohasset. And here at the Mariner, we promise to be there covering the news and bringing you the features and photos you've come to expect.

John Dockray, kneeing, stand by Engine 3, which can serve as an emergency ambulance if the regular ambulance is out of town on a call. It has a medication box, a cardiac monitor, and a "First In" bag with oxygen and IV equipment.

JANUARY

An opportunity for the town to buy 12 acres of land behind Town Hall comes before the Board of Selectmen in early January. The land buy did not come to fruition this year.

The 25 Ripley Road affordable housing project was in and out of headlines this year. In early January, the owner and developer Will Charles withdrew his comprehensive permit application without prejudice from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The Affordable Housing Trust absorbs the responsibilities — and takes on some new ones — of the Affordable Housing Partnership.

Lilly Cleveland, a watercolorist who lives in Duxbury, is the South Shore Art Center's Artist in Residence.

Town Manager Bill Griffin paints a bleak budget picture at the budget summit with the Board of Selectmen, the Advisory Committee and School Committee.

Things heated up at a public hearing on the CCI-Energy wind turbine project proposal. There were many voices of opposition at the 'blustery' meeting. The Planning Board gathered information on the noise impacts and told the applicant to set up a balloon demonstration to give the board members and the public an idea of the height of the proposed turbines.

Sotheby's New York auctions off pieces of Cohasset history – six silver beakers and a carved and figured maple armchair raising $175,000 for the artifacts' owners, the First Parish Church.

The Historical Society puts on an exhibit of some of the finest fashions to come out of Paris in the early part of the 20th century. Intricate beading, fine lace, soft velvet, flowing satin and sparkling sequins make the dozen dresses and accessories epitomize the craftsmanship and styles of Parisian fashion.

Avalon announces they are planning to break ground on its permitted 200-apartment unit complex off Route 3A in the summer. At the end of 2009, the project has yet to break ground.

The Board of Selectmen approves the charge and composition of a "Stormwater Advisory Committee" to tackle myriad stormwater issues plaguing neighborhoods.

The Board of Selectmen were split — two and two — on one of the two Army Corps project options on the Treats Pond outfall and, without a preferred route, they could not get majority vote on supporting the project.

Town Manager Bill Griffin prepared town committees for a 15 percent reduction in state aid. But when the Governor's budget came out the state aid decrease is "only" 7.5 percent.

"While what came out (in the Governor's budget) might be regarded as 'good news,' we still have a significant budget problem that I will continue to try and address," Griffin told the Mariner.

FEBRUARY

Cohasset natives Ashley and Kimberly Ulmer fuse their love of art and their desire to raise environmental consciousness in a new entrepreneurial venture – Green Eyed Monster – where they create and sell reusable bags.

For very little cost, the Fire Department supplements its current emergency medical service. Engine 3, which already responds to all medical emergencies, gets outfitted with advanced life support equipment.

School Committee members Rick Flynn and Steve Fusco announce they will not seek re-election. Paul Schubert and Helene Lieb announce their candidacy for school committee.

The library reports their usage numbers are up year over year.

Local pizza shops are feeling the pinch in the struggling economy.

The Recreation Department debuts a fencing program.

Longtime resident and veteran Joe McElroy is appointed as veterans' agent. In that role, McElroy hopes to aid veterans that served in World War II to those just returning from Iraq and Afghanistan realize the benefits they are entitled to receive.

The Choral Art Society, which draws singers from all over the South Shore, including Cohasset, celebrates its 50-year anniversary.

Work hard, keep your options open and you just might be given a chance to go to Mars. That was the message from Steve Bowen, Cohasset native and astronaut, gave a group of captivated students at Deer Hill School in mid-February.

The Planning Board makes significant headway on the wind turbine project hearing. This month they gather data on the turbines' fire suppression system and noise and shadow flicker impacts.

Historical Society director Lynne DeGiacomo pulls together an exhibit displaying the Society's extensive artifacts from the Civil War. The pieces include a gun brought home by a Cohasset soldier to a jacket once worn by an officer to a box of letters sent from Cohasset men battling horrible conditions and the Confederate army in the 1860s.

MARCH

A shuttle bus that would do a seven-mile loop hitting the major commercial centers of Cohasset is floated. IN the early spring, the idea was shelved due to lack of support from local businesses and the community.

The Water Commission unveils their plan to raise water rates about $60 a quarter for the majority of Cohasset water users; the proposal ultimately passes at town meeting.

Officer Christy Tarantino, a 13-year veteran for the Cohasset Police force, is promoted to the rank of sergeant.

Sen. Bob Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley bring dismal news of the state budget to the Board of Selectmen.

In mid-March Cohasset town officials receive word the towns of Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Cohasset have been awarded a $1 million grant for the creation of a regional dispatch center to be based in Hingham.

The Recreation Department puts on its very first Recreation Fair featuring the many ways families can have fun this summer and all year long. The event later won a state award for program outreach.

Four newcomers to town politics are profiled as they seek elected posts – Paul Schubert and Helene Lieb for School Committee, Kathryn Lydon for Recreation Commission, and Jean Healey Dippold for Planning Board. All are elected to their respective posts in April.

During the month of March, uniformed Cohasset police officers show high school students what enforcing the law is all about through classroom discussions and demonstrations.

With the generosity of local residents and business, Cohasset resident and one of directors of the West African Children's Fund Cheryl Fever plans to arrive in the impoverished villages of Guinea in West Africa with boxes and boxes of clothes, shoes, books and personal care items.

Thanks to a $35,000 grant from the Cohasset Education Foundation, Deer Hill boasts a classroom lab, a high-tech room outfitted to bring the science, technology, engineering and mathematics portions of the curriculum to life. Dubbed the STEM lab (STEM is an acronym standing for science, technology, engineering and mathematics), students get hand-on experience with microscopes, the scientific method and science phenomena.

The Board of Selectmen narrows its priorities for stimulus funding grants. Later the Selectmen choose the Cohasset Town Hall restoration and rehabilitation project, a combined project to address the ongoing flooding issues of two key areas in town, Treat's Pond/Atlantic Avenue and Jacob's Meadow, and restoration of the Beechwood Street culvert.

Concerns over the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project, which propose two 100-meter towers, heat up. A private group of opposition – the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee – collects over 800 signatures from Cohasset residents for a petition declaring concerns including visual, noise and safety impacts. The Planning Board says they know there are concerns, but the petition doesn't have much standing in the permitting process.

APRIL

An efficient Annual Town Meeting takes action on 19 articles. Voters approve a balanced budget, a water rate hike, a $17,000 study for Cat Dam, land swapping articles and community preservation funding to prepare for a new senior center, and the purchase of fire pumper truck and two new school buses.

The Zoning Board of Appeals public hearing process opens on the 25 Ripley Road project, which proposes transforming the single-family home into seven condominium units, two units would be affordable.

The Cohasset Sports Partnership, the non-profit organization heading up the fundraising for the synthetic turf field at the high school, announces it has come a long way, but is still short of its $550,000 target.

Just 5 percent of voters turned up at Town Hall to cast a ballot for the sleepy town election. There were not races for any of the seats.

Grace Tuckerman, left, and Abigail Alves, right, have a lot of time to read as less than 200 voters had come in to cast their ballots at Town Hall by 2:30 p.m. during the annual Town Election on a Saturday last April.

Cohasset police warn residents of an emerging telephone scam where a caller poses as a grandchild in trouble and in need of money.

The Historical Society puts together an exhibit of children's portraits done by former Cohasset Country Day School art teacher Margaret Wilkins Reed.

The Board of Selectmen signs a 10-year cable license with Comcast.

The sixth annual PSO Telethon once again features local talent and raises money to support and enhance Cohasset Schools.

pipe/Sandy Cove easement issue with local residents. The issue once again goes unresolved.

The Planning Board wrestles with gathering the final pieces of information in order to make their decision on the CCI-Energy Cohasset Heights wind turbine project. In late April they close the public hearing process and begin deliberating their decision.

As the Planning Board wraps up its public hearing on the CCI-Energy Cohasset Heights wind turbine project proposal, Conrad Langenhagen and Jeff Patterson, both of Sanctuary Pond Road and members of a resident group called the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee, request the Board of Selectmen to call a Special Town Meeting. After receiving a lukewarm reception for the Selectmen, they withdraw their request. But, it is not the end of the issue.

MAY

After two nights of marathon deliberation the Planning Board denies the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project proposal fails to get the needed unanimous consensus.

The Community Garden Club celebrates 50 years of blooms.

Public health officials say they are prepared to deal with the H1N1 (swine) flu virus.

Wayne Sawchuk, Cohasset resident and owner of 39 South Main St. (the Bia Bistro building) in the village, converts the second floor of the building into two spaces available for weekly rentals.

The Zoning Board of Appeals requests the developer of 25 Ripley Road, Will Charles, to provide more information and updated plans for the proposal. They say they need more information in order to make a decision.

A citizen's petition calls a Special Town Meeting to discuss placing a "moratorium" on the town's wind energy conversion facility zoning bylaw.

Clark Brewer, Planning Board member and co-chair of the Affordable Housing Trust, floats moving and re-purposing the Cook Estate house. One of the possibilities was re-using the sprawling cape-style home as a base for a new senior center. The need for a quick turnaround and a lack of support from town officials led the plan to fizzle out by summer.

Fairoaks resident and US Army Lieutenant Colonel Dan Driscoll is mobilized to Walter Reed Army Medical Hospital to provide legal assistance to wounded soldiers.

Due to budget restraints and lack of student enrollment, Cohasset High pulls the plug on its Latin program, much to many students' dismay.

Cohasset pulls out all the stops to salute its veterans on Memorial Day. The Healing Field, featuring hundreds of flags, returns for the third consecutive year. Coleman Nee, undersecretary of state department of veteran services, is the keynote speaker on Memorial Day.

The Senior Center loses its 'dynamo' in its director Linda Elworthy when she passes away unexpectedly in late May.

Jim Norton is inducted into the Big Brother Hall of Fame in recognition of his 15-year (and counting) commitment to his 'little brother' Brendan Sewell.

JUNE

The Class of 2009, which is described as a "hard-working" class, graduates from Cohasset High.

The Animal Control Officer takes a pit bull named Tyson into custody after months of complaints from the Highland Court neighborhood, a fight with other dogs, and biting a child. After a hearing before the Board of Selectmen, the dog is sent to a dog sanctuary in Colorado to be rehabilitated or to live out the rest of his life.

A Cohasset watercolor "mourning picture" from 1832 fetches over $27,000 at auction.

The Affordable Housing Trust comes before the Selectmen to seek their support in finding a reliable funding source for its cause.

Thirteen-year-old Colin Whelan and his mother Nancy Whelan complete the triathlon in a relay team with Olympic gold medalist swimmer Gary Hall Jr. All three athletes have Type-1 diabetes.

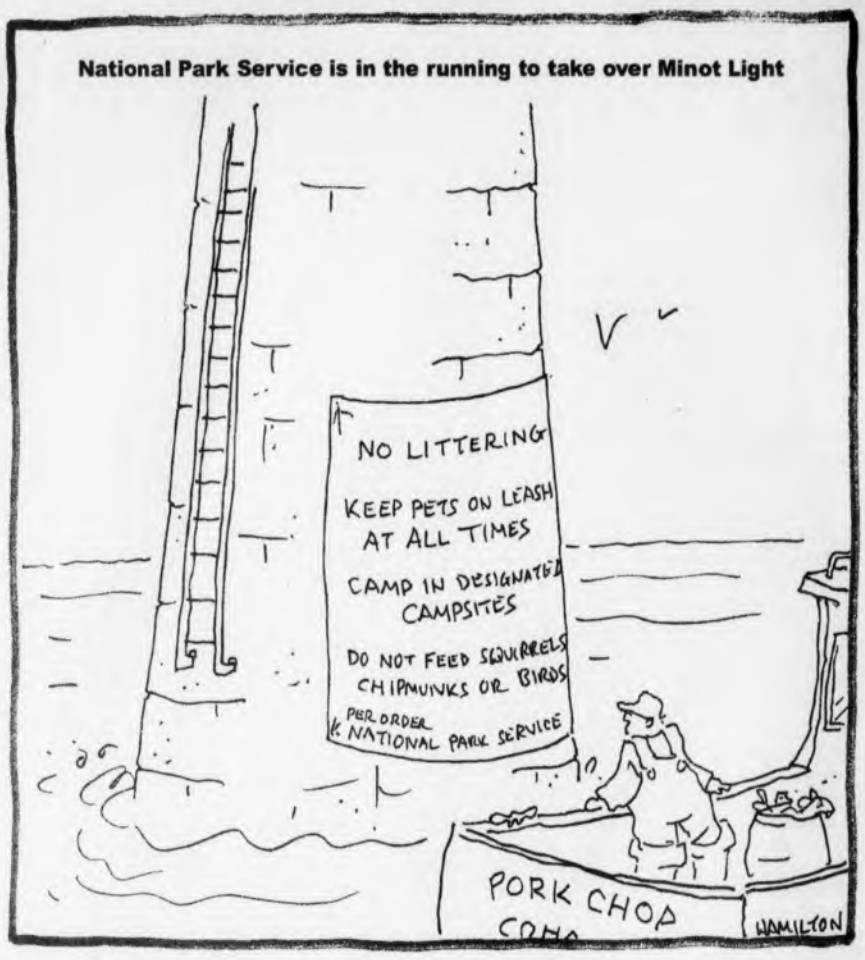
The School Committee discussed the possibility of allowing trained police drug search K-9s into the school.

After a citizen-called Special Town Meeting to discuss an amendment to the wind bylaw, the zoning bylaw governing wind turbines remains as is. A lack of recommendation by the Planning Board before the scheduled town meeting forced voters not to consider the substance of the amendment, rather whether to adjourn the discussion to another day. Town Meeting voters do approve an amendment to the previously approved allocation to fund the synthetic turf field that allows the project to go forward.

Local consignment shops fare well in the current economy by offering a friendly atmosphere and quality bargains for their customers.

Cohasset Recreation kicks off a new season of a summer classic – concerts on the Common.



In its third year, the Cohasset Triathlon raised over $140,000 for its charitable partner, the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. A group of 10 athletes all of whom have Type-1 diabetes compete in the Cohasset Triathlon as the Tri-Team for Diabetes to put a face on the presently incurable condition.

JULY

More than 800 athletes compete in the third annual Cohasset Triathlon.

Cohasset's very own cartoonist, Jim Hamilton, shows what it would be like if the National Park Service takes over Minot Light.

The wind energy bylaw stands as it is after special Town Meeting because the planning board continued a public hearing on the proposal and voters therefore could not act on the substance of the citizens' petition. An article on funding for the turf field sails through. Later this month, Cohasset Heights wind turbine project is back on the Planning Board's radar when the applicant files an appeal in land court.

The Board of Health continues to conduct water sampling in the beaches and swimming areas around town.

An 18-year-old Cohasset teen is facing charges after breaking into a garage and stealing bicycles, police said. Two other teens are going to be summonsed to court for receiving stolen property.

A cable-TV studio is being planned for Town Hall; Comcast is providing the funds to set it up as part of its new contract with the town.

The 200-unit Avalon complex will not start construction this month because of economic and market conditions.

Unregistered door-to-door solicitors continue to cause a spate of complaints.

Speaking the language of music

CONSERVATORY NOTES

JENNIE MULQUEEN

COURTESY PHOTO

There have been moments when I have questioned my sanity. Like with any career, there are bad days. There was the time a visiting grandfather – who had been enchanted with watching his grandson in my Music Together class – chirped on the way out, "Wow, you are so talented, why are wasting your voice here?" That was a rough one. Then there was the time my mother-in-law said basically the same thing. And then my father. Or variations on that theme, but you get the idea.

OK, early childhood music teachers can get a bad rap. At the high school reunion, "I'm sorry, you do what exactly?" People think we are basically like Barney without the purple; slightly talented at best and wishing we could hide behind a costume. Mommy-and-Me classes on television portray the teacher as some over-the-top saccharine young woman, badly in need of a dose of reality.

While I did begin teaching Music Together 14 years ago when I was, ahem, younger, I was never this woman. Passionate, yes. But silly and goofy, no. In fact, I had to learn to lighten up (I'm still learning this!). What drew me to teach Music Together is what keeps me in it today: a commitment to the language of music.

The truth is that people need to be able to speak the language of music in order for music to not go the way of Latin. I'm serious about that. People need to have a basic sense of beat and tonality in order to even appreciate music as an audience member, otherwise the whole endeavor becomes a bit of a charade.

Most importantly, people need to experience music on a fun level, and Music Together can be incredibly fun. When parents let loose and make a little music, kids are inspired to imitate and join in on the spot. The memory of fun music is what draws baby boomers to Rodgers and Hammerstein shows – because these used to be songs sung in a living room around a piano and it was good old-fashioned fun! Everyone including Uncle Larry would sing along. Now I wonder how many people even sing carols around a piano anymore. With televisions, radios and iPods, families just aren't singing together.

Most importantly, people need to experience music on a fun level, and Music Together can be incredibly fun.

So this is why I have stuck with it for so long. In Music Together, families really do learn to sing together. They experience the joy of music on the simplest and purest level. There are good days when I run into a former client who says of her 10-year-old, "We still sing that sea shells song together" or "We are so glad we have all these songs in common with our children. Music Together is one of our fondest memories."

Come try one of our Music Together classes at South Shore Conservatory. We offer classes six days a week in five locations throughout the South Shore beginning Saturday, Jan. 9. Visit us at www.sscmusic.org or call 781-749-7565, ext. 33.

Jennie Mulqueen, a trained vocalist, has been deeply committed to nurturing families through music for the last 14 years. She is artistic director of SSC's Music Together program, which is based on the philosophy that singing and dancing is our human birthright.

GIMME SHELTER

Friendly brothers need a home

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue just had two new intakes. They are 5-month old brothers. Bugsy is a Tuxedo, black with white, and just look at that little white bow-like mustache. His brother, Doc, is all black. They are both as friendly as can be and would do well with children of any age. They love to snuggle with each other and with humans. They're what we'd call absolutely "purrfect kittens." Yes, of course, we would like them to be adopted together.

Please call Shirl at 781-925-3380 if you'd like to arrange an appointment to see Bugsy and Doc or any of our felines or stop by during open hours. We have a few Kittendales calendars left to help you ring in the New Year.

Open hours are 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays; and 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays. The phone number is 1-877-378-1195; physical address, 50 L St.; mailing address, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. Visit the website at www.hsar.org to check out our many available felines. To become a member, call Mary at 781- 925-3121 for details.

Cohasset High School yearbooks

Cohasset High School is missing a couple of yearbooks from their collection including 1984, 1998, 2005 and any yearbooks prior to 1954. People who have one and are willing to donate it to the school can call assistant principal Mike Gill at 383-6100.

Also, a woman's CHS class ring has been found, circa 1953.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

The Old Man and The Kid

As the Old Man sat down to make the last entry in his logbook, he wondered where the year had gone.

It seemed like he had just bounded through the door, a Kid who thought he knew everything and that the last Old Man had really messed things up — what with the financial crisis and the bailout and the debt and oil prices, not to mention the wars. It didn't take him long to realize that he couldn't just change things like he had said he would.

But even before he was born, he knew about this Obama guy, this African-American who had been elected president. He knew it was important, but he wasn't exactly sure why.

The good thing for him, however, was that he literally had all of recorded history at his fingertips. So he sat down and started to read.

He read about the ships that brought human beings across a vast ocean from Africa to serve as slaves against their will, and how they only were considered three-fifths of a person.

He read about a bloody war, not between two countries, but between two parts of the same country, where one held slaves and the other didn't. He read about Lincoln, the man whose desire it was to keep his country together and issued a decree that those who were enslaved should be free.

He read about how even after the war ended, there were still separate schools and water fountains, and how the Supreme Court had to declare that separate was not equal.

He read about Jack Roosevelt Robinson, a man from a family of sharecroppers who made America's Pastime truly one for all Americans by gritting his teeth through the hatred and showing that he and others like him deserved to play with white men, as if that should have ever been a question. For he had also read about Satchel Paige and Josh Gibson.

It was then that the Old Man, by that point a little less of a Kid, began to understand.

But there were still things he didn't understand back then, and as his year ended, still didn't understand.

No amount of reading could tell him exactly what was going on with the economy, and how it got to the point where "less-bad" news was considered "good," where tens of thousands of people being out of work in a month as a positive sign because last month it was hundreds of thousands.

He still could not figure out why there was such vitriol and shouting over something everyone should agree on — that people should have the best chance possible to stay healthy and live long, productive lives.

And he couldn't begin to fathom why people — literally from the beginning of time, as he read over and over again — saw the need to kill each other to meet their own needs. He wondered how many Old Men aged even more quickly trying to figure that one out.

So as the time ticked away, the Old Man wondered what he should tell the Kid, who surely would be as full of life and optimism as he was when he first threw open that door. He wanted the Kid to realize what was before him, but didn't want to dampen his spirits at the same time.

His entry done, unless something truly world-changing happened in his last few minutes, the Old Man decided to write a note to the Kid. That way, the Kid could read it on his own time, just in case he didn't show up soon enough to hear his advice.

Not wanting to mar the Kid's shiny new logbook, the Old Man decided to grab a sheet of paper and write his thoughts there:

"Right now, you think you have all the answers, but you don't.

You don't even know all the questions yet.

But that's fine. No one does when they start, and no one is ever ready for what they'll encounter.

Remember this, however.

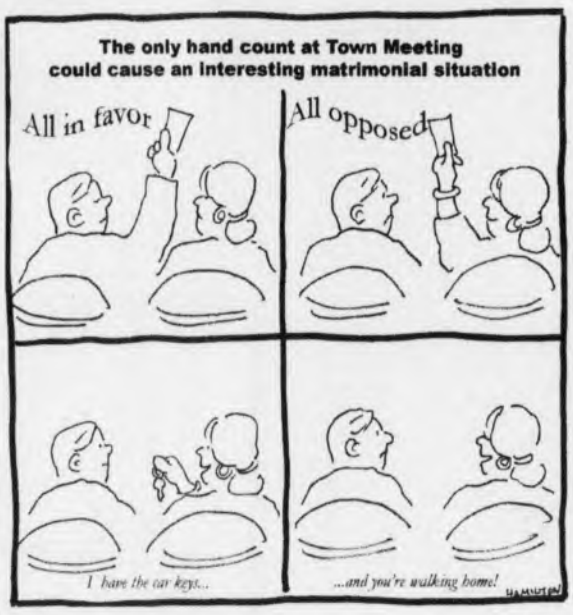
In some things, you will succeed.



In others, you will fail.

But all you can do is the best you can."

Thoughts on Cohasset's Water Department in 2010 and beyond

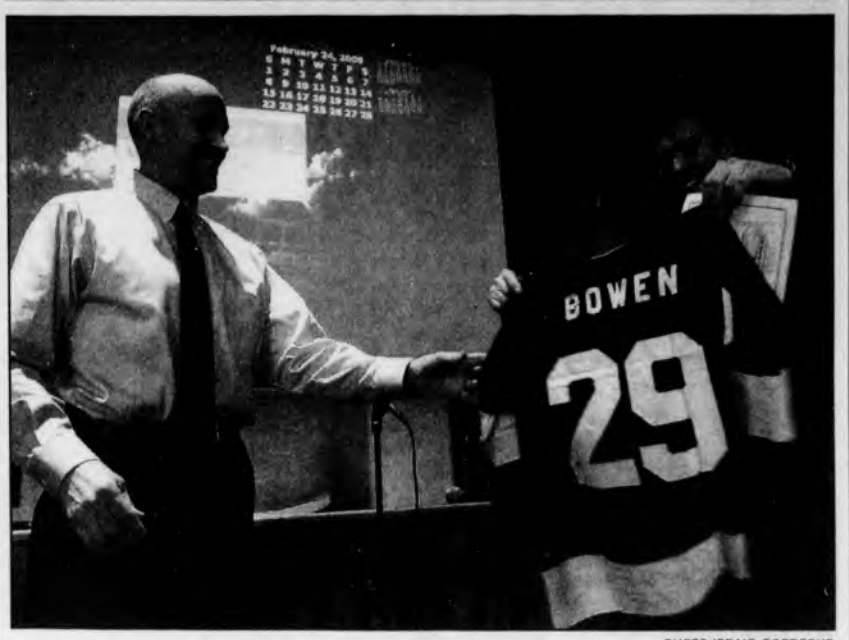
COMMENTARY

TERRY AND MARIE MCCARTHY

...beyond the manganese in our drinking water or health problems that may be caused by drinking our water, is what are our real options for the future?

We moved to Cohasset in 1973. In 1975 we decided this was a nice place to live and bought the house we now live in. We've seen five or six generations of kids grow up on our street. Each generation different from the previous one, but still fun watching them grow up. When we moved here the Board of Selectmen had three members. Then, three was all the town needed. The selectmen did a great job and many of them were hands-on selectmen. That means they did the work of the town themselves. A week or so ago I was reminded of this when I saw Merle Brown sitting on the roof of the glass recycling shed at the RTF replacing shingles. In the 1970s Cohasset had mostly one-year projects facing the town government. That changed somewhere along the way.

When the problems and challenges of the town got more complex and demanded a different approach to solutions we changed from three selectmen to five. The intent was to provide more assistance by increasing the number of people and the management style to deal with multi-year issues like sewers. However, the skills of roofing were no longer the drivers they once could be. The town needed more coordination and continuity for the now common, long-view challenges the town faced. Still, elected officials are one thing but they certainly were not the answer to a greater need for tighter administration over more and larger departments and responsibilities. Add to the actual supervisory aspects the increasing number of state mandates relating to standards and regulations for our utilities and other matters. The answer was a full time Town Manager who had to be a knowledgeable professional. After trial and error we found Bill Griffin who, in our view, has done a very good job.



Clearly the town's government has changed to keep current with the town's needs. This has also been true of the water and sewer departments. However, these two entities are not directly the responsibility of the Town Manager nor the Board of Selectmen. Their management is provided by officials directly elected to their respective boards. Each of these boards utilizes professionals in the implementation of water and sewer policies. For the most part these entities have done very well on the town's behalf. In fact, for the 34 years we've lived in our house we've seen some real accomplishments in the water department and once the sewer issue was resolved this utility has also done well.

However, from our perspective the town has rarely been ahead of the curve on the big issues. We feel that it took longer to resolve the sewer issue than perhaps it should have. We have watched the water department creatively deal with the town's needs and the demands made by state and federal regulation. Today we feel we are at a tipping point regarding the water department. The one thing we are unable to do is make our town physically larger. The small size of the town is a physical and financial barrier to solving some of the issues facing the town. We saw it in past years relative to outsourcing EMTs with a professional ambulance service. On that issue we think the town made the right decision. But the issue of being too small to succeed [the opposite of too big to fail] comes up on a number of issues some relating to school buses, sewer and water issues, bonding requirements and the burden of that debt on the town finances. Most recently the issue has been raised relative to police and fire dispatchers with a discussion of joining with abutting towns in a shared arrangement to keep pace with the demands of each town and at a cost that is more easily absorbed by a fairly small base of payers in the case of Cohasset.

And so as we prepare for a meeting in January sponsored by the Water Department to discuss clean drinking water as well as any health issues that may exist, there is a need to anticipate where we go from here. The question that we have, beyond the manganese in our drinking water or health problems that may be caused by drinking our water, is what are our real options for the future? If our "too small to succeed" theory is valid and if we are facing significant costs to a water system, which may not be able to meet our needs in 20 years, then what are our options? From a three selectmen board to a five selectman board to a five selectman board plus a professional administrator Cohasset has met many challenges. But predicting the size and condition of our water source and its sustainability is probably the next big issue we ought to be facing. We urge everyone in town who shares these concerns to come to the meeting with the Water Department and hear what their plan is for the future.

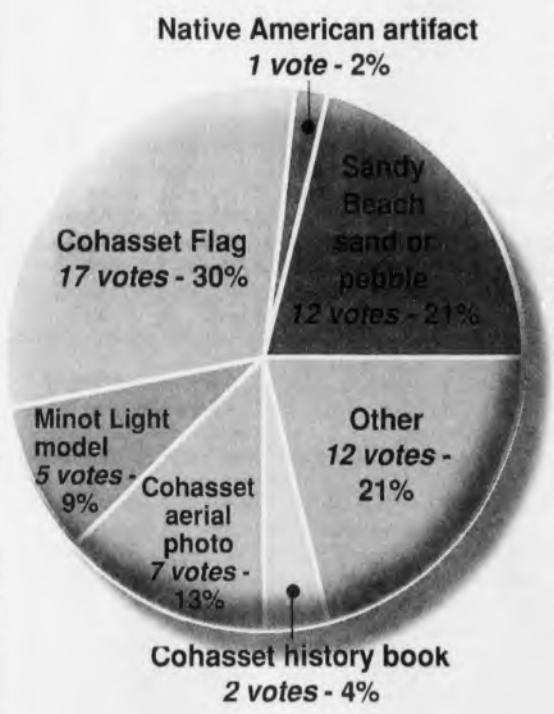
What to send up to space?

Cohasset's hometown astronaut Capt. Steve Bowen is heading to space once again. Selectman Ted Carr said he recently spoke to Bowen, who told him the news. No launch date has been set, but Bowen told Carr he hoped to bring something from the town of Cohasset into space with him.



Carr said he was awaiting details from NASA about the requirements for size and dimension, but hoped the community could be involved somehow.

We thought we'd get a jumpstart and see what creative ideas our readers had. Please go online to www.wickedlocalcohasset.com to take part in the poll, which will be up for another week.

When we made the pie chart on Wednesday, 56 had voted so far.

In addition to your vote, we'd love to hear your comments or other ideas online or via email. There's space to leave your thoughts on the poll feature. You can email comments to Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sohier Street sidewalk needed

TO THE EDITOR

I read with concern your report that the Selectmen consider competing the Sohier Street sidewalk to 3A to be "not desired." For reasons of health and safety, we should have a plan to add sidewalks to every major street in town that doesn't have one.

Even now, without Avalon, there is need for a sidewalk connecting to 3A, just as there is need for one on 3A itself. With Avalon, that need will only increase. Why do the selectmen not desire to address this need?

'Extra Credit' support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Education Foundation would like to thank all who participated in their Teacher Appreciation Program, "Extra Credit," this holiday season to show teachers the appreciation they so richly deserve. Your gifts not only recognized a job well done, but also provided much-needed funds for professional development and classroom grants.

And, a special thank you to the schoolroom parents who, in light of the new state law that places a monetary limit on gifts to school employees, recognized that a gift to the CEF was a perfect way to send holiday greetings.

Labyrinth walk in Cohasset is Jan. 3

Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., hosts a labyrinth walk, which is open to the public, on the first Sunday of every month. The next walk will take place from 7 to 9 p.m., on Sunday, Jan. 3, and is a nice way to begin the New Year.

The labyrinth is a meditative experience in a candlelight environment with soothing musical accompaniment. Since the labyrinth is made of canvas, it is required that it be walked without shoes.

Heimlich maneuver can be a life-saver

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Choking can be caused by introduction of a foreign object into the airway, which becomes lodged in the pharynx, larynx or trachea.

Several procedures you may have heard about would be beneficial to learn that can turn a potential traumatic event and trip to the hospital into a minor incident. These simple procedures, used by laymen and professionals alike, have saved thousands of lives since they were introduced in 1974. Most are related to the accidental interruption of breathing. The events include choking, potential drowning and inhalation of toxic gas such as carbon dioxide. Choking is the mechanical obstruction of the flow of air from the environment into the lungs preventing breathing and any other incidents that obstruct the airway. Relief from these incidents necessitates application of several procedures, all interrelated, which can be learned by laymen. The maneuvers should also be used to expel water from a near-drowning victim, with the victim placed in the prone position and the face turned to one side. Mouth-to-mouth ventilation is not appropriate until the water has been removed by the Heimlich.

Choking can be caused by introduction of a foreign object into the airway, which becomes lodged in the pharynx, larynx or trachea. Foreign objects may also include liquids.

Foreign objects in the airway, often suffered by small children and adults while eating. The victim cannot speak or cry out. If a choking victim can't speak or breathe and needs your help immediately, apply the Heimlich Maneuver. Frequently this simple maneuver requires nothing further and life can go on as if nothing has happened.

- From behind, wrap your arms around the victim's waist.
- Make a fist and place the thumb side of your fist against the victim's upper abdomen, below the ribcage and above the navel.
- Grasp your fist with your other hand and press into the upper abdomen with a quick upward thrust. Do not squeeze the ribcage; confine the force of the thrust to your hands.
- Repeat until object is expelled.

Continue with what ever you were doing. Unlike many other afflictions, the successful Heimlich, if it works, results in no medical after effects and patients can go about their business. If, however, any symptoms appear, such as a sore throat, shortness of breath or dizzy spells, its time to contact a medical professional.

The Heimlich maneuver is safe, effective, easily mastered by the average person and can be performed on standing or seated victims and on persons who have fallen to the floor. It can be performed on children and even on oneself.

Drowning and water or other liquid contaminants in the lungs. Mouth-to-mouth ventilation is a simple procedure not appropriate until the water has been removed from the lungs by the Heimlich. Long after the Heimlich was introduced in 1974, a controversy continued to stir: Apparently for 10 years some agencies continued to advocate backslaps, chest and abdominal thrusts as a cure for choking despite clear evidence that these procedures were harmful and potentially lethal.

Prominent persons who have had choking problems: George W. Bush survived choking on a pretzel on Jan. 13, 2002; Jimmie Foxx, a famous Major League Baseball player, died by choking on a bone; Tennessee Williams, the playwright, died after choking on a bottle cap. An urban legend states that obese singer Mama Cass choked to death on a ham sandwich. Untrue: it was a heart condition. Tony Gonzalez, tight end for the Kansas City Chiefs, saved a man, Ken Hunter, from choking using the Heimlich maneuver. The Queen Mother was admitted to a U.K. hospital for an operation in May 1993 after choking on a fish bone.

Cunning to step down, Palmer to run again

After the Mariner went to press last week, Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer and Sewer Commissioner Sean Cunning got in touch about their expiring terms.

After nine years on the Sewer Commission, Cunning is stepping down from his post. During his tenure the Sewer Commission has seen the long-awaited $15-million Little Harbor sewer expansion project has reached near completion.

"The fact we've been able to increase the capacity of the plant is an accomplishment," Cunning said in a phone interview. "The experience has been rewarding and I've made a lot of contacts over the years."

Cunning said he plans to take a year off from town service, focus on his business (Sullivan, Garrity and Donnelly Insurance on Depot Court), and his family.

Nathaniel Palmer said he intends to seek a third-term on the Water Commission in April.

A few thoughts to remember the fun

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

With the New Year just about here, it's time to look back at the last, and in the name of fun, here are some of the highlights of 2009.

Originally this was going to be a Top-10 list, but looking back, that's too tough to do.

There was just too much happening here.

Start with former athletes heading to the next level. That's where I started, with a story about Maggie McGoldrick, Torey Hart, Sarah Coggins and Sammi Lehr, all member of the girls' soccer team playing at Div. I colleges.

McGoldrick, an All-Scholastic is playing at the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, while Hart is at the University of Rhode Island.

Cohasset's Dan Martin is also at the next level with Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, where he has already been named his league's Rookie-of-the Week twice.

Several more are playing at colleges as well.

The names above were just some of the freshman class.

Coggins, is now at the University of Vermont, and Lehr is in the middle of an excellent freshman season on the basketball court at Colby-Sawyer College in New Hampshire.

The biggest story of the year, though, has to be the new turf field at Alumni Stadium.

This field has become the new face of the school, bringing soccer tournament games to town, while giving teams a home-field advantage.

It isn't just the high school, but youth sports have enjoyed it as well.

official goal on the new field, in case you were wondering.

The fall was actually one of the most successful seasons anywhere, with every team qualifying for post-season play.

For the boys' basketball team, it was a big season, going from an also-ran, into the playoffs for the first time in a long while.

The girls meanwhile, had a title to defend.

They came very close, but fell on a buzzer-beater to Millis in the Div. 3 South Sectional final. Millis went on to win the state title.

The hockey team also made a big splash, qualifying by the skin of their teeth, then beating two higher seeded teams to get to the quarterfinals.

In the spring, the girls' softball team was the big story, winning the Div. 3 South Sectional title.

The girls' tennis team made it as far, losing in the finals, and the boys' lacrosse team got as far as the Div. 3 Semifinals.

In the long run however, 2009 will probably be remembered as the year the turf came town.

For good reason.

A good 'Holiday' for Cohasset girls

The Lady Skippers obliterated Nantucket, 57-21, in the opening round on Monday and then brushed off Sacred Heart, 48-19 in Tuesday's finale. While Hull stomped on Sacred Heart, 61-27 in the opening round, then crushed Nantucket, 60-30 in the second game of the tournament.

Cohasset's Tori Lehr captured MVP honors while teammate Meredith Kelly, Hull's Ashley Condon, Sacred Heart's Tracy Stanton and Nantucket's Brianna Brown were voted to the Holiday Classic All-Star team.

Kelly scored 11 points and pulled down seven rebounds in the opening-round win.

Lehr scored 11 points for Cohasset, and Lindsey Davis scored 10 in the Cohasset Holiday Classic's opening round.

Senior center Julie Manning had 18 points and 8 rebounds, and junior forward Nicole Heavern added 12 points, 8 rebounds, and 5 steals as the Hull (4-0) won in the second round.

It was a good two days for the South Shore League.

-o-o-o-

John Maher, captain of the boys' basketball team, will be out of action for the remainder of the year with a career-ending knee injury according to his coach Bo Ruggiero.

The 6-foot-3-inch, one of two returning starters from last year's tournament-bound 15-5 squad, will have his knee operated on in mid-January.

Maher was injured in the early part of the football season and he was cleared to play sports and fitted with a protective brace.

After a solid pre-season he re-injured his knee on the opening tip of the first game of the year against West Bridgewater. After consultation with an orthopedic specialist it was decided that his season was over and an operation was necessary.

As a junior Maher started every game and averaged 7 points per game and was the team's second leading rebounder after Danny Martin.

"This is a very difficult time in John's young athletic career being unable to play in his senior year after he had worked extremely hard in the off season into making himself a solid basketball player," said Ruggiero.

"He will be sorely missed, not only in the scoring and rebounding column, but the leadership he brought to the team both on and off the floor. He will be difficult to replace"

The 2-1 Skippers will also be without the services of Maher's replacement, 6-foot-3 backup center Will Lynner until Jan 13 at the earliest as a result of a reoccurrence of a shoulder injury from the football season.

"We are hoping Big Will will be back and healthy as soon as he is medically cleared," Ruggiero added.

On Monday the Skippers improved their record to 3-1 with a 60-53 decision over South Shore League foe East Bridgewater. Junior captain Robert Jones scored 19 points to lead the Skippers to victory.

Sean Haggerty added 12 points, and Sam Richardson had 11 points for Cohasset.

Cohasset was scheduled to play Hanover on Wednesday and then play a non-conference game on Sunday at Case High School.

South Coastal Men's Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

It was a tough night for the top-seeds in the three divisions of the South Coastal Men's Hockey League in the Fall season playoffs.

The top seeds in the Masters Div. (Thunder) and the Legends Div. (Sharks) were both eliminated, while the Rangers, who were the top-seed in the Classics Div. had to come up with a great finish to get into the finals.

The Rangers trailed the fourth-seed Red Wings, 2-1 got a tying goal from Marshfield's Joe Craig with just over a minute left and Jim O'Toole scored in the first minute of the overtime to give them the come from behind, 3-2 win. Craig, who had two goals in the game and the Rangers will face the Maple Leafs on Sunday at 7:50 P.M. at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

Eric Schoell and Joe Derrane had scored for the Wings to give them a 2-1 lead.

The Maple Leafs got goals from Dave Evans Mike Maher both of Marshfield and Pembroke's Jim Smith and 19 saves from goalie Andy Pelly of Hanover in their 3-0 shutout win over the Canadiens. It was the fourth straight win for the Leafs over the Canadiens.

The Sharks were upset in the Legends Div. semifinals by the fourth-seeded Whalers in overtime, 5-4 as Paul Flagg scored the game winner.

Richard Spence and Skip Tufts both of Scituate had two goals each for the Whalers, who will face the defending champion Toros in the championship game at 6:40 P.M.

Dennis Crowley of Rockland scored the Stingers goal as their captain and league Hall of Famer Tony Shaw played his final game after long career.

Shaw is retiring from the league.

The Roadrunners got two goals from David DiLoreto and one each Bob Ward, Ted Duggan and Ken Sweezey as they upset the top-seeded Thunder in a 5-2 Masters Div. win. They will play the Grizzlies in the championship game on Sunday at 9 P.M.

Joe McCafferty had a goal and an assist and Joe Bevilacqua gave the Grizzlies a 2-1 lead.

The Aeros' Josh Worrall of Pembroke tied the game with 2:57 left and John McDonough scored the other goal for them.

The two goalies, Mark Dwyer of Marshfield for the Aeros and Joe Burke of the Grizzlies were both outstanding.

Democrats to meet Saturday at library

This Saturday the committee will host Norfolk Country Treasurer, Joe Connolly, to speak about his candidacy for State Secretary Treasurer.

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will hold its monthly meeting on Jan. 2nd at the Paul Pratt Library in the meeting room at 9 a.m. The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee presents forums on a variety of issues as well as opportunities for candidates for Democratic offices to speak.

This Saturday the committee will host Norfolk Country Treasurer, Joe Connolly, to speak about his candidacy for State Secretary Treasurer. Joe was elected Norfolk County Treasurer in 2002. Joe is the Chairman of the Norfolk County Retirement Board. The Norfolk County Retirement Fund has recorded significant profits in 6 of the 7 years Joe has been Treasurer. Prior to his being elected Treasurer of Norfolk County, Joe served on the Weymouth Town Council and prior to that as a Legislative Director to Congressman Joe Moakley.

At its December meeting the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee hosted Steve Grossman, also a Democratic candidate for the office of State Treasurer. The current State Treasurer Tim Cahill is a candidate for Governor in the November 2010 election.

All interested citizens are welcome and encouraged to attend the meeting and listen to our speaker.

January Veterans' Agent visiting hours

The Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services will be at the Paul Pratt Library, Room 2B, as follows:

- Saturday, Jan. 2, from 10 a.m. to noon.
- Monday, Jan. 4, from 6 to 7:45 p.m.
- Wednesday, Jan. 6 from 10 a.m. to noon

Do drop in or call ahead of time if you prefer. Visiting hours are not only for veterans, but also for spouses/surviving spouses and those concerned with aging parents (veterans/spouses) as well as for general advice. If the afore mentioned scheduled does not meet your needs, your veterans' agent will welcome you to meet at a convenient location and time, for example, the library, his home, your home.

Your Veterans' Agent is Joe McElroy and may be contacted at 781-383-0505 or by email @ cohjoe@aol.com.

Cohasset High School yearbooks

Cohasset High School is missing a couple of yearbooks from their collection including 1984, 1998, 2005 and any yearbooks prior to 1954. People who have one and are willing to donate it to the school can call assistant principal Mike Gill at 383-6100.

Also, a woman's CHS class ring has been found, circa 1953.

SSCC Nursery School registration

South Shore Community Center Nursery School offers three levels of programs to meet the needs of children age's three to five.

Applications for the 2010-2011 school year at The South Shore Community Center Nursery School will be available Tuesday, Jan. 4, at the Nursery School and the Community Center offices. All families on the South Shore are eligible to apply. The registration process is based on a lottery system. All applications are due back to the Nursery School Office by Jan. 22, at 3 p.m. Included in the envelope should be a copy of the child's birth certificate and a $100 registration fee. Application envelopes should be clearly marked "Nursery School Registration." The lottery will be drawn the week of Feb. 1st and acceptance letters will be sent via mail the following week. Any child who does not get a placement in the program will have their registration fee returned.

South Shore Community Center Nursery School offers three levels of programs to meet the needs of children age's three to five. The morning programs run from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and the afternoon programs are from 12:30 to 3 p.m. There are many extended day options for children enrolled in our school including lunch bunch, dance, computer and sports. Our youngest program, The Nursery Program is for children who will be three years old by Nov. 1. The Pre-Kindergarten Program is for children who will be four by Nov. 1. We also offer a very special Enrichment Program for those children who have already had two years of school. This program is designed for older fours and fives whom are looking for a challenging year before they enter Kindergarten.

The Nursery School program's goal is to provide a happy, safe environment where children will develop trust and have a positive "school" experience. The children will have the opportunity to recognize their own talents and abilities and they will be encouraged to approach new experiences with a spirit of enthusiasm and self-confidence. We follow the Guidelines for Preschool Learning Experiences created by the Early Childhood Advisory Council to the Massachusetts Board of Education. It is based on the standards set up for the Massachusetts Curriculum Frameworks.

The Nursery School has observation mirrors in each classroom so feel free to stop in any time to see all of the wonderful things that occur in the program. If you have any questions or would like to set up an appointment to meet the director, call Ann Madden at 781-383-0036. The director can also be reached by e-mail at amadden@southshorecommunitycenter.com. The South Shore Community Center Nursery School is licensed by The Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care and is located at 3 N. Main Street in Cohasset Village.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JAN. 11, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) That lower-than-acceptable performance you're getting from others in your group might be the result of miscommunication. If so, correct it before serious problems arise later on.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An unexpected situation could call for a change of plans. If so, you might feel that this is unfair. But it's best to make the needed adjustments now. There'll be time later for rescheduling.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The new year brings opportunities you might want to look into. Some might be more interesting than others. But take time to look at all of them before you make any decisions.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's a good idea to be careful about expenses until you've worked out that pesky financial problem. You might find it advisable to get some solid advice on how to proceed.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Romance looms large over the Leonine aspect. Single Lions looking for love should find Cupid very cooperative. Paired Cats can expect a renewed closeness in their relationships.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Making contact with a former colleague might not be high on your list of priorities. But it could pay off personally as well as professionally. Avoid bringing up any negatives about the past.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A personal relationship could face added stress because of a situation involving someone close to both of you. Be supportive and, above all, try to avoid playing the blame game.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might well find some lingering uncertainties about a decision. If so, take that as a warning that you might not be ready to make that move yet. More study would be in order.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Music is a dominant theme for Sagittarians right now, and it should remind you to make a greater effort to restore some much-needed harmony in that very special relationship.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Although family matters might demand much of the Sea Goat's attention this week, you'll want to try to make time to handle those all-important workplace situations as well.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A recurring unresolved issue might need to be revisited before you can move forward. Consider asking someone familiar with the situation to act as an impartial counselor.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Ignore pressure to make a decision. Keeping your options open is still the wisest course, at least until you're sure you've learned all you need to know about the matter at hand.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're capable of great loyalty to those around you, which is one reason you can count on devotion from friends and family.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Give peace another song?

COMMENTARY

The Rev. Bill Turpie

The music drifted across no man's land and in many places the Brits and French joined in. The shooting stopped and men began to climb out of their trenches and meet each other in the midst of shell craters and bodies.

Can peace break out if given even a slim opportunity? Our president just delivered a major address about his decision to add more troops to the war in Afghanistan. It seemed like he didn't want to do it — and in his Nobel Prize speech he justified escalating the hammer of war to tamp down the threat of terrorists who spawn in the deserts and mountains of Afghanistan and Pakistan. It seemed like what he was proposing was similar to adding oil to the surface of a pond to keep the mosquito population from multiplying. It was an apology and defense at the same time, but it carried little hope. Adding the oil won't destroy the mosquito of war — it will infect us again. Something else is needed.

Our church, New North, has a Christmas Candlelight Service on the Sunday before Christmas. Talented musicians from the church and others from the area play and sing familiar carols. I give a short message that ties in with one of the carols. This year it was musings about "Silent Night," written by an Austrian priest when the organ in his small church broke. His choirmaster composed music for the choir using just a guitar. It caught on and touched a nerve – maybe it was the combination of the simple tune and the expression "heavenly peace." Though it was first sung in German it translated well into English and eventually made it to America.

There are stories of hope attached to this carol — one of them is related to what is known as "The Christmas Truce." It happened in 1914 during the early months of the First World War. Already the war had claimed hundreds of thousands of lives. The truce seems fanciful and impossible. In many cases, German combatants in trenches close to the British and French lines asked for a few hours to celebrate Christmas, exchange a few gifts from home and sing a few carols – a common one was "Silent Night," or "Stille Nacht" in German. The music drifted across no man's land and in many places the Brits and French joined in. The shooting stopped and men began to climb out of their trenches and meet each other in the midst of shell craters and bodies. They fraternized, there were pictures taken of the troops sharing cigarettes, small gifts and smiling back at the camera. Articles appeared in papers in London, Berlin and the United States.

There was a certain amazement — official accounts however, downplay the moment as just an aberration. But in the book "Silent Night" by Stanley Weintraub, there are many firsthand accounts of the extent of the truce and anecdotes of the forces resisting orders to return to the trenches and take up arms again. Was it the haunting melody, the remembrance of what Christians believe was the God-child entering the bloodstream of humanity with a message of love, forgiveness and peace that stilled those guns for a few days in December?

It isn't clear – just as it isn't clear from the accounts of Jesus' birth in the gospels about the exact nature of that moment and just who was there to witness it. But something happened that turned Palestine, a place seen as a backwater of the Roman Empire, into the staging ground for an invasion of change into the life of our species.

Many know about "The Christmas Truce," but few realize how fervent and anxious the orders were from the high commands of both sides to not fraternize and to get back into the filthy trenches to start killing the enemy – with whom they had just enjoyed a cigarette, or a few nips of Scotch. In some places the men defied the orders and the truce extended to the new year. Evidently, many of those soldiers realized they were not made for this – that what they were doing was completely foreign to their real purpose. Yet generals and politicians were telling them to look through their gun sights again and pull their triggers. At first they did, but according to numerous accounts they usually aimed above the heads of their former enemies. Another note of hope. They knew a better way.

Weintraub poses the question about what might have happened if the peace had held – millions of lives would have been spared, perhaps German politics would have stabilized and not given birth to a Hitler and communism might not have spread with a vehemence into Mother Russia.

All fanciful ideas – in reality the Archduke was assassinated in Sarajevo and Germany did invade Belgium. Real political ambitions and evil intentions did ignite and fuel the war.

I know this also sounds fanciful, but today there may be a Taliban fighter, or a potential suicide bomber who reads the Koran and realizes the greater love of the God who Mohammed claims to speak for. There also may be political idealists who believe a greater force in the universe wants us to aim today's guns over the enemies' heads and meet in the no man's land of a magical moment. The hope is for another night that falls silent while something greater overshadows a pregnant teenager in Palestine, and young men in muddy boots in Belgium and France, at the Khyber Pass and in Afghanistan hear a different music.

Fortunately, I don't have to think just in terms of practicality – I'm a preacher of the Word of God and I can revisit the music that was heard in those trenches 95 years ago and envision another moment when the guns fall silent – a night that leads to re-evaluation of our goals, our enemies and our fears. The night is silent and the hope embodied in the carol "Silent Night" is great – we are so much the lesser without it.

Rev. Bill Turpie is pastor of New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham.

Police chief search wraps up

Cohasset's top cop could be named on Monday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The town of Cohasset could have a new police chief as soon as Monday night.

This week four police chief finalists had their final, but first public, interview in front of Town Manager Bill Griffin, his appointed evaluation committee and the Board of Selectmen.

The two-night process featuring two candidates each night covered a wide range of topics related to police work: the regional dispatch center, the state accreditation process, police training, police dog drug searches in the schools, and balancing the opinions of different political groups within the town.

Police Chief James Hussey, who served the town of Cohasset for the last five years, resigned last fall to return to the Boston police force. Cohasset received more than 80 resumes for the position.

If Griffin, who has the power to hire the police chief, announces his choice for police chief on Monday night, the Selectmen then have 15 days to veto the appointment, or they can vote to waive their right to veto.

On Monday and Tuesday nights, the search committee and the members of the Board of Selectmen largely asked all four candidates the same, or similar, questions.

First up on Monday night was Kenneth Walsh, the current police chief for the town of Wenham. A resident of Groveland, Mass. Walsh has ascended through the Wenham ranks over the last two decades to his current position as chief of the nine full-time officer department. He spoke of working in a small community (Wenham is roughly half the size of Cohasset) and his management

New owner for Cohasset Hardware

Pilgrim Bank purchases building

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Leading up to the holidays, residents might have noticed some action at the Cohasset Hardware building. Painters outside, Christmas trees and other festive decorations in the windows, workers moving things around inside and a general sprucing up of the prominent village building.

The reason is the Cohasset Hardware building – after more than two years of dormancy – has a new, but very familiar, owner: Pilgrim Bank.

Frank Campbell, president and CEO of Pilgrim Bank, and the building's longtime co-owner Tina Watson confirmed the sale this week. Rumors had been circulating around town about the hardware store over the last few weeks and Campbell was happy to announce the acquisition.

Campbell said with the bank's growth over the last two years coupled with its commitment to the town of Cohasset and the village the purchase "just made a lot of sense."

Water quality meeting Tuesday

Residents encouraged to bring questions

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Come with questions, leave with answers.

That's the central idea behind next Tuesday's public meeting on the state of Cohasset water quality. The goal of the meeting is to provide a forum for residents and water customers to get information about the town's water system and water quality. Both the Water Commission and the Board of Health will be present.

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

ALZHEIMER'S AND DEMENTIA CARE

The number of individuals in North America who have Alzheimer's disease and related dementia issues is anticipated to approach 20 million in the next 50 years. The best place for a person with memory loss to be is in familiar surroundings. Homecare assistants offer one-on-one care for those who are faced with such challenges. Knowledgeable and compassionate staff members perform numerous necessary tasks, such as maintaining a safe environment, providing mind-stimulating activities and nutritious meals, creating social interaction, and helping their senior clients maintain a regular routine. Many caregivers are specifically trained in the best techniques and approaches for assisting those with Alzheimer's and dementia issues and helping their families.

Caring for a parent or spouse with Alzheimer's is exhausting, both mentally and physically. If you are struggling with caring for an Alzheimer's patient, please call 781-878-2994. Our compassionate and experienced companions have special training in Alzheimer's care and can lighten your burden by taking care of the day-to-day chores like grooming, bathing, shopping, cooking, cleaning, entertainment, and transportation. You deserve some help caring for your loved one. We offer a wide range of service, from 24-hour care to occasional overnight respite care, so you know there will be something that suits your unique needs. Call today to find out more about the services we offer. We are located at 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. People with Alzheimer's need to be active and do things they enjoy.

To you, it's about finding a trusted partner. To us, it's personal.

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Town Meeting, election dates set

Annual Town Meeting will take place on Saturday, March 27 at 9a.m. In light of the fact the following weekend is the Easter holiday, the annual town election be held two weeks later on Saturday, April 10.

Christmas Trees

Christmas trees may be brought to the DPW parking area. All wires and decorations must be removed. Wrapping paper may be placed in the newspaper bin.

Winter guidelines

The Cohasset D.P.W. reminds residents that a sand and salt mixture will be available in the upper corner of the town parking lot.

When snow is in the forecast, residents are asked to not park on streets plowed by the town to expedite snow removal. Vehicles that obstruct snow removal operations will be towed at the owner's expense. Residents and contractors are reminded not to move snow, ice or water onto roadways that may impede traffic.

The town is not responsible for damage to mailboxes, driveway aprons, walkways, stonewalls, grassed areas, shrubs, trees or fences that fall within the town layout.

Cohasset High School yearbooks

Cohasset High School is missing a couple of yearbooks from their collection including 1984, 1998, 2005 and any yearbooks prior to 1954. People who have one and are willing to donate it to the school can call assistant principal Mike Gill at 383-6100.

Also, a woman's CHS class ring has been found, circa 1953.

Snow comes around again

New Year's storm strains snow and ice budget

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Finance Director Mike Buckley said between the two storms $59,000 has been paid out to sub-contractors and employees for snow-related work. He expects another $25,000 in storm-related bills.

It's barely three weeks into winter and already New England and Cohasset have been hit by two major snowstorms. About a foot of snow was dumped on Cohasset and the surrounding area over New Year's weekend.

With still plenty of winter to go, the town and Department of Public Works supervisor Carl Sestito are keeping a close eye on the snow and ice budget.

While not finished tabulating the cost of the latest round of snow, Sestito expects most, if not all, the allocated $100,000 snow and ice budget to be used up.

Finance Director Mike Buckley said between the two storms $59,000 has been paid out to sub-contractors and employees for snow-related work. He expects another $25,000 in storm-related bills. That leaves about $15,000 left in the snow and ice budget to tackle the remainder of winter's wrath. Last year $279,000 was spent in snow and ice line item; snow and ice is one of the only town budget line items that can run a deficit.

Crews were out sanding, salting and plowing beginning on New Year's Eve and continuing until New Year's Day evening.

"Everything is just a blur at this point," Sestito said this week.

Crews got a bit of a break when the falling white stuff took a hiatus on Saturday night. Sestito said he sent everyone home around 10p.m. on Saturday and asked them to return at 5a.m. Sunday to hit the streets again.

"There are only so many hours you can work before accidents start happening," Sestito said, adding he was keeping a close eye on the salt shed through the first part of the weekend. About 300 tons of salt were in the salt shed on Thursday evening before the snowstorm, by Friday morning it was almost empty.

Luckily, another shipment of sand and salt arrived in time for the second part of the storm.

"We got enough to hold us over; it gave us a little insurance," Sestito said.

There are about 40 miles of accepted roads in town and over 11 miles of private ways that the DPW is charged with having the responsibility to keep safe for passage for emergency vehicles and residents.

Clean up in the village was done, Sestito said, but they tried to remove the snow from critical locations, rather than a complete removal.

"Everything is by the seat of your pants – you don't know about your (sand and salt) supply, the length of the storm, it is minute by minute," Sestito said.

Many residents are already shovel-weary as the spacing of this most recent storm had many out there in the driveway donning gloves and hats at several points over the New Year's weekend. However, it was not all back-breaking work, many took advantage of the fluffy white stuff to go sledding, make a snowman or have a friendly snowball fight.

The remnants of the major snowstorm that hit the region before Christmas had barely been washed away by rain when the second round of storms took aim at New England. Two storms occurred back-to-back over the New Year's holiday, dropping several inches of snow each time. Due to whipping winds, some drifts were much higher and some lower than that.

Parts of Cohasset got an extra obstacle when the storm was accompanied by a high, full moon tides.

There was a flooding in two areas on Friday and Saturday, but nothing atypical for our seaside town, Sestito said. The full moon and coinciding high tides brought water on to Jerusalem Road near Bow Street and at the intersection of Margin Street and Atlantic Avenue. The police department placed cones in the area and traffic was detoured around until the water receded.

POLICE BEAT

Snow causes slipping and sliding

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The motorist made a right into the Gulf Station to get a coffee and hit black ice causing the Buick to skid into a light pole inside the parking lot.

The afternoon snowstorm on New Year's Eve was the cause of a succession of car accidents.

• At 1:19 p.m., a 2007 Toyota pickup, operated by a 20-year-old Hull woman, was going too fast for the conditions and skidded off Forest Avenue into a front yard. There was no damage to the yard or the truck; she needed a wrecker to help pull the truck out, police said.

• At 2:40 p.m., a 1996 Ford Bronco, operated by a 19-year-old Cohasset woman, made a right from Route 3A (headed north) onto lower King Street. After making the turn the Bronco skidded into a guardrail. There was minor damage to the guardrail. The driver was not injured and no tow was needed.

• At 2:40 p.m., a passerby reported a car went off the road at Howe Road and Diab Lane. When police arrived the vehicle was gone. There were marks in the snow where the vehicle had been; there was no damage, police said.

• At about 9 p.m., a 1997 Nissan Maxima, driven by a Cohasset teenage male, slipped off the road at Jerusalem Road and Bow Street. There was no damage and the car could be pushed out of the snow, police said.

Black ice

On Tuesday (Dec. 29) at 8:41 a.m. there was a single-car crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a 2003 Buick, operated by a 45-year-old Hull man, was headed south. The motorist made a right into the Gulf Station to get a coffee and hit black ice causing the Buick to skid into a light pole inside the parking lot. The car did not have to be towed and the operator was not injured. The pole had minor damage, police said.

At 11:34 a.m. on Wednesday (Dec. 30) a 1989 large container truck, operated by a 50-year-old Marshfield man, put on the signal to turn right from Route 3A (southbound) into Crocker Lane. To make the turn, the truck had to swing to the left.

The 2009 Mercedes, operated by a 61-year-old Duxbury woman, was behind the truck. She saw the right-hand turn signal and crossed the double yellow line to pass the truck on the left. When she was passing, the truck swung out and hit the Mercedes. Neither vehicle had to be towed and there were no injuries. The Duxbury driver was cited for failure to stay within marked lanes.

Parking tickets

A woman, who works downtown and was working late, complained to police last week about a parking ticket she received. The ticket was for parking overnight during the winter parking ban. Police told her to file an appeal with the Town Manager.

Officers cannot take back a parking ticket and any dispute must go through Town Hall.

In this case, police said they would support the woman's appeal. They ask going forward that employees or businesses let them know if someone is working late.

In Cohasset parking ticket fines are $25, $50 for parking by a fire hydrant, and $100 for a handicap space. Proceeds, minus some administrative costs for the company that processes the tickets, go to the town.

Summonsed

A 37-year-old Braintree woman who only had a Brazilian passport and no driver's license is being summonsed to Quincy District Court for unlicensed operation. At 10:41 a.m. on Monday (Dec. 28), police stopped the 2007 Ford Taurus sedan she was driving for speeding on Black Rock Road. Police said she was traveling 48 in a 30 m.p.h. zone. She had been working in the country over a year, police said.

Bad check

On Monday (Dec. 28) at about 3 p.m. police received a call from Stop & Shop about a 26-year-old Cohasset man attempting to pass a check in someone else's name. The service desk employee, who recognized the man as someone who used to be employed at the supermarket, denied the transaction and called the police. Police said the check was stolen from a 65-year-old Hingham woman and was made out to a person whom the service desk employee knew was not the 26-year-old Cohasset man. Detectives are investigating.

Eggs

A 76-year-old Beach Street homeowner called police at about 9:30 p.m. on Wednesday (Dec. 30) about his house being egged. The eggs damaged a sliding glass door and screen. Police were asking around and going to local stores as part of the investigation. Their first stop was Tedeschi's where the clerk reported two kids had purchased a dozen eggs earlier. Police have reviewed videotapes and have good images of the suspects.

Police do not believe there was a motive and think the vandalism was random.

Hills impassable

Police had a couple of complaints on Dec. 31 about motorists not being able to get up the hill on Sohier Street and the hill on Norfolk Road. Police have direct communication with the DPW that send sanders right away. In these cases the snow was coming down really fast.

Hall of Fame Committee seeks members

The Cohasset High School Athletic Department is looking to start a Hall of Fame. Anyone potentially interested in being involved and/or possibly serving on the Hall of Fame Committee, contact athletic director Ron Ford at 781-383-6103 or rford@cohassetk12.org.

Mother of Three Down to a Size 4 from Size 16!

BEFORE

I was a 47 year old mother of three who didn't realize that I had become extremely overweight. I still felt I was that thin 24 year old but reality hit me hard. My clothes were painfully tight, my feet were killing me and my back was beginning to bother me as well. After I went to see my son at camp I was looking at my pictures and I couldn't believe how bad I looked. I was so ashamed that I had let myself get into this condition. I went to see the podiatrist about my feet and the first thing he told me that if I lost about 40 pounds my feet would feel much better. Forty pounds .... how did I let that happen. So I decided it was time to do something.

I started to inquire at the local gyms to see what they had to offer. After meeting with the staff at Get In Shape I knew this was what I needed. Accountability, small group instruction, nutrition counseling and weigh-ins. Before I started though I needed to shop for workout clothes -I was floored at the size I had to buy .... an extra large. I was at the time wearing a size 16 dress - what did I expect. It took me six months to lose the weight. It came off slow and steady but with the encouragement from the staff and my fellow workout partners I kept at it. At the end of the six months I was a size 8 and down 40 pounds. How awesome is that!

Well now it's been a little over a year and I've lost a few more pounds but I've gone down to a size 4. My body fat has dropped from morbidly obese to an acceptable range! My doctor was thrilled with the weight loss and the drop in my cholesterol. I'm thrilled with my new body. I recently accepted a position at the same Get In Shape where I lost all of my weight to help other women do the same. I love helping others with weight training, nutrition counseling and giving them the encouragement they need to accomplish their goals.

and policing philosophies.

He said when it comes to achieving high morale and mentoring officers young and old, it was partially about getting to know what makes officers tick.

"It is my job to figure out not only what makes someone a good officer, but also what makes them a good person," Walsh said, adding he has found that sending officers to specialty training or assigning officers as liaisons keeps them engaged and fresh on the job.

Walsh said he would be an enthusiastic leader in the formation of the regional dispatch center in Hingham. He said he has been part of the initial discussions for a similar dispatch center in Essex County. However, he said he would not advocate for the closing of a police station overnight.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he hoped to have reached a decision by Monday (Jan. 11) night's Selectmen's meeting.

"I am an advocate of providing the best service we can to the community," Walsh said. He further explained that many factors like the number of overnight walk-ins and liability would go into his decision over what to do with Cohasset police station during the overnight hours once the regional dispatch center is opened. In Wenham, he said, the police station is not manned overnight, but a phone is available to directly link a walk-in to a dispatcher.

Given the significant distance between Walsh's current residence north of Boston, he was asked if he was willing to relocate. Walsh said he was willing to re-locate to the South Shore area for the position and had the full support of his wife and three daughters. His wife was in attendance at the interview.

Second up on Monday night was one of Cohasset's own, Police Sergeant John Conte. Conte is a lifelong resident of Cohasset and has served in the department for 26 years.

In regard to the schools, Conte said he thought the police department has a good memorandum of agreement with the school department and, if chief, he would advocate for an increased police presence in the schools through a full-time school resource officer. However, Conte said he would not advocate for canine drug searches, a recent issue before the School Committee, unless the principal or superintendent said there was a large drug problem.

"The drug problem isn't as bad as everyone thinks it is," Conte said.

During the discussion on the regional dispatch center, Conte said there were many questions that needed to answered from an operational point of view.

"I'm from the old-fashioned way and think someone should be in the (police) station (at all times)," Conte said. "I hope for the town's sake it does work because otherwise we'll miss out on the technology and the personnel," Conte said, later adding if police chief he would "make it work."

About a half a dozen representatives from the Cohasset Police Department were in attendance at Conte's interview.

On Tuesday, Mark DeLuca, who more recently headed up the Duxbury Police Department, was on to start the night. DeLuca has been in law enforcement for 27 years, starting his career in the Metro Dade Police Department in Florida before becoming a Boston cop in 1987. He became the Duxbury Police Chief in 1999 and was at that post for 10 years.

In 2009, DeLuca's Duxbury contract was not renewed. Town Manager Griffin asked DeLuca to provide some explanation.

DeLuca said the situation was blown out of proportion when two out of the three selectmen did not agree with the town manager's decision not to renew DeLuca's contract.

"It shouldn't have been fueled the way it was," DeLuca said. When pressed by Griffin to explain the factors that could have contributed to the non-renewal, he said he honestly didn't know. DeLuca said he never received an evaluation and was never disciplined from the current Duxbury Town Manager.

"My guess is he wanted to put his own individual in there," DeLuca said.

In the remainder of his interview, DeLuca spoke a lot about the need for open communication within a police department and with other town departments.

When it came to mentoring younger and older officers, he said the keys were "an open door policy" and leading by example.

DeLuca fully supported the use of canines in drug searches at the schools, if the kids know ahead of time why the dogs are there.

"Why not use any tool you can to keep drugs out of the school?" DeLuca said. In Duxbury, the police department did several demonstrations with the police canines so the students would understand the dogs' role and purpose for being in the school.

In response to a question about his definition of community policing, DeLuca said only 5 percent of police work is about crime, the other 95 percent is being a part of the community.

When asked about the desire to move to a smaller community and police department, DeLuca said he got the same question when he interviewed for the Duxbury position coming from a Boston Police background – and his answer was still the same.

"In a smaller community a police chief can make a bigger difference," DeLuca said. About 10 of DeLuca's former Duxbury officers were in attendance at the interview.

The last candidate to interview was John Suurhans, the current deputy chief of the Norwell Police Department. He has worked his way through the ranks since starting as a patrolman in the department in 1993.

Local knowledge, community policing and his association with the formation of the regional dispatch center were a few of the areas Suurhans focused on in the interview.

As a manager, Suurhans said he would create a positive atmosphere by establishing an open-door policy, complimenting and recognizing officers who go above and beyond.

"I think it is important for my officers to know when they are being corrected, it is not punitive, it's supportive," Suurhans said. "One of the important things is empowering guys in the decision-making process — empower, not micromanage."

Like the other candidates, Suurhans said he would advocate for an increased presence of the police department throughout the town through whether its an officer in the schools or having an officer drop in on the Senior Center.

Suurhans was part of the regional committee that laid the groundwork for the regional dispatch center. He saw one of the major problems is what to do with the station overnight, explaining he has always been in favor of having a clerk on the desk at all times.

"I think (regional dispatch) is the future, but we just need to work out the kinks," Suurhans said.

At the conclusion of each interview, Griffin said he hoped to have reached a decision by Monday (Jan. 11) night's Selectmen's meeting. He said he would confer with each of the evaluation committee members to get their feelings on the candidates before making his ultimate decision.

"It is the defining building of the village," Campbell said. "Our next phase is to sit down and figure out what to do with the building (but) we know we don't need the whole space."

Campbell, who declined to comment on the purchase price of the building, said the rough draft version of the building's future includes expanded office space for Pilgrim Bank on the second floor and leased space, potentially for retail or another commercial use, on the first floor.

Located at 40 South Main Street at the crossroads of Elm Street and Main Street, the Cohasset Hardware building has been for sale since November 2007. The hardware business, owned and operated by Jim Watson since the 1980s, closed May 1, 2007.

Tina Watson said a "melancholy feeling" accompanied the sale of the building for her and her family.

"It's been in our family forever," Tina Watson said. The Cohasset Hardware building, as it has been referred to for decades, has been in their immediate family since 1964 and their extended family since 1920s. Tina's brother, Jim, spent a good part of his career owning and working at Cohasset Hardware.

"It's great for the town. In the big picture, we know Pilgrim Bank will do right by the building."

— Tina Watson, former owner

"It's great for the town. In the big picture, we know Pilgrim Bank will do right by the building," she said.

Watson has given Pilgrim Bank permission to utilize any of the historic elements of the building. Campbell hopes some of the historic pieces can be incorporated into the interior of the to-be-renovated building. A kerosene pump, an antique safe, scales, and even the "Eastwick Hardware" sign used during the filming of "The Witches of Eastwick" are among the items.

"One of the important aspects of the project is to maintain the historic integrity of the building," Campbell said, adding care will be taken to hire contractors and architects who understand the character of the building, the village, and the town.

A building committee made up of several members of the Pilgrim Bank Board of Directors has been formed to steer the renovation and project.

The current village Pilgrim Bank location was renovated recently and Campbell said he does not envision moving the bank next door to the hardware building.

Although the Watsons had received a variance to create four apartment units on the second and third floors of the building, Campbell said it was "unlikely" those plans would come to fruition.

New issues face wind project

Hearing continued to Jan. 20

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The CCI-Energy wind turbine project blew back into town for official business on Wednesday night.

Eight months to the day after the Planning Board denied the two-turbine special permit application they convened to determine if modifications made to the application now make it comply with the town's zoning bylaws.

The application is back for this further consideration on a remand order from Land Court.

The remand hearing, which is for the "limited purpose" of reviewing the modified elements of the application, covered major ground during the just over two-hour meeting (for history of the project, see sidebar).

The first part of the meeting was devoted to the applicant presenting information on the modifications made to the original application. The applicant's attorney, Kenneth Ingber, led the presentation, which focused on the updated sound study and a setback issue. The second part was devoted to public comment.

The meeting got off to a rocky start when Planning Board chair Al Moore used the gavel to squelch a question from the audience, then read a threatening letter he had received at his home related to the project (see sidebar). However, the remainder of the meeting was largely civil and orderly.

While the Town Hall auditorium was not as packed as it has been at previous public hearings on the project, a strong showing of about 50 people was in attendance.

For the most part, the Planning Board was quiet and listened to both the applicant's extensive presentation and public comment. They asked very few questions over the course of the meeting.

The public hearing was continued to Wednesday, Jan. 20 at 7:30p.m. Moore said the likely format for the next hearing would have the applicant wrap up the loose ends of the application and answer the board's outstanding questions. He said it was likely the hearing would close; the board would deliberate and could take a vote on the special permit application that same night.

Among the key information the planning board will deliberate is an updated and, according to the applicant's attorney Ingber, substantially more conservative sound study.

"We revisited the entire sound study with even more conservative data," Ingber said, explaining "worse than worst conditions" (middle of the night ambient noise values, wind speed and direction where the turbines would make the most noise, etc.) were used for the estimates.

In addition, the sound study also details a shift in location for both proposed wind turbines in an effort to reduce the noise impacts on the surrounding area.

Moore said the likely format for the next hearing would have the applicant wrap up the loose ends of the application and answer the board's outstanding questions.

Ingber said the closest sensitive receptor — the fifth floor of to-be-constructed Avalon apartment complex — registered under the maximum noise level as outlined in the town's wind turbine bylaw.

"The sound study focuses on the worst case scenario, but that's not what you get – it's worst that worse case conditions. What you can expect is actually substantially below that maximum," Ingber said.

John Modzelewski, the town's consulting engineer, said his sound expert found the methodology of the applicant's sound study "reasonable and appropriate." However, he said there were violations of the maximum sound level at the property lines, but not at actual residences, or "sensitive receptors." Modzelewski said in some cases the requirement can be relaxed. That determination would lie with the planning board.

The town's sound engineer agreed with the study's finding that the ambient noise at nearest sensitive receptors would not exceed the bylaw's limitations.

Ingber's description of the sound study's extremely conservative, "worse than worst case" approach drew some criticism and doubt from Sanctuary Pond Road resident Conrad Langenhagen.

"It still is using the wrong data, it still has the wrong absorption, and it still violates the Mass DEP guidelines at the property line," Langenhagen said. He and another speaker said the sound data did not use the data specific to the turbine model intended for the project.

Other aspects of the applicant's modified proposal received criticism from the audience. Several speakers spoke to the inability for the applicant's proposed ice throw/drop safety measures to work. Others advocated for the Planning Board to stick to the letter of the bylaw when it came to noise and setback. Some questioned if the Planning Board even had discretion when the zoning bylaw was clear-cut.

Hingham attorney Adam Brodsky, who represents 13 Cohasset families, questioned if the Planning Board was even able, legally, to reconsider the application for the project. He said he believed none of the five grounds of denial described in the decision were substantially or materially changes to warrant the re-consideration of the application.

Town Counsel Kim Saillant said she and Brodsky were of quite different opinions, "the five reasons for denial contained within decision having nothing to do with this remand hearing."

Setback issue

A new issue, something that was not discovered in the initial project application process, has surfaced in regard to the setbacks with the project. The wind bylaw states there must be "laydown area" equal to the height, including the turbines' blades, and that laydown area must not encroach on a residential area.

Recently it came to the attention of the applicant and the planning board that the Trustees of Reservations' Whitney and Thayer Woods, the adjacent property to the proposed siting for the turbines, is zoned "Residential C District." The land also has the designation of "state/municipal/recreation/conservation," as does the other large swaths of open space in Cohasset, Ingber said.

The laydown area largely falls on property zoned technology/business district, but part of the turbines' laydown area falls on the Whitney and Thayer Woods property.

Ingber argued the Planning Board needed to take into account the whole picture and not read the bylaw "narrowly." He said the residential district designation was the default designation when zoning was developed.

"This location is about as remote a location as there is in Cohasset," Ingber said. "The purpose of the setback is to protect actual residents (and that's) not applicable here."

Lori Langenhagen of Sanctuary Pond Road did not agree with Ingber assessment, "the bylaw is there to protect property, not just the people living there."

Andrew Willard, chairman of the town's Alternative Energy Committee, the drafters of the wind turbine bylaw, said he was surprised to learn of Whitney and Thayer Woods designation as residential zoning.

"Knowing that now we might have written the bylaw differently. Our intent was to protect homes or dwellings where people lived," Willard said.

Additionally, the applicant briefly outlined the possible financial benefits to the town of Cohasset and its residents if the project goes through. Ingber said CCI-Energy is working toward creating a green energy program where Cohasset households can buy the energy created by the turbines for their homes. Ingber also said CCI-Energy is committed to negotiating with the town to provide discounted energy to power town buildings, which could result in a 10 to 20 percent annually saving on energy costs.

The CCI-Energy application and all related files are available for review at the Planning Board Office in Town Hall. The public hearing on the wind turbine project proposal will continue on Wednesday, Jan. 20 at 7:30p.m. For more information, contact the Planning Board office at 781-383-3517.

Project background

The project application, put forth by a private developer, Plymouth-based CCI-Energy, proposes the installation of two 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber. The towers are 462-feet (or 100-meters) in height, including the height of the blades.

The project has been on the planning board docket since September 2008 when the first public hearing on the project was held. The long, contentious process lasted ten more public hearings. In early May, the Planning Board voted 3 to 1 to approve the application. However, the vote was effectively a denial of the application because under state statutes, the application had to be approved by a "super-majority," four members of the five-member board. (Planning Board member Jean Healey took office after the public hearings began and could not vote on the project.)

Planning Board vice chairman Stuart Ivimey was the sole opposing vote. The Planning Board's special permit decision was filed with the Town Clerk on July 9 and CCI-Energy filed its appeal of the decision to Land Court on July 20.

According to Town Counsel Kim Saillant, as part of the appeal proceedings the applicant and the Planning Board engaged in discussion in several executive sessions for dispute resolution. She said during those sessions no promises or agreements were made.

An updated sound impact study was submitted to the town in September. The two parties filed a request for remand in order to review the applicant's modified proposal. Land Court issued a remand order in December which brought the planning board and applicant to Wednesday night's hearing.

The court has set a strict timetable for the Planning Board to adhere to. The first public hearing has to be held within 45 days from the date of the order, and if a second public hearing is necessary it must be opened within 60 days of the order. A written decision on the application is required within 30 days after the close of the public hearing(s).

The remand order states if the board votes to grant the special permit requested in the modified application, the board may conduct additional public hearings on special permit conditions provided the board delivers the special permit, with all conditions, to the Town Clerk for filing no later than April 9, 2010.

Chairman receives 'threatening' letter

As Exhibit A of the strong feelings and contentious nature of the proposed wind turbine project, Planning Board chairman Al Moore said he received a letter of a "threatening" nature at his home leading up to Wednesday's meeting.

Before any new evidence was brought before the board, Moore read the letter for the audience.

The letter, which suggests the chair or other members of the board have financial stake in this project, has been reported to the police.

"Dear Al, We are very concerned that the Chairman of the Planning Board has lost all good judgment and has chosen to overlook all of the negatives of the wind turbine project. All of these negatives are well-known to you, and they should not be dismissed.

"If this Cohasset Planning Board votes unanimously in favor, We will have to conduct a full investigation of all possible motives, including financial motives.

"Please exercise some good judgment, for your own sake."

The letter is signed anonymously and plurally as "your fellow Cohasset residents."

Moore said it was a criminal offense to threaten an elected official and has reported the threat to the police who are investigating. He called the person (or persons) who sent the letter "a gutless weasel."

"This sort of thing will not be tolerated," Moore said before setting down clear guidelines for public comment at the public hearing.

Detective Lt Gregory Lennon said in a phone interview Thursday morning he did not feel the letter rose to the level of a crime.

"We're happy he passed it along," Lennon said and the police are on notice if further threats are received.

A police detail was on hand at the meeting to keep the peace, if necessary.

CPC application deadline Jan. 31

The Cohasset Community Preservation Committee is currently accepting applications for funding projects that one, promote the acquisition, preservation and conservation of historic resources; two, concern with open space acquisition and creation or that protect open space resources from destruction; or three, promote and create affordable housing.

All interested persons or committees should contact Committee Chairman Stuart Ivimey (781) 383-3360 as soon as possible. All applications MUST be submitted by Jan. 31, 2010. Applications submitted on or before the deadline will be considered for funding at the March 27, 2010 Annual Town Meeting. Applications submitted after the deadline must wait until the Fall Special Town Meeting.

Grandmother of 3 Loses 48 Pounds!

BEFORE

I finally came to a point in my life where I knew that I needed to change my life style and to lose weight. On my 74th birthday in September, I decided to investigate this program, "Get-in Shape for Women". Having a place that was designed for small groups was important to me. The staff and clientele are extremely friendly.

My personal trainer has been a wonderful influence on my motivation on learning about exercise, diet, and proper nutrition. She has taught me to make smart quality food choices, and the importance of proper exercises.

I have lost 48 lbs, which is equivalent of 8 1/2 % of my body weight. I have more physical energy now and hope to have many more good results.

Paul Fiori to talk about his new book

Hull Lifesaving Museum presents its First Thursday Lecture Series featuring author Paul Fiori of Cohasset and his book "On Grampus Ledge: The Wreck of the Brig St. John on October 7, 1849."

The event is Thursday, Jan. 14, at 7 pm Admission is: $3 members, $5 nonmembers

Please join the Hull Lifesaving Museum as it welcomes Cohasset resident and author Fiori. For his recent book, Paul extensively researched the Wreck of the Brig St. John, one of the most tragic maritime disasters in South Shore, and New England, history. The wreck of the St. John resulted in the devastating loss of life of more than 100 Irish immigrants on board the ill-fated vessel.

The Hull Lifesaving Museum is located at 1117 Nantasket Avenue, Hull. For more information, please contact Victoria Stevens at 781-925-5433.

Drama Kids intro program

This winter, Drama Kids International through Cohasset Recreation, will offer a special introductory session of their drama program to Cohasset kids. Now in its third year on the South Shore, Drama Kids has taught school year classes as well summer programs in a number of South Shore communities. An introductory session of the program will start Jan. 21 and meet consecutive Thursdays for four weeks.

"By working with the Recreation Department we are hoping to reach a wider group of kids, especially the kids who may not ordinarily be drawn to acting or theater," said Trish McAleer, a South Shore mom and director of Drama Kids South Shore. "Our intro programs are an affordable way to sample our unique program and see how it can benefit their child."

So what makes Drama Kids unique from other children's theater programs? McAleer said, "Most drama programs are 'performance based,' i.e. kids memorize and recite lines for a part in a specific play. The Drama Kids program is 'process oriented,' meaning that while Drama Kids students do learn to act and perform, the goal is really to enhance verbal skills. Drama is used as a tool to teach children to speak out clearly. Our curriculum utilizes speech and voice exercises to develop verbal abilities. We also use mini-scripts and one scene plays to allow kids to practice these skills in a supportive environment."

McAleer said this translates to skills that students can take back to school. "The skills developed in out program help enormously in basic school activities, such as giving a report to the class, reading aloud in a group setting or participating in classroom discussions. I think you could define a 'quality after-school enrichment program' as one that maximizes what is taught during regular school hours, yet is so enjoyable that children don't even realize they're learning. Drama Kids fits that perfectly."

For more information on Drama Kids, go to the website at www.dramakids.com/ma2 or call 781 749 4911.

NEW YEAR

Hi Cohasset. I hope that everyone has had a wonderful start to 2010 and are looking ahead to a great year. I know that I am and although at times, things will be difficult but for the most part, the year should be great. Keep sending in all your news, event information, celebrations and births so that we can all enjoy and embrace the positives in all of our lives. On with 2010, HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL!

NDA SCHOLAR

Congratulations are being sent out to Courtney Culhane, a senior at Notre Dame Academy and a Cohasset resident who achieved the President's List last quarter, which is the highest honor roll level. Courtney has an A average in her courses which include all AP and Honors level classes. Nice work Courtney!

CONCERT SUNDAY

The Second Congregational Church of Cohasset was forced to postpone their Holiday Festival Choral Concert originally scheduled for Dec. 20th due to snow. It has been rescheduled for this Sunday, Jan. 10th at 10 a.m. at SCC, 43 Highland Ave., on the common. The concert is free and everyone is welcome. It will be a wonderful event performed by the expanded Second Congregational Church Adult and Children's choirs, and featuring professional guest soloists and orchestra accompaniment all conducted by SCC Choral Director, Joel Buford of Watertown. Music will include excerpts from Handel's Messiah, as well as some lighter seasonal works including Gustav Holst's, "In the Bleak Midwinter" and "Let There Be Peace on Earth", a special arrangement by Mark Hayes. The concert/service begins at 10:00 a.m. and lasts for approximately one hour. There will be a coffee hour reception after the event. This is a wonderful family event to enjoy together!

APPRECIATED

The Cohasset Paul Pratt Library and Sharon Moody would like to take the time to publicly thank Mr. Robert E. Gibbons for his generous donation to the books to Tanzania project that Mrs. Moody is working on with her former student Christen Reardon. Christen is at the Loyola High School in Tanzania, East Africa. This is a true story of giving and again, shows true spirit and meaning of life. Thank you to all for your hard work and donations.

OUR WORLD

Hey Cohasset. A note is being sent out to all of the families and friends of the Our World Children's Museum that for the New Year, the resolution has been made to clean, organize and get ready for a wonderful 2010! Due to this exciting process, the Museum will be closed to the public from Jan. 10 and will re-open on Tuesday, Jan. 19th. Apologies are being sent to all families and friends for this inconvenience but the results will be worth it and a kick off to 2010 will start with a clean and refreshed state. A Wintertime Exploration Session will take place for ages 18 months-Age 6 starting on Jan. 19th with programs from 9:30-1:45, Tuesday-Fridays and more information can be obtained by going to www.ourworldcgdm.org or by calling 781-383-3198. You may also send an email to info@ourworldcgdm.org

LOCAL AUTHOR

Here is an evening of interest for many to attend. Cohasset author David Hosp has been busy on his daily commute through the Boston Harbor Islands. Along with his morning beverage he has been busily penning his fourth book, "Among Thieves." The story creatively imagines the identity of the robbers and the reason for the daring heist at the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum twenty year ago. Hosp will be at Buttonwood Books & Toys on Wed. Jan. 13, at 7 PM to discuss his most enticing story to date. Refreshments will be served. Please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 with any questions.

~ Our World poised to grow ~

Focus on new programs, fundraising in 2010

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Our World Global Discovery Children's Museum is entering the "decade of growth."

The museum, which is tucked in the rear portion of the library building, has spent the first decade of the 21stcentury establishing itself as a sustainable enterprise.

Now, its directors and staff say, it is at that point and is poised to grow its role in the community.

Mary Larson, co-founder and president of the board of directors for the museum, said the museum has come a long way since its inception.

"We're really here to meet the needs of the community. And it's been a discovery process – in that way our museum's name ("global discovery") is a good one. We're still working toward finding out what the community needs and wants and how we can best utilize this space," Larson said.

In the past year, Our World has expanded its program offerings and attracted more participants from outside the Cohasset footprint, staff said.

The 7,500 square foot two-story museum has three main rooms, each targeted toward different ages and interests. The focus of the museum is on promoting a child's learning of their place in the greater world. A large map hangs on one wall, masks from around the world are hung throughout the museum and the museum is in the process of putting together an exhibit featuring clothes from around the world.

The Children's Global Discovery Museum, Inc. was formally organized in 2001 as a non-profit organization to create educational awareness. Larson and Leah Taylor Roy founded Our World and remain part of its operation to this day. The museum took over its current space, which was a condemned portion of the former Osgood School, and through private fundraising completely renovated it. The cost was nearly $900,000, Larson said.

Holding new additions to Our World are Jean DiGiacomandrea with a demon mask from Cambodia; Mary Larson with an antique Tibetan mask that is 150 years old; Julie Laugelle with an authentic Afghani outfit worn by children for special occasions; and Jen Piepenbrink with an African mask from the Masai Tribe. The Larson family donated the masks.

Later, the Our World raised additional private funds to revamp the playground behind the museum and the library.

A decade after the plans for a museum focused on nurturing a child's imagination and teaching them about their role in the greater world was just a concept, Larson feels the museum has begun to hit its stride and is ready to grow.

As the museum found its niche in the community there were struggles financially, but Larson said that type of financial uncertainty is behind the museum now.

"We're at a crossroads now," Larson said. While the museum is able to support itself ("every bill is paid, everything is owned"), the museum currently relies primarily on dedicated volunteers and there is not enough funding to take the museum to the next level.

"What we can't do right now, due (in part) to the economy, is grow," Larson said. "We've made the museum sustainable, now we are ready to grow. This place has the potential to do so much more."

In 2010, the Our World board of directors and staff are looking to ramp up their fundraising efforts and spread the word about what a great resource Our World is and could be for families and the community at large.

Larson travels extensively and makes a point to seek out children's museums in the places she travels. The Cohasset museum stands up – and in many cases, exceeds – to many similar spaces across the country, she said.

"We've made the museum sustainable, now we are ready to grow. This place has the potential to do so much more."
— Mary Larson, co-founder

"The combination of our world-class exhibits and dedicated spaces for babies, toddlers, and older kids (rivals many museums)," Larson said.

Jen Piepenbrink, the museum's volunteer program director, is working on creating and bringing in new programs to the museum as well as managing the birthday parties.

"Last year especially we saw an increase in participation in our programs," Piepenbrink said. Membership, visitors, and program participants are drawing from across the South Shore, there are a few families from Hanover and Weymouth in addition to strong representative groups from Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate, Hingham and, yes, Cohasset, too.

"It nice to know families are willing to travel to use our space and spend time with us," Piepenbrink said.

On New Year's Eve they held a special event for the kids with a "countdown to noontime" with party hats, noisemakers, apple juice toast and pajamas. More holiday and themed events are in the works.

They plan to bring back the popular summer programs, which they said really took off in 2009. A complete schedule of spring and summer programs will be released following February vacation.

Meanwhile, the newest edition to the team is Jean DiGiacomandrea and she is heading up the fundraising efforts for the coming year and is bursting with ideas for fun events for both adults and kids. She hopes to follow the Our World mission ideas to bring diversity, fun, music, and educational value to the fundraising programs.

"The kids come here with so much energy and imagination, I couldn't imagine being any where else," DiGiacomandrea said. Larson said the museum has a standing annual fundraising goal of $50,000.

Grace Shaughnessy, 3, of Cohasset wears an authentic Afghani outfit that children would wear to major celebrations. It is the inaugural piece for Our World's Children's Clothing Collection that the museum is putting together.

Julie Laugelle, the museum director, has been reaching out to community organizations to help more establish Our World's role. Our World hosts the library's very popular Homework Center every Tuesday night. They work with Girl Scout troops, South Shore Home Learners (an organization to support families who home-school their children), recently hosted a Chamber of Commerce meeting and host the Cohasset-Scituate Newcomers Club monthly party.

"We're not only committed to stay at the level we are at, but also to grow. Our success is largely due to the dedication of our staff," Larson said. "The decade of building (the museum) is behind us, this is the decade of growth."

The primary goals of the New Year are to increase revenue/fundraising to be able to pay the staff (DiGiacomandrea and Piepenbrink are volunteers), maintain and improve the space, and bring in new exhibits.

Larson said it won't take much to tip the scale and get the museum heading in a upward direction.

"We could do so much more if we could have 10 more people come to our fundraising events, 10 more families sign up for memberships, 10 more volunteers – a very small margin could make a very big difference," Larson said.

Because the museum is meant to be an asset for the community, Larson is hoping the community will take part as the museum heads into the New Year. The museum and its staff would welcome input from parents, grandparents, residents – pretty much anyone who has an idea for improved services, new programs or exhibits.

Who should be Citizen of the Year?

See nomination form on this page

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset.

In keeping with an 17-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the means by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored JoAnne Chittick as Citizen of the Year, in recognition of her sharing of her artistic talent coupled with her town service and volunteer efforts for Rosie's Place.

The deadline for nominations for the Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Feb. 5. Please see the nomination form on page 8. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@cnc.com are also welcome.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the Citizen of the Year.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the17th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

• Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset": for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

• Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

• Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

• The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

• Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

• Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

• Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

• former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

• Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

• Arthur Lehr for more than 50 years of volunteer service on worthwhile projects including the Boy Scouts; serving on the Zoning Board of Appeals and as a Registrar of Voters; Clerk of the Works for the DPW garage, Little League Complex, and Mariners Park; serving on the Recycling Committee, as town Civil Defense Director, on Gravel Pit Reuse Committee and more.

• Marjorie Murphy for touching countless lives through her roughly 25 years as school librarian at Deer Hill. With eyes that twinkle and an infectious smile, Mrs. Murphy devoted her life to helping children discover the wonders of reading and the value of a good book.

• John Coe, a WWII veteran, for all his volunteer service at the Senior Center where he helps make the center a warm place where people come and meet friends; for his work quietly behind the scenes helping fellow citizens and his service as the "beloved Town Crier" every year at the Village Fair.

• Marjorie "Margie" Steele, who is the "heart and soul of the Cohasset Food Pantry," for her energy and long-time commitment to the important service, which has helped countless people in need over the years.

• Roger Whitley, a retired architect, former Advisory Committee member, and Paul Pratt Library Trustee, who has spent much time over his 50 years as a Cohasset resident "involved."

• Merle Brown, former selectman (four terms), Conservation Commissioner, involvement with Beechwood Ball Park project, Boy Scouts, recycling, to name a few.

• JoAnne Chittick, artist and volunteer extraordinaire. Chittick has been a volunteer at Rosie's Place for 30 years; 20 of which she has coordinated 50 local cooks who sign up to prepare meatloaf, vegetables or dessert once a month for 10 months a year for the shelter.

State match on downward slide

Meaning less money for Community Preservation Fund

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Community Preservation Coalition, the Department of Revenue expects the base match to be 28 percent next year. The current law allows the match to drop as low as 5 percent.

Over the past few years state financial support of the Community Preservation Act in local communities had been on a downhill slide.

Cohasset has gone from receiving $317,000 from the state to match the local tax surcharge three years ago, which was a dollar for dollar match, to $120,000 this fiscal year, a 35 cents drop on the dollar match.

Legislation is being proposed at the State House that would guarantee Cohasset and all the local communities that have adopted the CPA a 75 percent minimum match from the state.

But, given the financial situation at the state level, local officials and Cohasset's legislative representatives are not hopeful anything with the Community Preservation Act is going to change soon.

"I'm very hopeful the legislation is going forward that could provide a 75 percent match without placing a burden on the taxpayer. However, we understand the legislation has many more hurdles to cross," Stuart Ivimey, chairman of the CPC, said.

In December, the state legislature's Joint Committee on Community Development and Small Business recommended that the full legislature approve Senate Bill 90, "An Act to Sustain Community Preservation." The positive recommendation clears the way for the House Committee on Ways and Means to take up the bill when the Legislature returns from the holiday recess.

The CPA allows communities to assess a property tax surcharge of up to 3 percent, with various local exemptions tailored to community preference. The money raised locallay is then matched by a statewide trust fund derived from $10 to $20 fees assessed on real estate transactions filed at the county registries of deeds.

With the real estate market down and more communities adopting the CPA over the last two years there has been a smaller pot of funding and more communities to split it between.

According to a press release from the Community Preservation Coalition, the Department of Revenue, which administers the CPA matching fund, expects the base match to be 28 percent next year. The current law allows the match to drop as low as 5 percent.

While state Sen. Bob Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley support the CPA, both said it was unlikely the 75 percent match guarantee legislation would get anywhere in these tough economic times.

"It's very difficult now to pass additional mandates when all areas of the budget are being hit," Bradley said in a phone interview.

"As long as the state is in this kind of financial instability, I don't see anything changing (for the CPA match), adding his priority right now is to keep local aid and school aid strong. "I don't see this legislation seeing the light of day anytime soon."

Hedlund is looking to amend the CPA in a different way to aid communities. He has filed legislation to expand the allowable uses of the community preservation funding. Spurred on particularly by the towns of Weymouth and Marshfield which have existing fields that are in poor shape, but there is no money in the town budget to rehabilitate them, Hedlund would like to see added the rehabilitation of recreational fields and facilities to the allowed used of CPA funds.

Currently, CPA funding can only be used to create recreational fields on open space land purchased by community preservation money.

Looking ahead: Annual Town Meeting

In a phone interview, CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey said the amount of available funds for the upcoming Annual Town Meeting is significantly less than in previous years.

(These numbers assume the fiscal 2011 local CPA tax and a very conservative 15 percent state match, the Department of Revenue expects to allocate an average of 28 percent matching funds for CPA communities. Numbers are approximate.)

In the historic preservation sub-account there is $72,000. In the affordable housing sub-account, there is $154,000. In the open space/recreation sub-account, there is $46,000. And in the discretionary sub-account (which can be used in any of the three CPC categories), there is $489,000.

Over the past three years, the state's CPA match has progressively decreased at a substantial rate. In October 2007, the town received a 100 percent match, or $317,000. In October 2008, the town received a 65 percent match, or $224,000. And in October 2009, Cohasset received a 35 percent, or $120,000.

In preparation for the Annual Town Meeting, the CPC is currently seeking project applications. The deadlines for application submission is Jan. 31 to allow ample time for the CPC to meet with applicants, make an informed recommendation and ensure its recommendations make it to the printed warrant.

"We're going to hold initial hearing on applications in February, then vet the projects at public hearings before the Selectmen and Advisory Committees," Ivimey said.

During the last town meeting cycle (leading up to November's Special Town Meeting), the Advisory Committee and the Selectmen did not hear the details of some of the CPC recommendations until a meeting held an hour before the scheduled Town Meeting.

Early deadline for CPC applications

The Cohasset Community Preservation Committee is currently accepting applications for funding projects that

- promote the acquisition, preservation and conservation of historic resources;
- concern with open space acquisition and creation or that protect open space resources from destruction; or
- promote and create affordable housing.

All interested persons or committees should contact Committee Chairman Stuart Ivimey (781) 383-3360 as soon as possible. All applications MUST be submitted by Jan. 31. Applications submitted on or before the deadline will be considered for funding at the March 27 Annual Town Meeting. Applications submitted after the deadline must wait until the Fall Special Town Meeting.

Support on the South Shore

Adult day program set to start in March

By Benjamin Brown
BBROWN@CNC.COM

South Shore Support Services, a non-profit organization that provides a range of medical programs to residents across the South Shore, has begun planning an adult day health program that will take place in Dutton Hall at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Scituate.

"The need is definitely out there. And it's not only for elders. We'll serve a wide range of people."
Amy Pratt

The program — officially titled the Hamilton Adult Day Program — is set to begin around March, and will run Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., said Amy Pratt, director of development for South Shore Support Services.

While the program will operate in Scituate, it will be open to surrounding towns, including Cohasset, Norwell, Hull and Marshfield.

According to Pratt, the Hamilton program will provide care for seniors and adults who "have a medical need for nursing oversight." But instead of a nurse coming to people's homes, Pratt said South Shore Support Services would provide free transportation for anybody who would like to go to St. Luke's, "though it's not required."

Once at St. Luke's, people who require special medical supervision can participate in a variety of programs. Offerings will include art programs, and Pratt is hoping to get children from the Scituate schools to work with senior citizens, discussing their history and transcribing their stories. The service will also provide a full-time nurse, program director and social worker.

"The need is definitely out there," said Pratt. "And it's not only for elders. We'll serve a wide range of people."

Pratt said people who qualify through Mass Health will be covered, but the program will also have a private pay system for those who do not.

South Shore Support Services would also like to create part-time jobs for students in the pre-vocational program at Scituate High School. The school program, which helps children with developmental disabilities, prepares youths for just this sort of work, Pratt said.

"We want to try to work with them to create some real part-time jobs," said Pratt. "They do all these great things in the pre-voc program, but when they leave the school there isn't really much for them to do."

Pratt said the adult day program has been in the works for about a year, and that South Shore Support Services is now waiting on approval from Mass. Health. According to Pratt, the decision to take the program to St. Luke's was an easy one.

"They are really involved with the community," she said.

When she checked it out, Pratt decided that Dutton Hall was the best solution.

"It's really perfect," she said. "It's got a really big room that can serve as dining area; it has group area; and it's fully accessible."

TESTING THE HEART OF YOUR VEHICLE

When an engine stalls or runs poorly, it may be a good idea to run a compression test. This basic test of an engine's internal health is predicated on the fact that internal combustion engines rely on compression of the fuel/air mixture within the sealed cylinders to ignite and burn completely in order to drive the piston's upward movement. Engines with low/poor compression will run roughly, an indication of worn rings, which is especially likely in a high-mileage vehicle. Low compression may otherwise be caused by burned valves, a blown gasket, worn valve seats, or even a cracked cylinder head or engine block. A compression test will tell if there is a problem, which then must be identified and remedied.

If your car is idling rough or stalling, you should bring it down to ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT for a compression test today. Our ASE-certified technicians will run a thorough check on your engine and make sure that you start 2010 with a safe and reliable car. Even if your car is running fine, you should call 781-925-3200 to schedule some preventive maintenance so that we can prevent things like blown gaskets and burned valves in the future. Visit our shop today at 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: Engine compression can be checked either manually, with a compression gauge, or electronically, with an engine analyzer that measures cranking compression.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Good neighbors

Thank you, Pilgrim Bank.

Pilgrim has purchased the former Cohasset Hardware building.

We are sure we are not alone in the fact that we have missed Cohasset Hardware. The building and business provided the centerpiece for the 1987 film "Witches of Eastwick" when it was transformed into Eastwick Hardware.

Despite the former owners' efforts to first lease and then sell the building, the loss of the hardware store has translated into an empty building for the past 2-1/2 years.

Anytime a downtown area or shopping center loses an "anchor" it can be difficult for other shops and businesses to keep up appearances and attract customers.

Anchors draw people to a shopping area. Vacancies – especially large ones – give the sense of a place in economic trouble or even decline.

Pilgrim Bank has been busy fixing up the former hardware building and current plans include turning the second floor into bank offices and leasing the first floor for retail and commercial use.

This is great news for the Village, the town and the local Chamber of Commerce, all of which have been forward thinking and a positive influence during these tough economic times.

Pilgrim Bank did a fabulous job on their new building on Route 3A by Tedeschi Plaza. The building fits the area and is at the tip of Brewster Road, which is residential.

Back in the early 1990s when Cohasset Savings Bank closed – fear was rampant that the town was losing a bank and perhaps a great building. Hingham Institution for Savings stepped in and refurbished the historic brick building, making it lovelier than ever.

We feel fortunate that these local banks have an architectural flair and community-focus. (We also applaud Rockland Trust for their community support in so many areas).

The Watson family loves Cohasset. Cohasset Hardware was not just a building, but also a way of life. It was a place where people were on a first-name basis. Customers felt at home and comfortable there whether going in to buy a tool or just stopping in to chat.

We should all be excited and grateful that the former hardware building will continue to be held in loving hands.

And I assure you, we'll make up our minds a lot faster this year!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Tons of snow before I sleep'

TO THE EDITOR:

Whose snow this is I think I know,
Their houses are on King street though.
The plows efforts to keep Reeds Corner clear,
12 inches of snow becomes 4 feet in my drive, oh dear.

I give my head a shake,
To see if there is some mistake.
No, I see it is no mirage,
As I shovel out to the garage.

Some men dream of a better day,
I simply wish the plows went the other way.
Just one storm, I wish and pray
The plows would push the snow away.

Rumble rumble tires and chains scrape and hack,
Oh my God. The fleet it is coming back!
Piles of snow, crash back down 4 feet deep, I must remove tons of snow before I sleep, Tons of snow before I sleep.

ps. St. Peter don't call me
Because I can't go.
The casket won't make it over this pile of snow.

Wanted: Skippers sailing program!

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Skippers want a sailing program! This is the opportunity we have been waiting for. And it will cost the school district nothing! Thanks to Sail Nantasket.

Sail Nantasket, a nonprofit foundation dedicated to encouraging the sport of sailing has generously invited us to join their regional sailing team. The rest is up to us. School involvement and community support are essential in establishing a team. Help make this sailing program a reality by supporting our proposal at the next Cohasset School Committee meeting at 7 p.m., on Jan. 20. The committee has graciously agreed to hear our proposal to start a sailing program and to join the Massachusetts Bay League, an organization in Boston that governs the sport and organizes races between high school teams.

Although our initial request was rejected by the school administration, we are hopeful that our presentation and community support will reverse their decision.

Please write to our School Committee members (luciamf@comcast.net; pschubert61@hotmail.com; maccarthy5@aol.com; aslanetz@comcast.net; bigred8487@aol.com) and to the Mariner (mford@cnc.com) to put the wind back in our sails.

Thank you on behalf of all the volunteers who have secured the venue, the boats and organization to establish this program.

Body scanners: false sense of security

COMMENTARY

CHRIS O'GRADY

As everyone has probably heard by now, on Dec. 25, 2009, Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab allegedly brought explosives onto an airplane, and attempted to detonate them, but was subdued by passengers. My first reaction was, "atta' boy passengers." Airplane terrorism isn't going to work anymore. There's only one reason a couple of extremists were able to overcome 3 entire planes full of Americans on 9/11: before 9/11, when a plane was hijacked, the SOP (standard operating procedure) was "stay in your seats." After 3 planes were crashed, that changed, and the fourth plane's passengers crashed it into the ground. I can tell you, if 3 terrorists ever try to take over another plane, they will not succeed.

Now, the biggest crisis right now seems to be that L-3 Communications Holdings Inc. had a bad annual report, so a number of politicians are really pushing for "full-body scanners" in all airports. That was sarcasm. I don't know how much influence L-3 has on Capitol Hill, and (though I'm not discounting that completely) I believe that the push for full-body scanners is based on something much less honorable than payouts: fear. If you live in America, you have to ask yourself this question: are you a coward? Do you value your life more than your freedom? If you answer yes to the second question, then really, this isn't your country. Find another. I've heard the argument: "but it's unobtrusive!" If you've seen the photos of what these scanners do, you'd know that it literally shows you naked. You'd might as well just go in a room and take your clothes off for a security guard, because it's the exact same thing. Where is the dignity here? Where is self-respect? Are you proud to be an American, or are you a little coward who would let people look at you in your underwear, so you can feel a little safer on a plane. Guess what, you aren't safe! You could be struck by lightning, or hit by a car.

The strongest argument I can see, is that people want to protect their children. "No, I'm not a coward, but I'd do anything to keep my kid from getting blown up!" Well think about this. Any second of any day, some guy could walk across the street, pull out a gun and shoot your kid, right there. It's not likely, but neither is getting killed in a terrorist attack. So do your kids a favor. Protect their dignity because their lives aren't safe. Protect their freedom, so they don't have to grow up living in a police state, dreaming of the great America their cowardly parents pissed away.

Proud of overall assistance offered

VETERANS
JOE MCELROY

Suffice it to say that due to unawareness and/or lack of knowledge – it is estimated that veterans receive approximately 30 percent to which they are entitled.

Happy New Year.

As we reflect on the sacrifices that our veterans and their families have made, we should be very proud of the support that Americans have given to help alleviate whatever loss and suffering they have endured.

I would like to give you an overview of that support and invite you to contact me for elaboration. Not all help should be measured in terms of material benefits. There are many individuals and veterans' service organizations "at the ready" when help is needed. I am referring to organizations such as the American Legion (AL), Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW), and many other groups dedicated to helping and honoring service members past and present. For example, today, I was contacted by the mother of a 6-year-old who does not want any birthday presents; rather, the youngster wants donations for Iraq/Afghanistan veterans rather than for himself.

In addition to personal and non-profit organization support; our citizen-legislative-government "support chain" is four tiered: locally (primarily by Town Meeting approval of warrant articles that are managed by the Board of Assessors), the Massachusetts Department of Veterans' Services (MDVS), the Veterans' Administration (VA), and the Department of Defense(DOD). Each of them has excellent websites. As your Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services, I am available to you 24/7/365.

It is impractical to explain veterans' entitlements to you in the necessary detail in this "Veterans Corner." Suffice it to say that due to unawareness and/or lack of knowledge – it is estimated that veterans receive approximately 30 percent to which they are entitled.

Some of the least known/misunderstood/underutilized benefits include:

- Post 9/11 Massachusetts spouses of veterans killed in combat may be exempt from all R.E. taxes for five years (retroactive to FY2003) and for a $2,500 annual lifetime exemption thereafter.
- As a 100 percent service-connected disabled veteran (certified by the VA), Gold Star Parents and un-remarried spouses of certain deceased veterans, you may be eligible for a $2,000 annual State Annuity.
- MDVS provides need-based assistance to include financial, housing, shelter, educational, vocational and outreach (counseling).
- The VA has a little known/used need-based pension plan for qualified veterans and spouses who did not serve a full career (20+ years).
- The VA has an underutilized need-based program called Aid and Attendance (A/A) for qualified veterans and spouses to defray health care and living expenses as the need for assistance becomes more acute.
- Many veterans who have 60 or 70 percent service-connected disability ratings may qualify for 100 percent if the VA certifies them as "unemployable." Special Monthly Compensation (SMC) may be an option when the veterans' health care related costs are catastrophic.
- Recently (1984), Congress enacted two programs Concurrent Retired Disability Pay (CRDP) and Combat Related Special Compensation (CRSC) that qualify eligible retirees for increased disability compensation.
- Surviving spouses may be eligible for Disability and Indemnity Compensation (DIC) if the veteran died because of service-connected causes even decades after he/she was in combat. Unfortunately, for retired spouses there is a Draconian offset placed against their Survivor Benefit Plan (SBP).
- The 20 percent Social Security (SSAN) offset against the SBP has just been phased-out.
- Some benefits are also available to parents and dependents of service members killed during combat.
- The most glaring benefit oversight is the ineligibility of some veterans from enrollment in the VA Health Care System.

Despite some gaps and inequities, you should be proud of the overall assistance veterans are offered.

For more information and help, call Joe McElroy, Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services at 781-383-0505 or cohjoe@aol.com

HEALTH NOTES

The scoop on dog defecation

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

...the Board of Health has received word of a number of complaints about the other end and it's been requested that we provide the 'scoop on poop.'

Another burgeoning issue for the Town, which comes up periodically is dog defecation on public ways; particularly now noticeable in the town center.

Man's Best Friend? At least the front end is. Recently, the Board of Health has received word of a number of complaints about the other end and it's been requested that The Board of Health provide the 'scoop on poop'.

Cohasset's Ordnance relating to defecation of animals on its streets is given below:

Board of Health Regulations - Nuisance Abatement – Dogs

Purpose: To abate the potential health danger in public places of fecal material from dogs.

Applicability: This regulation applies to all persons who own, possess, care for or control a dog while located within the area of the Town of Cohasset.

General:

1.) Any person who owns, possess, cares for or controls a dog shall take every precaution to not permit the dog to defecate on any sidewalk, street, parking lot or any other public place. Further, the above pertains to private property not owned by the above person.

2.) It is the responsibility of any person cited above to promptly remove any fecal matter deposited on a public place or on private property not owned by that person and properly disposed of.

Enforcement: This regulation shall be enforced by the Board of Health and its agent and the Cohasset Animal Control Officer under the provision of M.G.L. Chapter 40, Section 21D.

Fines for Violation: For a first offense, the fine is $25; for a second, $35; and for a third and subsequent offenses, $50.

Exemption: This regulation shall not apply to any dog accompanying any disabled person, who because of his or her disability is unable to comply with these requirements.

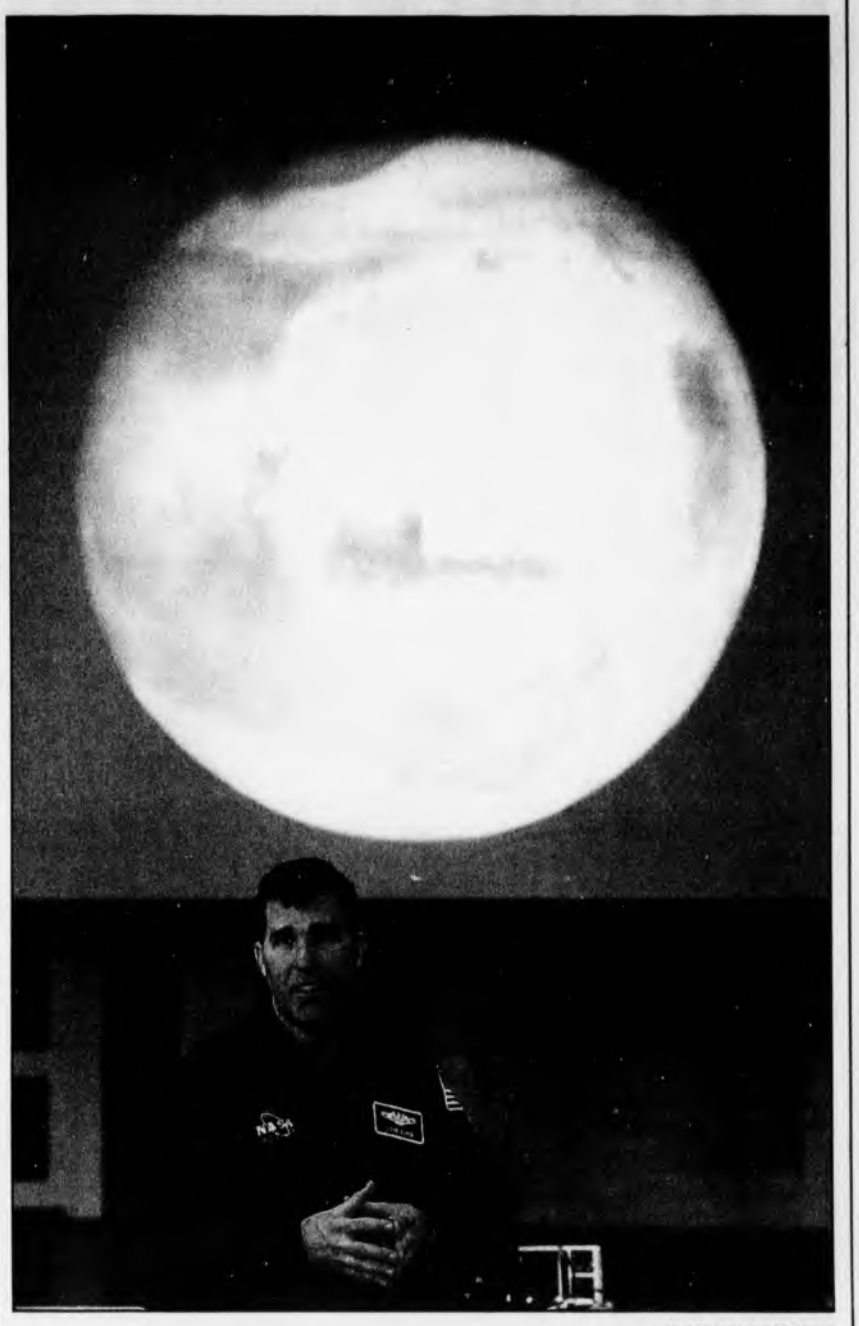
Things we can learn from dogs:

1. Take naps and stretch before rising.
2. Never pretend to be something you're not.
3. When someone is having a bad day, be silent, sit nearby and nuzzle him or her gently.
4. No matter how often you're scolded, don't buy into the guilt thing and pout. Run right back and make friends again.
5. Delight in the simple joys of a long walk.
6. Be loyal.
7. Avoid biting when a simple growl will do.

Give us your opinion if you think things should be handled differently in Cohasset.

For more information call Tara Tradd at 781-383-4116.



Mark your calendar:

FLU CLINIC: Flu Clinic will be held Saturday, Jan. 9 from 10 a.m. until noon or longer if necessary. The Town has both seasonal and H1N1 vaccines available in sufficient supply for everyone requesting it.

WATER QUALITY: At the Middle High School on Tuesday, Jan. 12 at 7 p.m., the Water Department will hold a public forum on manganese in the drinking water supply.

POLL RESULTS

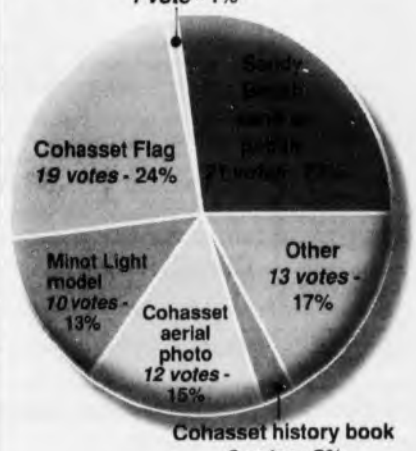
What to send up to space?

Cohasset's hometown astronaut Capt. Steve Bowen is heading to space once again. Selectman Ted Carr said he recently spoke to Bowen, who told him the news. No launch date has been set, but Bowen told Carr he hoped to bring something from the town of Cohasset into space with him.

Carr said he was awaiting details from NASA about the requirements for size and dimension, but hoped the community could be involved somehow.



We thought we'd get a jump-start and see what creative ideas our readers had.

Stay tuned to the Mariner for more polls!

What Cohasset item should head into space?

- Sand or pebble from Sandy Beach: 21 votes
- A Native American artifact: 1 vote
- The Cohasset Flag: 19 votes
- Minot Light model: 10 votes.
- Aerial photograph of Cohasset: 12 votes.
- Cohasset history book: 2 votes
- Other: 13 votes.
- Total votes: 78.

'Other' votes included some interesting ideas:

- 'Cohastronaut' ice cream from Nona's,
- Burgee from Cohasset Sailing Club,
- Cohasset property tax bill.
- The Town's debt.
- One of the original Cohasset flags.
- New Cohasset logo.
- Copy of the Cohasset Mariner.

Veterans to honor fallen comrades tonight

The Iraq/Afgahnistan Veterans of Massachusetts (IAVM) will honor the fallen heroes of Massachusetts at their fundraising event on Friday, Jan. 8, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Sons's of the American Legion, 99 Summer St., Cohasset.

The event will provide an opportunity for local residents to come out and support our Veterans who have made the ultimate sacrifice in the Wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. Working with the Patrick-Murray Administration, the IAVM is currently working to establish the Commonwealth's first official memorial for these Veterans. The event will provide information about the planned Memorial as well as an opportunity for supporters to donate to the cause. More information, or to donate online: www.oifoef.org.

The Mission of the Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of Massachusetts is to advocate for OIF and OEF Veteran and Veteran Family issues at the local, state, and federal level. Working on behalf of Veterans and their families through collaboration, communication, and outreach, the IAVM will monitor and propose legislation that upholds the same values all members of the United States Armed Forces swore to protect.

In the summer of 2008, Governor Patrick asked Secretary Kelley to work on plans for the Commonwealth's official state memorial for the men and women who were Killed in Action (KIA) while serving in Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom. The result was the creation of a task force to begin planning for the memorial brought together by Lieutenant Governor Tim Murray, Chair of the Governors Advisory Council on Veterans' Services. The task force is a working partnership of the Massachusetts Department of Veterans' Services, the Bureau of State Office Buildings, Gold Star Families, and the OIF/OEF Veterans of Massachusetts. This memorial will honor those who paid the ultimate sacrifice in Iraq and Afghanistan since September 11, 2001.

The memorial is modeled after a museum kiosk. A touch screen podium will stand in front of a 50-inch flat screen TV. The podium computer will allow visitors to search for Veterans by city/town and name. Additional slides will be included discussing the history of the wars, explanations of awards, information on the Department of Veterans' Services, and more.

Residents encouraged to bring questions

The meeting, which is open to all, will be held at 7p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 12 at the Cohasset Middle-High School Library.

Concerns over recurring discolored water in many residences as well as related health concerns prompted the public hearing. At meetings with the Water Commission and the Board of Health over the last few months, residents have voiced concerns over the levels of total trihalomethanes (TTHMs), a potential carcinogen, in the water as well as the manganese in the water, which is the primary cause of discoloration in the system.

Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt said he expects the meeting to be "hugely informative."

"We want to make sure that the townspeople – and the especially our customers – know our water quality meets all state and federal standards. And that we are striving to do even better," Pratt said in a phone interview.

The meeting will open with a 20-minute joint presentation by the Water Commission and Board of Health. However, the majority of the meeting will be devoted to questions from the audience.

Pratt said an assembly of knowledgeable people would be on hand to field those questions. Those slated to be there include town officials, including the water commissioners and the members of the Board of Health, as well as get technical expertise from water department employees. Pratt said the department's environmental engineer, water quality engineer and plant supervisor will be in attendance. Representatives from the state Department of Public Health and Department of Environmental Protection will also be in attendance to answer questions from their perspectives.

"There shouldn't be a question that can't be clearly answered for people by one of the knowledgeable sources."

— Glenn Pratt, Water Commission

"There shouldn't be a question that can't be clearly answered for people by one of the knowledgeable sources," Pratt said.

Peggy Chapman, chairman of the Board of Health, said her board intends to be "commenters, supporters and listeners" at the meeting. The Board of Health has heard from many concerned residents over the water quality and related health issues.

The PowerPoint presentation will include a long view of where the water department has been, beginning with the water crisis of 1994, what improvements have been made to the system over the last 15 years, and what is still needed to be done.

"We want to bring people through the sequence of events and provide a full explanation of what the issues are. And we hope to bring what we believe the solutions are to those issues," Pratt said.

Pratt said in the very near term Cohasset is looking at spending money to improve water quality. Two articles are being brought forward to March's Annual Town Meeting. The first is a multi-million dollar retrofit to the water treatment plant. The second is a request for a rate increase.

In addition to walking away with more information Pratt would like residents to leave the meeting with an understanding that the Water Commission has been working on the issues and concerns of the residents and realize a lot of work has been done to improve the water system.

"The more people who come the better that means word has been passed around and information isn't bad," Pratt said.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Carlson enumerates pressing issues

Paul E. Carlson of 18 Old Coach Road has announced his candidacy for re-election to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen.

"I am grateful that three years ago Cohasset's voters gave me the opportunity to represent them and their families on the issues that come before the town. Now, I am asking them for another term," said Carlson.

"My educational and professional experiences assisted me in serving the town during the past three years and will support me in making important contributions to our town going forward."

Carlson believes that "our town's major challenge will be adapting to slowing growth in local revenues, reduced federal and state aid, and growing unfunded mandates. We need a balanced and thoughtful blend of controlled spending and creative approaches to town finances. When so many of our fellow citizens are facing financial hardships, higher tax rates must be a last resort."

"The town's pressing budgetary issues include:

- supporting our high quality town services – schools, public safety, public works, senior assistance, library and administration,
- controlling health and pension costs, adequately funding the maintenance of our buildings and infrastructure,
- managing storm water and drainage problems,
- funding necessary capital expenditures, and
- meeting affordable housing mandates."

"When so many of our fellow citizens are facing financial hardships, higher tax rates must be a last resort."

— Selectman Paul Carlson

Carlson, a Chartered Financial Analyst with an MBA from Columbia University, had a 30-year career in mutual fund management, rising to senior positions with major Boston firms. He then spent eleven years as a resident advisor on financial markets in several former Soviet bloc countries, including Romania, Bulgaria, and Ukraine.

"As a retired professional, I have the time as well as the financial, business and managerial experience to devote to town challenges. Now, I also have three years experience in town government preserving and protecting the quality of life we enjoy in our town," said Carlson.

How to run for local office workshop

The League of Women Voters of Hingham will present "How to Run for Local Public Office" at 2 p.m., on Sunday, Jan. 24, in the Whiton Room of Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St.

The forum is open to the public and will feature a panel of local officials, elected and appointed, who will summarize their personal motivations and experiences, and then answer questions from the audience regarding the process of running for public office, from obtaining signatures to holding signs on election day. This event is relevant for anyone contemplating involvement in public service.

There is no fee, but space is limited so make reservations by emailing Kathleen Nugent at votereducation@hingham.ma.lwvnet.org.

The following information may be useful to you if you want additional information on local senators' 2009 per diems that are included in this week's report. Per diems are paid by the state to legislators for mileage, meals and lodging.

1. The amount of the per diem for senators varies and is based on the city or town in which the senator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. To find the amount allowed based on specific cities and towns, refer to paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 at the following Massachusetts General Laws link: http://www.state.ma.us/legis/laws/mgl/3%2D9b.htm

2. This week's BHRC report includes the 2009 total of per diems through December 31 filed by senators with the state treasurer's office. If you would like to receive a weekly breakdown that shows how many days a senator who filed for per diems certified that he or she was at the Statehouse each week during 2009, you should file a FOIA (Freedom of Information Act) request by sending an e-mail to Mary Wilkins at the state treasurer's office - mwilkins@tre.state.ma.us

The e-mail should include your name, your mailing address, your e-mail address, your telephone number and your fax number. Also, specify that you want the weekly per diem information for 2009 and be sure to list the specific senators that you want to include. You can also request information from any prior year.

Keep in mind that the information will only indicate the total number of days that the legislator certified that he or she was at the Statehouse each week during 2009. Legislators are not required to list the specific days that they were at the Statehouse.

If you have any questions about the process, contact Mary Wilkins at 617-367-3900 x621.

This week's report follows:

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the official list from the state treasurer's office of the "per diem" travel, meals and lodging reimbursements collected by the 40 state senators in 2009. The list reveals that senators have collected a total of $90,502. Under state law, per diems are paid by the state to senators "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These reimbursements are given to senators above and beyond their regular salaries.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a senator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling these per diems to the current amounts. The payments range from $10 per day for senators who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Senators who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often are the ones who collect the highest total of annual per diems.

Supporters of the per diems argue that the system is fair and note the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. Some opponents say that most other private sector and state workers are not paid additional money for commuting. Others argue that the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous when thousands of workers are losing their jobs and their homes, the state is in the midst of a recession, funding for important programs has been cut and taxes have been raised.

The 2009 statistics indicate that 26 senators have received reimbursements ranging from $410 to $10,530 and 14 senators who have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that senators must meet in order to collect the per diems.

The senator who received the most per diem money in 2009 is freshman Sen. Benjamin Downing (D-Pittsfield) with $10,530. The other recipients in the top five include Sens. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst) $9,000; Michael Knapik (R-Westfield) $8,250; Robert O'Leary (D-Cummaquid) $5,500 and Stephen Brewer (D-Barre) $5,445.

LOCAL SENATORS' PER DIEMS FOR 2009

The dollar figure next to the senator's name represents the total amount of 2009 per diem money that the state has paid the senator through December 31, 2009. The number in parentheses represents the number of days that the senator certified that he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

A total of 14 or 35 percent of the state's 40 senators did not list any days and did not request any per diems. This should not be construed to mean that these 14 senators were never at the Statehouse in 2009. It simply means that they chose not to list the number of days and not to request their per diems.

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote *President rarely votes

Winter concert, a harmonious affair

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

On Dec. 18, the students of Cohasset High School put on their Winter Concert, displaying their considerable musical talent. The concert opened with the High School Concert Band playing "They're Off," a swift march. The wind and brass were supported by the strong, driving percussion. After this, Stephanie Moriarty, the high school band director, spoke about the band's recent activities, such as going "on tour" to Linden Ponds and the Sunrise retirement community and playing for the residents. The band also organized a food drive at the concert as a community service project.

The band continued their set with "Passages," which featured the reeds and low brass. The percussion section provided a street beat for the other sections to build on. The initial theme of the piece had a dark coloring, supported by the low brass. The second theme was lighter and more driving, featuring the flutes and reeds layered on top of each other. The brass featured prominently in the latter half of the piece. The third theme was marked by the beautiful harmonies and smooth tones by the entire band. The piece featured a well-executed saxophone solo by Andrew Burnett. The piece concluded with a return to the first theme and clarinet soli. The next piece was "Night Ride Through Metropolis." It sounded like the theme from either a spy movie, or "Superman." The low saxophone section was prevalent, as were the flutes. The percussion section employed a variety of interesting sound effects, including maracas. They provided a tough, driving rhythm that gave the piece a lot of character. It was an exciting piece that was enjoyable to hear. The final piece for the concert band, "Ukrainian Bell Carol," has an interesting history. The melody was initially created by Mykola Leontovych, a Ukrainian composer, in 1916, though it was based on a traditional Ukrainian folk song. The band performed an arrangement by the Cohasset High School students. The music was excellent, and the audience was also treated to a light show. As the music picked up speed and intensity, so did the lights operated by Gary Ritts. In addition to the concert band, the piece included four students playing guitar, giving the whole performance the air of a rock concert. The audience loved it.

The High School Chorus performed next. They started off with "Furaha!" The song was in Swahili and the title translates as "Joy." It featured Ian Porter on bongos. The harmony was beautiful, flowing over the driving rhythm (courtesy of the bongos). The next piece, "April is in My Mistress' Face," was a madrigal from the 15th century and has been translated from Middle English. It is a song about courtly love and the pain of rejection. The vocal sections were layered and played off each other to create a balanced, free-flowing harmony. The following piece, "Into the Night," told the story of a man getting wood on a winter night. It had gorgeous four-part harmony and expressed an impressive mastery of complicated dynamics. The piece appeared to be in a minor key, giving it a faintly spooky air. The chorus continued their set with the classic "Deck the Halls," sung a cappella. The sopranos were featured, displaying clear, well-pitched tones. "Silent Night," the next piece of the set, is a tradition for the Cohasset High School chorus – not only is it sung every year, but any alumni present are invited up to sing with them, and there were quite a few this year. This was also sung a cappella, and it sounded terrific. It was rewarding to see the alumni singing too. The chorus' final song for the evening was the well-known and much-loved classic "Sleigh Ride." It was the same arrangement used by the Boston Pops. Sound effects were provided by members of the chorus on sleigh bells and whip sound effect. There was a call-and-response section between the girls and the boys, which led to the grand finale of the piece, during which the sopranos hit impressively high notes. The entire set was very well-performed.

The music was excellent, and the audience was also treated to a light show. As the music picked up speed and intensity, so did the lights operated by Gary Ritts.

The final group to perform for the evening was the Jazz Band, who began with "Ja-Da," an easy swing piece. The trumpets were featured nicely, giving the piece a clear, light sound. Solos included Garret Canney on trumpet and Mark Seraikas on tenor saxophone. The piece turned into a swinging jazz number, and ended with a nice lick on the piano. The next piece, "I'm Beginning to See the Light," was a fast-paced jazz number, featuring brass and bass nicely. Soloists were Austin Meyers on bass, Devon Dickson on trombone and Anthony Nahill on alto saxophone. After this came "Groove Merchant," which had an easy, relaxed jazz vibe. It featured the saxophones, than layered the trumpets on top to form a call-and-response section before blending the two parts. There was a saxophone soli in the middle of the piece. The piece was very well-performed and appealed to the audience. The final piece of the evening was "In the Mood," a famous dance hall swing number from the 1930s. The bass provided a driving rhythm and the rest of the instrumental parts were layered on top of it. The intense dynamic shifts gave the piece a lot of character. Soloists were Mark Seraikas on tenor saxophone and Anthony Nahill on alto saxophone. The piece got a huge reception from the crowd.

The whole concert went over very well. Each group clearly worked hard to get the terrific result they did, and the audience appreciated it, if their enthusiastic applause is any indication. The directors where very complimentary; Stephanie Moriarty had this to say: "This group is extremely dedicated and attends extra rehearsals. They have student run sectionals, and I think they're hard work really paid off in this performance." Mr. Marks, head of the choral department, agreed and added, "It was a good night."

CSCR hosts panel of movers, shakers

By Terry MacCormack
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The panel discussion is scheduled for Thursday, Jan. 28 with a snow date of Feb. 4 at 7 p.m., at the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Residence on Government Island. It is open to the public, and residents will be able to pose questions to the panelists.

In an effort to re-examine issues that are critical to Cohasset Harbor, the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) has assembled a panel of the harbor's movers and shakers to discuss issues critical to the status of our town's harbor. A student-run organization that studies watershed issues in Cohasset, CSCR is undertaking this new project in an attempt to increase communication among those professionals involved with the harbor, and to garner new information as to the state of the harbor that will be used for future projects. The panel discussion is scheduled for Thursday, Jan. 28 with a snow date of Feb. 4 at 7 p.m., at the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Residence on Government Island. It is open to the public, and residents will be able to pose questions to the panelists.

This is the first time in CSCR history that such a panel has been assembled. The five-member panel includes the Harbormaster along with representatives from the Mill River Marine Railway, the Cohasset Sailing Club, the Cohasset Yacht Club and the local lobstermen. In recent interviews, all five noted environmental changes and concerns unique to the harbor. In addition, all five noted that they are excited to interface with the public on these issues. Below are profiles of the members of the panel:

• Lorren Gibbons, Harbormaster: Since 2006, Gibbons has been Cohasset's Harbormaster, which means she issues moorings, ensures the safety of local boaters and addresses boating education. As the harbor's self-described "caretaker," she is one of the most visible figures at Government Island and on the water. She says she enjoys being able to work with local boaters and the public. As Harbormaster, Gibbons is an important voice, as one of the few public officials intimately involved with the harbor's day to day activities.

• Frank Carey, Mill River Marine Railway: Carey's job means he restores and repairs boats, yachts and docks and that he is in close and constant contact with the town's fishermen and lobstermen. Over time, Carey has noticed a net increase in the number of boats in the harbor, with more mariners and fishermen, but less sailboats. He has also noted that because of the poor economy, many boats docked in the harbor are smaller than they have been in recent times. Carey says he is excited about the State of the Harbor Initiative.

• Chuck Petersen, Cohasset Sailing Club: As chairman of the Harbor Committee, and as the representative of the Sailing Club, Petersen is intimately involved in the day to day administration of Cohasset Harbor. This, he says, is the most enjoyable aspect of his job. Petersen says that the environmental changes he has seen during his time living and working at Cohasset Harbor have not been drastic. Petersen certainly speaks from experience: he's lived in town since he was a young boy, and has worked with the Sailing Club for a number of years. The biggest challenge the modern harbor faces, says Petersen, is balancing ecological with recreational and commercial interests.

• David Marks, Cohasset Yacht Club: For nearly four decades, Marks has worked at the Yacht Club and loves the people with whom he interacts, as well as the variety that comes with his job. "The job is different every day," he says. "There are always new adventures with Mother Nature and the work at the harbor." Mother Nature is also a topic of concern for Marks; he feels that the harbor's marine life (such as starfish and rockweed) has disappeared over time. Marks feels the harbor is Cohasset's main asset, and that it is "not getting the attention it deserves" from the town and community.

• Paul Figuierido, town lobsterman: A fourth generation lobsterman, Figuierdo has represented his industry on several occasions in the past. There are more than twenty full time lobstermen in Cohasset today, and even more work part time. He says they all have a positive working relationship with the Harbormaster. Figuierido approaches the panel discussion as someone who makes a living from the harbor. Over time, he has seen increased amounts of freshwater in the harbor. This, he says, "makes our job harder." Figuierido certainly brings a unique and important perspective to the discussion.

Residents are encouraged to mark their calendars for Jan. 28. The event is free, though donations to CSCR are encouraged. Refreshments will be served and residents will be able to pose questions to the panel. CSCR is expecting a large turnout because the issues being discussed by the panel are critical to every member of the community.

Dynamic duo

Norwell/Cohasset a perfect balance

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

This winter marks the 10th anniversary of the merging of the Norwell and Cohasset high school gymnastics team. And the Norwell and Cohasset girls started their season this week with unlimited potential, including a number of veteran returnees and a crop of new talent.

Gymnastics

Co-head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni said that 17 girls made the team this year and that the squad pretty much has equal representation from both high schools. Ardizzoni and Nancy Durkin will coach the team this winter.

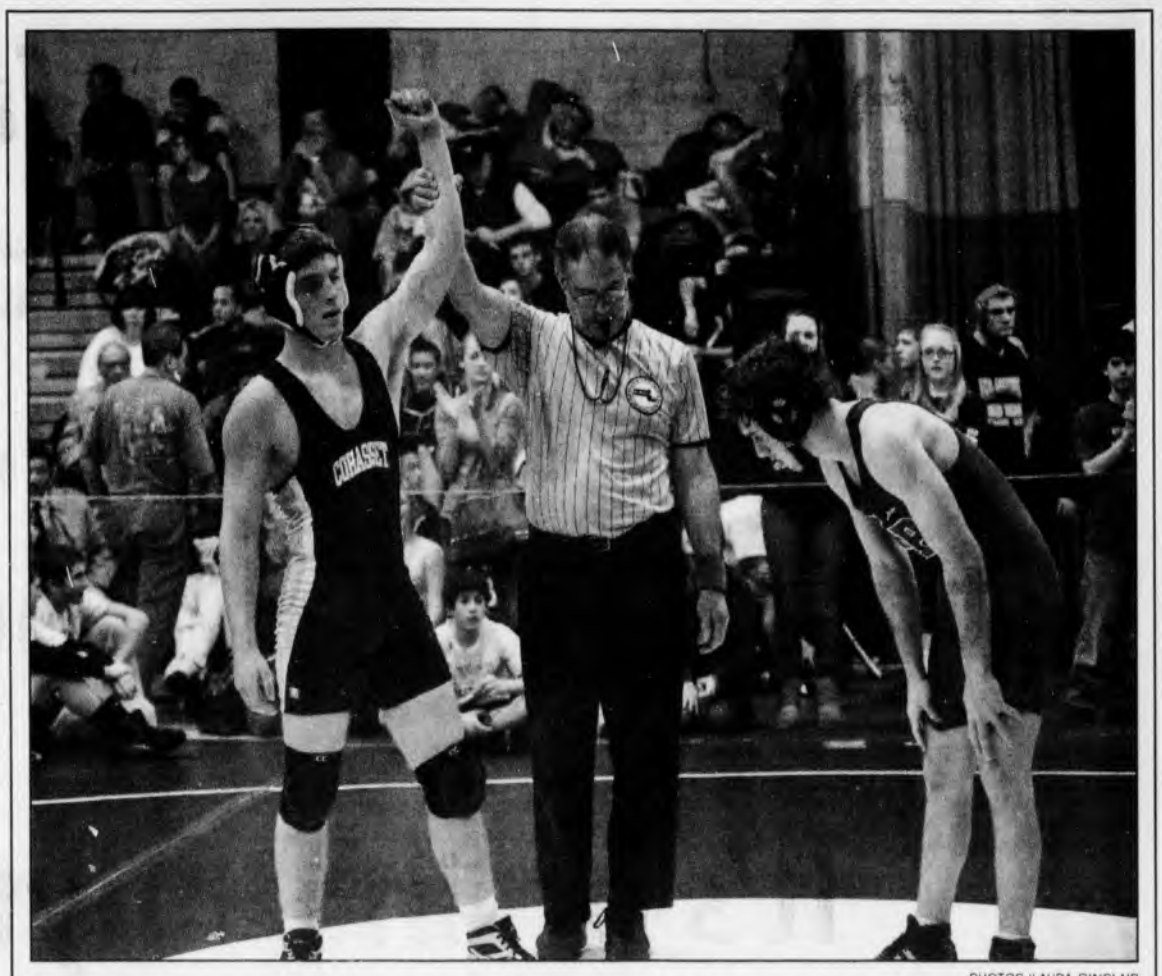
"I'm really excited about the team. Nancy's really excited," Ardizzoni said. "The combination of both of us works really well."

Durkin specializes in dance and choreography, helping out the gymnasts with their floor routine and on the balance beam. Ardizzoni, meanwhile, works with the girls on spotting and on their routines.

"We're going to start by hitting our team goals, and let's push for 120 (points)," Ardizzoni said. "We hope to have a decent season. And if we set personal goals and the girls make those goals, the girls will be excited, and then we can r eet our team goals."

The Norwell/Cohasset gymnastics team will compete in the Cranberry Gymnastics Conference North Division this winter, competing against league opponents Notre Dame Academy (Hingham), Rockland, Marshfield, Brockton, and Bridgewater-Raynham, as well as two combined teams – Silver Lake/Pembroke and Hingham/Scituate. The girls opened the season Tuesday against a Cranberry Gymnastics Conference South Division combined team - Carver/Sacred Heart.

This winter, the Norwell/Cohasset gymnastics team will be captained by Norwell junior Samantha Sprague and Cohasset senior Izzy Ortigoza. Sprague, who is currently hampered by a sprained ankle, competes in the all-around, while Ortigoza is strong on the floor and balance beam. She also competes on the uneven bars.



"They're very talented," Ardizzoni said of her two captains.

In addition to Sprague, Cohasset sophomore Amber Silvia and Norwell freshman Maddie Ward are two others who can compete in the all-around. Teams are only allowed to use two all-around gymnasts during competitions.

Norwell/Cohasset will get a huge boost this year with the return of Cohasset's Betsy Crawford, who competed on the diving team last winter. She is strong on the floor, beam, and bars.

Other gymnasts that should make a significant impact in competitions include Norwell sophomore Abby Smith (floor,

Strong showing

Cohasset had three wrestlers place in the tournament, finishing 16th out of 30 teams with 83 points. Bridgewater-Raynham was the overall team winner, with Plymouth South finishing second and Mansfield third.

Al Gallotta, former coach at Archbishop Williams and Cohasset High School, will be inducted into the Mass. Baseball Coaches Association Hall of Fame on Saturday, Jan. 30. The event will take place at the Double Trees Hotel in Westborough at 6 p.m. Tickets in advance are $35 and may be obtained from Peter Afanasiw, P.O. Box 565, Braint Rock, MA, 02020, 617-645-7775. Tickets at the door are $40. Checks should be made payable to M.B.C.A.

Please be advised that returning players already assigned to Major League teams are still required to register. Please direct any question regarding registration to info@cybsa.net or call Erik Golz at 617-230-2559.

South Coastal Men's Hockey League

Whalers salute Flagg

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The Whalers raised the championship Flag(g) in the Legends Div. of the South Coastal Men's Hockey League this past Sunday in their fall championship game.

Paul Flagg scored the game-winning goal in overtime in the Whalers' 5-4 semifinal win and he came back on Sunday with another game-winning overtime goal to lead his team to a 4-3 win over the defending champion Toros. Flagg became the first player in the South Coastal Hockey League to score overtime game winning goals in the semifinals and finals since Bob Liston did it in 1992 for the Captials.

Steve Concannon of Scituate scored a goal and assisted on three others for the Whalers, who won their second title in the last four seasons.

The Masters Div. also went down to the final buzzer as the Grizzlies won their sixth title with a 3-2 win over the Roadrunners.

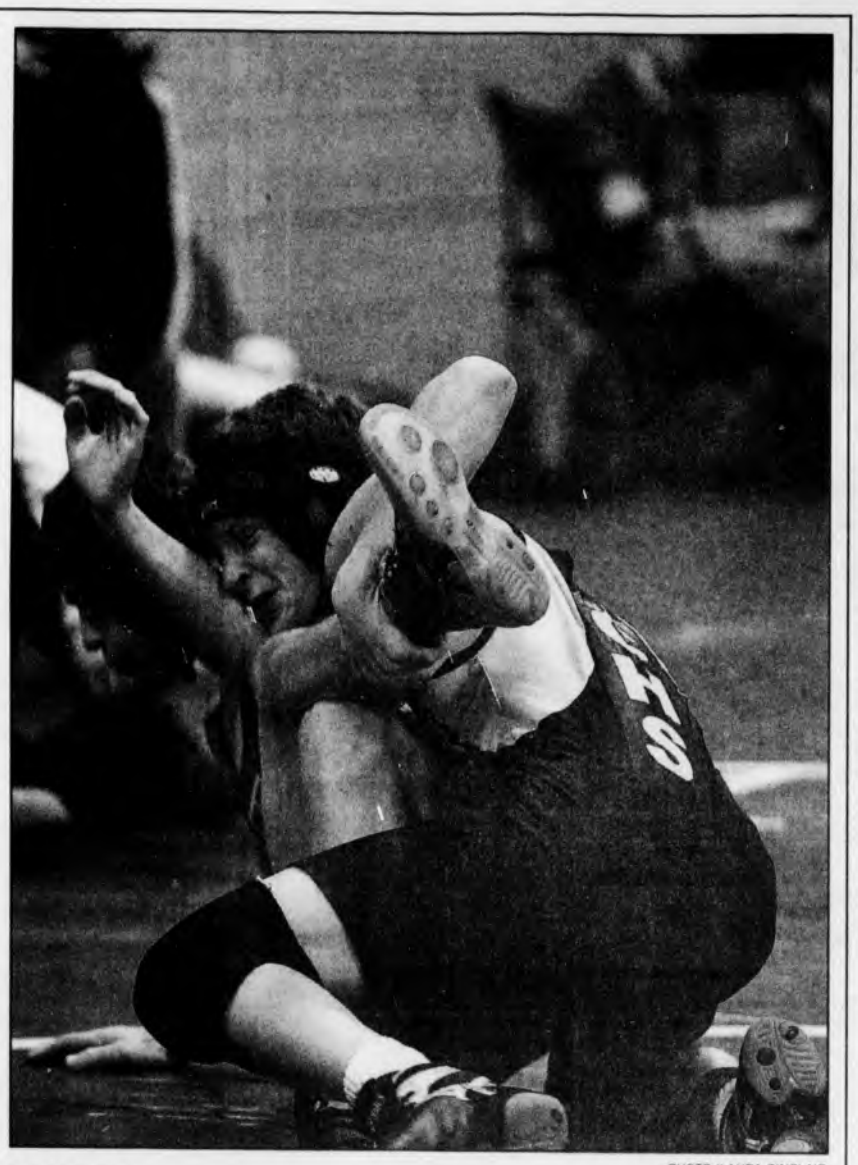
The Grizzlies were able to hold on for the win.

Daron Jacobs of Pembroke scored with 5:35 left in the first period to break a 1-1 tie as the Rangers went on to a 3-1 win over the Maple Leafs to win the Classics Div. title.



Jay Parker of Hanover and Tim Smith of Marshfield were the goal scorers for the Rangers, who had lost the Winter Championship game to the Maple Leafs.

The South Coastal Hockey League will begin its Winter Season on Sunday at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

Tough stretch for NDA hockey

Notre Dame Academy was shut out by St. Mary's Lynn on Tuesday Jan. 5 by a score of 7-0 at Rockland Ice Rink.

St. Mary's Lynn scored three goals in the first, three in the second and added one in the third for the victory.

St. Mary's Lynn outshot Notre Dame Academy by a 45-9 margin.

NDA's record fell to 3-3-0 overall, and remains 1-0-0 in the Catholic Conference.

Austin Prep jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first period and held that lead into the third period before NDA got on the board with an unassisted goal by junior defenseman Bethany Ramsey.

Leong had 22 saves for NDA.

Register for Hot Shots Jan. 9, 16

The next registration sessions for the 2010 Hot Shots Soccer season are Saturday, Jan. 9 and 16 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Ventress Memorial Library in Marshfield center. Registration forms and more information are also available on the Hot Shots Web site (www.hotshotssoc-cer.org). Hot Shots is open to girls from all South Shore communities ages 2-11.

The season begins Sunday, Jan. 17 and runs for 10 Sundays through March 28 with one Sunday (Feb. 28) off. The sessions are held at the Furnace Brook Middle School gym in Marshfield. The fee is $70 and includes a Hot Shots T-shirt and medal. The times: preschool and kindergarten girls (9, 10, 11 and noon); grades one-five (1 p.m.).

"We want everybody to be supportive of each other," Ardizzoni said, "because we're not two different teams. The kids get along really well."

Norwell/Cohasset has a number of freshmen who may make an immediate impact, giving the team added depth.

"We're hoping to get them into competition, that way they'll get more experience," Ardizzoni said.

Tonight (Thursday), Norwell/Cohasset takes on Silver Lake/Pembroke at Silver Lake Middle School in Kingston. Next Wednesday (Jan. 13), Norwell/Cohasset takes on Bridgewater-Raynham at Mass Gymnastics Center in Hingham.

"We kind of have no idea what we're up against," Ardizzoni said. "No one's really started competing (until this week)."

Ain't no stopping Hingham's Cabaret!

Variety show celebrates 48th year

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The show must go on!

Undaunted by two snowstorms the day and evening before, which left slushy streets, damp weather, and a gloomy day in its wake, many enthusiastic Cabaret-lovers turned out for Sunday's Meet the Directors party, where they renewed old friendships and auditioned for solo spots in the upcoming show.

The popular annual Cabaret, now in its 48th year, is still going strong. Proceeds benefit Hingham Community Center. The much-looked-forward-to event offers something for everyone.

The show, titled "Ain't No Stopping Us Now" this year, has long been considered a great way to chase away the wintertime blues. Some performers return year after year, but there is always room for new talent to help carry on the Cabaret tradition.

Jinnie Ryan Walsh, who has served as Cabaret co-general chairman with Lorri Costello for the past several years, greeted the crowd with: "Welcome to the winter wonderland!"

Chuck Vermette of Norwell belts out "Don't Be A Bunny" from the musical Urinetown.

Costello provided a run-down of this year's show – which she predicts will be "phenomenal" — prior to the high-spirited auditions.

This year's Cabaret will feature a high-energy, "funky" opening, Charleston, tap dance, tambourine, twist, and kickline numbers, a "Bye Bye Birdie" tribute, Michael Jackson, 80s, and train song medleys, a hilarious "Let's Get Physical" men's number, and much more. There's never a dull moment!

Costello noted that the show's title has a double meaning this year – "Our National Guard 1058th Transportation Company friends, [based at Hingham Armory, which traditionally hosts the event] will be redeployed to Iraq on Jan. 8," she said. "The theme applies to Cabaret since we are in our 48th year – the show just keeps on going, a wonderful thing – and to the fact that nothing can stop the 1058th unit from doing its job and hopefully coming safely home to us."

Since 2000, Cabaret has been written and directed by an "in-house" creative team. Earlier shows were directed by professional New York production companies and then cast locally, but this latest approach allows for more flexibility and greater expression of local talent, show organizers say.

Show photographer George Loring, decked out in a red and white-striped stocking cap, found time to audition in-between taking photos. As usual, his hilarious performance brought the house down.

This is the first time in 27 years that John Taylor won't be performing in Cabaret, due to a previous business commitment. But that didn't stop him from showing up on Sunday. "Even though I won't be on stage, I still want to be part of the action," Taylor said.

"I'll be helping with the props and behind the scenes. This annual event is all about reuniting with fellow Cabaret folks every year."

Like other longtime Cabaret participants, Taylor misses the presence of the late longtime Cabaret veteran and organizer Don Thompson, who passed on last year. He also played an active role in the Community Center. "You never saw him without a smile on his face," Taylor said. "He made everyone feel comfortable."

A courtyard area and bench were recently added to the front lawn of the Community Center in Thompson's memory. The dedication will take place next spring.

Taylor also remarked about the loyalty and stamina of longtime Cabaret performers – "No matter what the weather, even if there were to be a blizzard, they would still show up."

Thompson's son, Christian, also attended the Meet the Directors gathering. While not a performer, Thompson, who manages the Liberty Grille in downtown Hingham, organizes the Cabaret cast party held at the end of the show's run. "I'm here for the fun," he said with a smile. "This is a wonderful town and a beautiful group of people."

Show dates are Jan. 28, 29, and 30 at the Hingham Armory on Central Street. Patron tickets will be available at the Community Center, 70 South St., Thurs., Jan. 7, from 7 a.m. to noon (the line to buy tickets forms early) and from 7 to 9 p.m. and on Fri., Jan. 8, from 9 a.m. to noon and from 7 to 9 p.m. Tickets go on sale to the general public Jan. 11 at 9 a.m. One patron must be in attendance to purchase tickets for up to two tables. Each table requires a paid patron.

Cabaret supporters may become a patron for $25; an individual HCC member and patron for $35, or a family member and patron for $45. Tickets are $18 on Thursday ($15 for seniors) and $23 for the Friday and Saturday shows. For more information, call the Community Center at 781-749-9786.

Cohasset plungers greet New Year!

See if you recognize any of these hardy souls!

January 1st at noon saw a group of about 10 hardy Cohasset residents and friends plunge into the frigid waters at Sandy Beach to help ring in the New Year.

There were even more spectators who stayed bundled up. Air temperature was around 33 degrees and the water was 46.

Eileen hit the water first and later decided she hadn't had enough so she went for a second dip.

Chris and Al Stefan both body surfed a wave to shore. The group will definitely reconvene Jan. 1, 2011. They hope to see even more like-minded people next year. All are welcome.

GIMME SHELTER

Simon is an 8-month-old jet-black male with beautiful green eyes and the fluffiest tail ever on a short-haired feline.

Simon needs some extra TLC

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue has a special older kitten looking for his "forever home."

Simon is an 8-month-old jet-black male with beautiful green eyes and the fluffiest tail ever on a shorthaired feline. Our expert trapper Kim rescued him and his sister Becky. They were born to a feral mother and because of that need extra TLC. One of our volunteers fostered Becky and we weren't at all surprised when she adopted her.

It takes Simon a while to warm up to humans. Once you gain his trust, he adores the human contact. Please check out his video on www.hsar.org and watch how he reacts to petting. If you're willing to give him a little extra time and effort, I'm certain he'll make a great "forever friend."

We have many cats and yes, even a few kittens awaiting shelter.

Mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull. MA 02045. The actual address is 50 L St., Hull. Telephone number is 877-378-1195, and the website is www.hsar.org. Open hours are 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays, and 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays. For adoption information and appointments only, call Shirl at 781-925-3380. To become a member, call Mary at 781-925-3121; if she's not there, she'll return the call.

La Leche League to meet Jan. 12

Those planning to breastfeed will want the information and encouragement that La Leche League provides. Leaders are experienced breastfeeding mothers, accredited by La Leche League International. Whether one is pregnant or already nursing, LLL has something to offer, including tips and techniques shared by mothers who have enjoyed a successful breastfeeding relationship.

Services include monthly informational meetings, a lending library and 24-hour phone help for breastfeeding problems or questions. All mothers and their babies are welcome.

A new series of meetings will start at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, Jan. 12, at Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset.

For more information, call Christie at 781-740-7808, Kathleen at 781-749-2404 or Heather at 781-544-9230.

Social networking expert featured

"LinkedIn is one of the essential tools to help today's job seeker make new contacts and strengthen ties to former colleagues and stay informed about where jobs are developing."

— Susan Wetzel, "On the Job."

If you are looking for work in today's difficult job market, how can you use social networking tools in your search?

On Monday, Jan. 11, "On the Job," a regional employment support group that meets weekly at New North Church on Lincoln Street in Hingham, will feature a presentation by Larry Carchedi, an expert on "LinkedIn," to help job seekers understand how to use this and other networking tools to find their next position.

"On the Job" meets every Monday from 8:30 to 10 a.m. in the parlor at New North Church, 1 Lincoln St.. The program is free and open to anyone who is looking for their next job.

"LinkedIn is one of the essential tools to help today's job seeker make new contacts and strengthen ties to former colleagues and stay informed about where jobs are developing," said Susan Wetzel, a human resources expert and one of the leaders of "On the Job."

"It is very hard to be in the job market today and not make use of this tool," Wetzel said.

Larry Carchedi is a semiconductor professional with over 20 years of experience in the high tech industry. Currently, he works as a consultant taking on various roles in semiconductor and computer related training, sales and marketing.

Carchedi volunteers his time training people out of work to use the professional media web site LinkedIn to find jobs. He holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Northeastern University and an MBA from Suffolk University.

"On the Job" is led by Susan Wetzel, R.N., Marie Harris, Shirley Rydell and Rev. Bill Turpie, pastor of New North. Jobseekers share ideas and gain support from others during the meeting.

Civil War Camp to meet Jan.13

The camp will help prospective members with the paperwork to determine eligibility. Members do not have to be Scituate residents.

Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War Satuit Camp 3188 will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 13, at Grand Army Hall, 353 Country Way in Scituate.

The Sons of Unions Veterans of the Civil War (SUVCW) is a patriotic and educational organization.

Membership is open to males, ages 14 and older, who are direct descendants of a solider, sailor, or Marine who served during the Civil War. Junior and associate memberships are also available.

The camp will help prospective members with the paperwork to determine eligibility. Members do not have to be Scituate residents.

Grappling with demand for doctors

By Michael Morton
DAILY NEWS STAFF

Before the Senate passed its health care reform bill Christmas Eve, it voted down an amendment that would have created more Medicare-funded residency slots in Massachusetts and in other states hosting teaching hospitals.

Critics say the proposal, co-sponsored by Democratic Bay State senators John Kerry and Paul Kirk, would add to the federal government's bill but fail to address the underlying reasons for a shortage of primary care doctors, instead unnecessarily expanding the ranks of well-filled specialties.

But the Association of American Medical Colleges says the amendment's price – $10 billion to $12 billion over 10 years, a fraction of yearly Medicare spending – is worth it for a program it believes will train the doctors needed to meet the surge in newly insured patients should reform pass.

"We're going to have a really hard time taking care of everyone if we don't produce more doctors," said Dr. Atul Grover, the association's chief advocacy officer.

Even before proposed national health care reform, Grover's association was calling for a 30 percent increase in medical school enrollments by 2015 to meet the demands of a growing population, one needing more care as a large segment enters advanced age.

In Massachusetts, legislators passed a sweeping reform of the state's health care system in 2006, insuring 300,000 more residents but exacerbating a shortage in primary care and some specialities, a trend that continues.

In its latest survey of state doctors, released in September, the Massachusetts Medical Society found shortages of dermatologists, neurologists, urologists, vascular surgeons, OB/GYNs and the internists and family practioners who make up primary care.

The society also discovered that 40 percent of family doctors and 56 percent of internists were not accepting new patients, the highest proportions in the study's eight-year history.

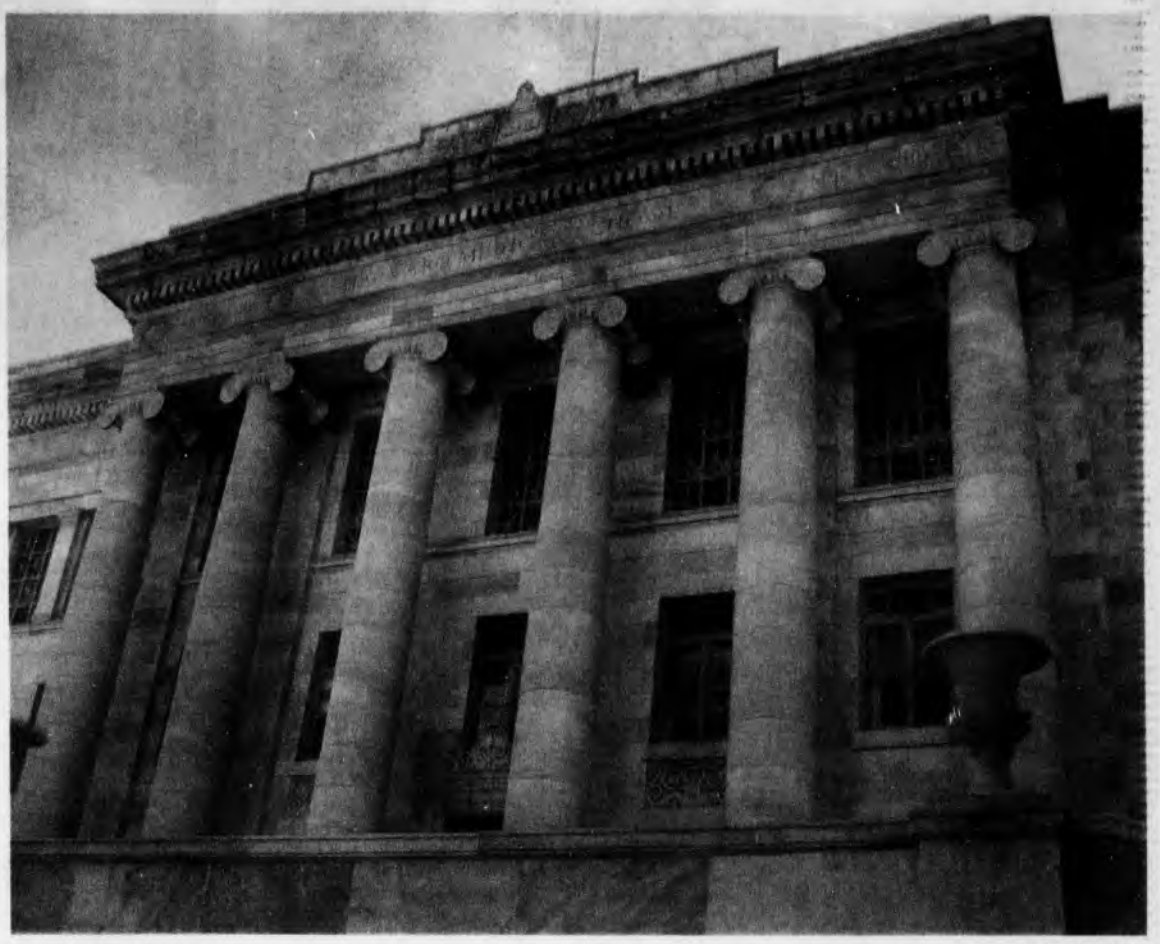
A year before the report, the Legislature passed a bill offering debt relief to students entering underserved specialties and primary care, which frequently involves a heavier work load and lower pay.

"I think the financial incentives have really had an effect," UMass School of Medicine Dean Dr. Terence Flotte said, citing an uptick in students signing on for primary care residencies.

With legislative approval, Flotte's school increased first-year enrollment last year from 100 to 114, then again to 125 this fall. While there are no immediate plans to do so, Flotte said enrollment could be bumped to 150 in the future.

The medical college association found last year that 90 percent of accredited medical schools had expanded enrollment or had plans to do so within five years, despite challenges in finding additional lab and classroom space and clinical training sites.

Locally, Boston University's School of Medicine increased its incoming class 15 percent in 2006, while Tufts University's School of Medicine expanded this fall from 172 new students to 200. Class sizes have held steady, however, at Harvard, the state's fourth medical school.



"We think we need to focus on preparing our graduates for a future in which they will work on solutions to the doctor shortage," medical school spokesman David Cameron said in an e-mail.

In addition to increasing enrollment, both UMass and Tufts have revised their curriculum to give students earlier exposure to primary care and its benefits, such as the satisfaction of following patients through a lifetime of care.

"When you go out to Fitchburg, the primary care doctor is a revered person in town," Flotte said, citing one of UMass' training sites. "It's a different atmosphere and I think that will help them."

While the Senate voted down their proposal, the medical college association still hopes that Senate and House negotiators drafting a final reform bill included the additional slots for residencies, which typically last three years and follow four years of medical school. If not, the association wants it passed as a separate bill.

The proposal, Grover said, would provide one-third of the additional slots to teaching hospitals already paying for extra residencies without federal aid, with incentives for the remaining two-thirds of spaces to go to primary care, general surgery and placements in community health centers.

John Erwin, executive director of the Conference of Boston Teaching Hospitals, said the proposed boost in residency slots would likely spur medical schools to further increase enrollment.

In addition to the residency proposal, Erwin also backs an effort by a state commission to reform how doctors are paid, meaning primary care providers would not have to cycle through a flood of patients to make a decent salary. National reform proposals include similar pilot programs for Medicare.

"This can't happen in a vacuum," Erwin said. "It's going to require a coordinated effort."

CORRECTION:

An article titled "MBA program offers career options," that ran in Gatehouse Media's Focus on Higher Education sections Nov. 15-20, contained incorrect information about the tuition reimbursement program offered to Luther Harvey by his employer, Staples Inc. Staples offers its associates tuition reimbursement for job-related classes and degree programs.

The scholarship amounts vary depending on years of service, but eligible associates can earn up to $2,000 per calendar year, tax free, for courses and related expenses. While Luther Harvey has not participated in the Staples program in the past, he plans to participate in 2010.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JAN. 18, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Use that Arian charm to help make a difficult workplace transition easier for everyone. News about a long-awaited decision can be confusing. Don't jump to conclusions.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Although you might well be tempted to be more extravagant than you should be at this time, I'm betting you'll let your sensible Bovine instinct guide you toward moderation.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) An opportunity for travel could come with some problems regarding travel companions and other matters. So be sure you read all the fine print before you start packing.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Make an effort to complete your usual workplace tasks before volunteering for extra duty. Scrambling to catch up later on could create some resentment among your colleagues.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A financial matter could have you rethinking your current spending plans. You might want to recheck your budget to see where you can cut back on expenses until the situation improves.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) One way to make your case for that promotion you've been hoping for might be to put your planning skills to work in helping to shape up a project that got out of hand. Good luck.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Be careful about "experts" who have no solid business background. Instead, seek advice on enhancing your business prospects from bona fide sources with good success records.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Standing up to support a colleague's viewpoint — even if it's unpopular — can be difficult if you feel outnumbered. But you'll win plaudits for your honesty and courage.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) While progress continues on resolving that recurring problem, you might feel it's taking too long. But these things always need to develop at their own pace. Be patient.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Someone close to you might have a financial problem and seek your advice. If you do decide to get involved, insist on seeing everything that might be relevant to this situation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A personal matter takes an interesting turn. The question is, do you want to follow the new path or take time out to reconsider the change? Think this through before deciding.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Moving into a new career is a big step. Check that offer carefully with someone who has been there, done that, and has the facts you'll need to help you make your decision.

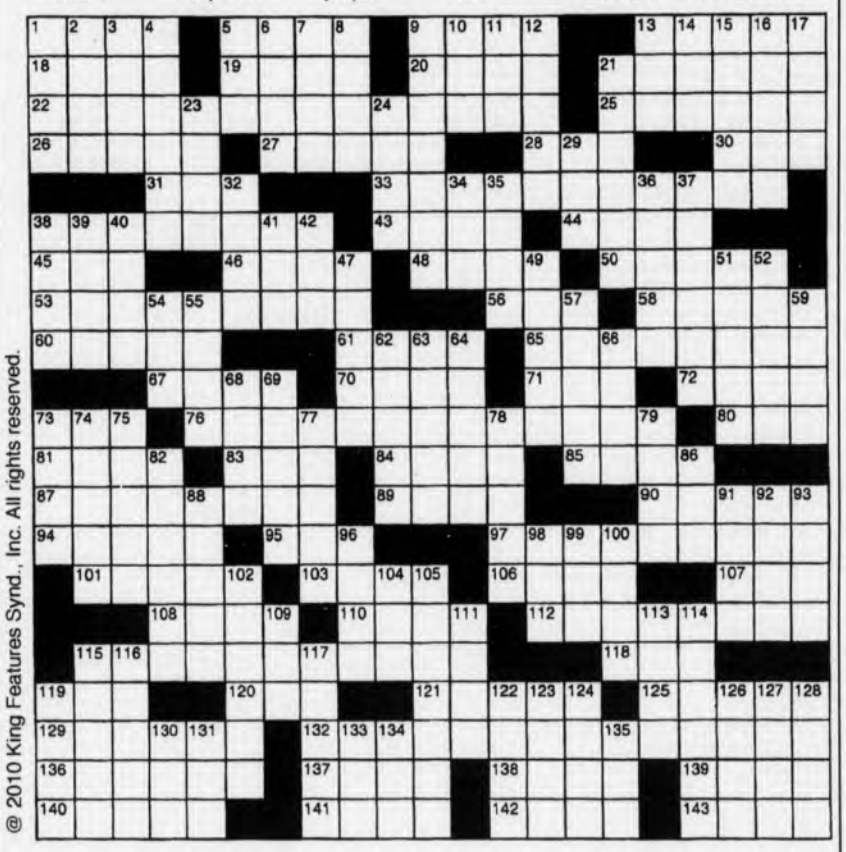
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!



Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Thomas Edward Burke

Thomas Edward Burke

COHASSET – Thomas Edward Burke of Cohasset, Massachusetts passed away on December 30 at South Shore Hospital from complications of pneumonia. Rear Admiral Burke was 91 years of age and leaves behind his wife of 62 years Mary Rita Gilligan Burke.

Tom led a remarkable and distinguished life. He was a decorated Merchant Marine officer of WWII, an avid sportsman, a leading producer for New England Financial for over 50 years and the father of seven children.

Rear Admiral Thomas E. Burke was born in the coastal town of Hull, Massachusetts, where from an early age; he showed a natural propensity for life at sea. While a senior in high school he served a stint as a crew member on a Grand Banks fishing trawler. He entered the Massachusetts Nautical School (Massachusetts Maritime Academy) in 1937 and trained aboard the legendary school ship Nantucket.

Upon graduating in 1939, Admiral Burke went to sea with the United Fruit Company serving in all positions from Able Seaman to Ship Master by 1944. Tom had a distinguished war record in WWII and was one of the youngest ship masters of that era. In the war, he served in many capacities in the South Pacific, Guadalcanal, and the Philippines. His wartime service included surviving two torpedo attacks, one in May 1942 in which he was credited with saving the lives of three other people, including an 11 year old girl after floating in the water for 20 hours in the Gulf of Mexico. In the second attack, a year later, while on the SS Cape Nedick, off the coast of South Africa, he was blown off the bridge to the deck below, survived unhurt and continued on with the badly damaged ship finally arriving in New York with 50 feet of the hull still open. In March of 1945, he was in command of the Black Warrior as it was escorted by Nazi minesweepers through the minefields of the Wesser River, being the first American ship to enter Germany since 1939.

In 1947 Admiral Burke married his beloved Rita and in 1949, he left the sea, coming ashore to Cohasset where he and Rita raised seven children. He went on to a very successful career as a top producer with New England Financial from 1948 to 1998, as a financial service and sales professional, as part of the Baystate Financial Agency. In 1957, he was elected President of the New England Financial Leaders Association. He was a Lifetime Member of New England Financial Leaders and The Million Dollar Roundtable, and earned the Chartered Life Underwriter (CLU) designation in 1965. At one time, he had achieved roughly 2000 consecutive weeks of new business production. He was a county-wide leader in that category, and was most proud of that standard. He also had a successful property and casualty business through Brewer & Lord Co., starting in 1962.

At the same time he began sixty-year tenure of service to his beloved alma mater, the Massachusetts Maritime Academy where he is perhaps best known as the voluntary Placement Director. For over twenty years he assisted hundreds of alumni with seagoing and shore side job placement. He has served as Alumni President, Bulletin Editor, Foundation Trustee, Board of Visitors Trustee, and he was named "Outstanding Alumnus" in 1965. In 1982, Admiral Burke was awarded an Honorary Doctorate by MMA at Commencement. He has also served the Boston Marine Society as Trustee since 1955 and as President from 1976 to 1979. In 2002, the U.S. Maritime Administration appointed Tom to his present rank, of Rear Admiral, for his many years of service to the industry.

Tom and some of his sailing friends, looking for a way for young children in Cohasset to learn to sail, started the Cohasset Sailing Club in 1960 with a small fleet of donated sail boats and the use of a piece of harbor front property owned by the government. The Cohasset Sailing Club is thriving today with over 200 members and a reputation for turning out the best sailors in the area.

Tom was a sportsman all his life. Growing up in Hull he began hunting waterfowl, an avocation he continued well into his eighties. Tom was an avid sailor competing in the Newport to Bermuda Race several times. Tom's greatest passion in life was his love for the game of golf. Tom learned the game of golf as a boy caddying at Cohasset Golf Club and went on to become a member of Hatherly Country Club for over 50 years. Tom's golfing accomplishments at Hatherly include Senior Club Champion several times and Father and Son Champion nine consecutive years with three different sons. Tom competed in amateur tournaments around the state and shot his age on several occasions Tom was also member of Port Royal Club in Bermuda and proud member of the New England Seniors Golf Association.

Perhaps the thing that he liked to do the most was watch his seven children participate in their various sports and activities. Tom's children were accomplished in a variety of interests, including golf, tennis, baseball, football, hockey, field hockey, cheerleading, music and theater.

One of Tom's greatest joys was spending time in Bermuda where he and his wife first honeymooned in 1947. With more than 80 repeat visits to Cambridge Beaches they had become the most often repeat visitors to that resort and for the last 15 years they were honored by the Prime Minister of Bermuda who joined them for dinner at each visit.

Tom was the son of John and Agnes Greely Burke originally of Galway Ireland. Tom's father was the oldest of 14 children and Tom has nearly 100 first cousins many of whom still reside in Ireland.

In addition to his wife, Mary Rita, and his sister Alice Draine of Boston, Tom is survived by daughter Joanna of Malibu, CA; son Thomas W. and his wife Gail of Mobile, AL; son-in-law Dr. James Colville (surviving spouse of daughter Maryadele, d.); son Christopher and his wife Marguerite of Lake Bluff, IL; son John and his wife Anne of Houston, TX and 9 grandchildren. His beloved daughters Patricia, Maryadele and Andrea preceded Tom in death, as did his four brothers, John, William, Robert and David.

A Funeral Mass will be celebrated on Saturday, January 9, 2010 in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours Thursday, Jan 7th from 5-8 pm and Friday, Jan 8th from 5-8 pm at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony's Church), Cohasset, MA.

In lieu of flowers donations may be made to the RADM Thomas E. Burke Sea Term Scholarship at Massachusetts Maritime Academy; payable to: "MMAAA Scholarship Fund" with the notation "RADM Thomas E. Burke Scholarship Fund" in the "memo" portion. Checks should be mailed to William McMcClellan, MMA 63; 10 Horizon Circle, Chatham, MA 02633.

Volunteers

NORWELL VNA AND HOSPICE needs hospice volunteers. If you are kind and compassionate, consider this opportunity. Support a hospice patient and family by donating just a couple of hours a week by visiting patients, providing respite care, running errands and more. This could be one of the most fulfilling volunteer experiences of your life. Contact Terri Fedrow, Volunteer Coordinator at tfedrow@nvna.org or by calling 781-610-1427. Comprehensive training will be held in January in Norwell (date TBD based on volunteer response). For more information about the Norwell VNA and Hospice, visit www.nvna.org.

Quick Flix

Actress Zoe Saldana's character is part of the love story in "Avatar.

Simon, Alvin and Theodore arrive for the first day of school in "Alvin and the Chipmunks: The Squeakquel.

ALVIN AND THE CHIPMUNKS: THE SQUEAKQUEL" (PG) If you saw the 2007 "Alvin" movie, then you'll have a good idea of what to expect. The earlier version was a hit, and kids are likely to love the sequel as well.

ANTICHRIST (R) A grieving couple retreat to "Eden," their isolated cabin in the woods, where they hope to repair their broken hearts and troubled marriage. Instead, things get crazy. And scary. And violent. And quite riveting, in a creepy kind of way. (B+)

AVATAR (PG-13) A paraplegic ex-marine finds a new life on the distant planet of Pandora in James Cameron's eagerly awaited $300-million 3D outer-space extravaganza. His new star, Sam Worthington, is a dud. And some of the special effects look fake. (C+)

THE BLIND SIDE (PG-13) Sandra Bullock plays the mother of a burly black teenage orphan. He eventually finds his calling as a member of the Baltimore Ravens. (C)

BROKEN EMBRACES (R) Penelope Cruz's star continues to rise. And she and director Pedro Almovodar ("Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown") are a match made in heaven. Film buffs will appreciate the way Almodovar pays homage to past movies in this story of love and betrayal between a director, actress and a producer. (B+)

BROTHERS (R) Natalie Portman plays a young mother who hooks up with her brother-in-law shortly after her husband is reported missing in action in Afghanistan. (C)

A CHRISTMAS CAROL (PG) The Dickens classic for a whole new generation with Jim Carrey trying his hand at playing the immortal Ebenezer Scrooge. Too bad it's a disaster. So much visual information clutters the frame that the film never has a chance to breathe. (D)

CLOUDY WITH A CHANCE OF MEATBALLS (PG) Animated flick brings to life Judy and Ron Barrett's 1982 children's book about a wannabe inventor who concocts a machine that turns water into food. (B+)

DID YOU HEAR ABOUT THE MORGANS? (PG-13) Hugh Grant and Sarah Jessica Parker play an unhappily married couple forced to reconcile after they are placed in a Witness Protection Program. Can the marriage of these estranged city folks be saved by some salt-of-the-earth stereotypes in Wyoming? (C)

AN EDUCATION (PG-13) A 16-year-old British girl (Carey Mulligan, drawing Oscar buzz) falls for a much older man (Peter Sarsgaard) who may or may not be up to no good. The ick factor is through the roof — he's so much older — but director Lone Scherfig infuses the movie with enough innocence and wonder to make it work. (B)

FANTASTIC MR. FOX (PG) Wes Anderson's animated film tells the story of the best-selling children's book by Roald Dahl. Anderson turns it into another story of family dysfunction — this time, a family of foxes rendered in jerky animation. Anderson isn't back to his glory days of "Rushmore," but it's better than "The Life Aquatic With Steve Zissou." (C+)

IT'S COMPLICATED (PG-13) It's disappointing. Lots of talent — Meryl Streep, Alec Baldwin and Steve Martin — goes to waste in this story of a fiftysomething woman with two suitors. The film rarely rises above sitcom status, and all the money in the film seems gaudy and out-of-touch in these economic times. (C+)

INVICTUS (PG-13) The story of how a seemingly insignificant rugby team helped unite South Africa after Nelson Mandela (Morgan Freeman) came to power. Freeman is outstanding as Mandela, but the film has some dead spots. Clint Eastwood directs. (B-)

IRENE IN TIME (PG-13) Indie director Henry Jaglom helms an unconventional tale about the relationships between fathers and daughters. (C)

ME AND ORSON WELLES (PG-13) Richard Linklater's coming-of-age yarn about a 17-year-old (Zac Efron) catching on with the iconic Mercury Theater group. The Efron love story goes nowhere, but Christian McKay is outstanding as Welles (B)

MEN WHO STARE AT GOATS (R) Viewers get dragged along on a journey with no destination, as a journalist and a former member of a special Army unit explore psychic powers as a weapon in this black comedy. The film has some funny moments — most of them thanks to George Clooney — but it suffers from the lack of an ending, and the lack of a point. (B-)

THE MESSENGER (R) Woody Harrelson and Ben Foster play members of the Army's Casualty Notification service, who inform families when a loved one has been killed. Harrelson and Foster allow you to feel every heart-tugging moment with Oscar-caliber performances that tap into the guilt, the pain, and, yes, the pride in doing a tough job well. (A-)

NEW MOON (P G-13) The "Twilight" saga continues with Bella (Kristen Stewart) picking up the pieces of a broken heart inflicted by Edward, the vampire (Robert Pattinson). Stewart spends most of her screen time with Taylor Lautner (who plays Jacob), which is too bad because she has more chemistry with Pattinson. (C)

NINE (PG-13) It's no 10, but "Nine" is a solid 7. Director Rob Marshall ("Chicago") directs this ode to all things Italian. Daniel Day-Lewis plays a director in need of a hit. He loves the ladies, allowing for string of fun cameos from great actresses such as Penelope Cruz, Nicole Kidman and Judi Dench. (B)

NINJA ASSASSIN (R) This martial arts flick about a secret society that provides killers for hire is violent and over-the-top bloody. (D)

PARIS (R) While waiting for a heart transplant, a man (Romain Duris) reconnects with his sister (Juliette Binoche) and her family in Paris. (B)

PRECIOUS (R) The tale of a poor, overweight black girl from Harlem struggling with illiteracy and pregnancy. The movie and its star (Gabourey Sidibe) are the feel-good film stories of 2009, but "Precious" isn't quite as good as its hype. (B-)

THE PRINCESS AND THE FROG (G) The tale of an African-American princess (a Disney first) who turns into an amphibian after kissing a frog. It features a lot of the things that Disney does well — snappy songs and funny sidekicks. And, hand-drawn, the film looks great. (B)

RED CLIFF (R) Chinese war epic is full of grand battles but it misses much of its emotional element after being cut from a two-part, five-hour version for Asian audiences. (C)

THE ROAD (R) Based on the novel by Cormac McCarthy, the film follows a father and son take a harrowing, honest journey through a post-apocalyptic world. (B+)

A SERIOUS MAN (R) A disappointing step backward for the Coen brothers, coming on the heels of two of their most satisfying efforts, "No Country for Old Men" and "Burn After Reading." This dramedy follows a university professor whose life is slowly falling apart and no one – not even his rabbi – is willing to help. The relatively unknown cast is impressive. (C)

A SINGLE MAN (R) Colin Firth scores the role of a lifetime in this Toronto Film Festival favorite about a gay man struggling with the loss of his life partner. (B)

SLAMMIN' SALMON (R) Comedy troupe Broken Lizard star Michael Clarke Duncan as the owner of a seafood restaurant, where the waitstaff are vying for a $10,000 prize. (Not Reviewed)

2012 (PG-13) The Mayans predicted that life on Earth would end in 2012. Director Roland Emmerich has recruited John Cusack and Woody Harrelson to help him do it. Good popcorn movie, and you won't waste any energy thinking. (C)

UP IN THE AIR (R) George Clooney plays a corporate guy who fires people for a living. He's good at his job, but he must re-evaluate his life after he's forced to take a desk job in Omaha. Clooney, who plays his role perfectly tongue-in-cheek, has great onscreen-chemistry with Vera Farmiga. (A)

WHERE THE WILD THINGS ARE (PG) This adventurous adaptation has received lots of attention. Maurice Sandek's beloved children's story gets turned into a film about a kid who fantasizes about sailing to a far-off land to rule a kingdom of horned puppet monsters. (C)

YOUNG VICTORIA (PG-13) Emily Blunt as Queen Victoria during the early years of her rule and the love story between her and Prince Albert. Blunt is great at portraying a woman with moxie and a strong sense of self. Too bad her true love was kind of a dud. (B)

When the Patriots meet the Baltimore Ravens in the playoffs this weekend, Ravens lineman Michael Oher will take the field. His story is told in "The Blind Side."

A director (Daniel Day-Lewis) and his wife (Marion Cotillard) in the musical "Nine."

Discover the fascinating history of the Baker Chocolate Company at a free slide lecture by historian Anthony Sammarco, author of The Baker Chocolate Company: A Sweet History, on Jan. 14 hosted by the Hingham Public Library. Coffee and dessert at 7 p.m. with the lecture beginning at 7:30 p.m. Copies of Mr. Sammarco's book will be available for purchase. The event is co-sponsored by the Osher Life Long Learning Institute at UMass-Boston.

In 1765, Dr. James Baker of Dorchester met John Hannon, "a penniless Irish immigrant," crying on the banks of the Neponset River. Inquiring as to his obvious distress, Baker learned that Hannon was destitute but that he possessed the skill of making chocolate, having learned it in England. Baker financially backed Hannon in a leased, wood-framed mill in Milton Village, and later established the Baker Chocolate Company in 1780. The history of the company is an interesting time capsule of American history, as it is the oldest manufacturer of chocolate in the United States. Three generations of the Baker family operated the business and by the mid-19th century it was one of the world's leading producers of chocolate and cocoa.

Sammarco, a Milton resident and a University of Massachusetts graduate, has authored 55 books on the history and development of Boston. He teaches history at the Urban College of Boston, where he was named educator of the year in 2003.

DeLuca named police chief

Some express 'disappointment' with choice

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset has a new police chief.

Monday night, Town Manager Bill Griffin announced former Duxbury Chief Mark DeLuca was his choice to head the Cohasset Police Department into the next decade.

Selectmen each expressed their support of Griffin's choice. Under the Town Manager Act, Griffin has the authority to hire the police chief. The Selectmen have the right to veto the appointment within 15 days of its announcement. In a 4-0 vote (Selectman Ted Carr was absent) the Selectmen approved the appointment.

"I don't think people will be disappointed once I start and get working."
— newly appointed Cohasset Chief Mark DeLuca

DeLuca has been in law enforcement for 27 years, starting his career in the Metro Dade Police Department in Florida before becoming a Boston cop in 1987. He became the Duxbury Police Chief in 1999 and was at that post for 10 years before his contract was not renewed in 2009.

In a phone interview, DeLuca said he was looking forward to working in the community.

"With the caliber of candidates Cohasset had I'm honored to have been chosen," DeLuca said.

In an e-mail, Griffin said he had reviewed the essentials of the contract with DeLuca and would present him with a proposal this week. Griffin expects DeLuca to start before the end of the month.

At the meeting, Griffin acknowledged his choice would leave some members of the community "disappointed." But, urged those to "welcome Chief DeLuca to the department and the town."

DeLuca was chosen from four finalists that also included: Wenham Chief

Vo-Tech to the rescue

Students revamp Rec Center's HVAC system

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Recreation Center has suffered for years with the inability to truly regulate its temperature.

But, in a few weeks, steamy summer and chilly winter days will no longer be a problem.

The recreation department and South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School (Vo-Tech) have teamed up to bring a new heating, ventilation, and air conditioning (HVAC) system to the Recreation Center, located adjacent to the village parking lot.

The project provides an opportunity for the Vo-Tech students to gain "hands-on" experience and will leave the town with a new HVAC system at a significantly lower cost.

"Project like this one is one of the best things the kids get to do. It's really a turning point for a lot of them; it's when they start to take the trade and job seriously. It reaps awards all around," said Scott Mulkern, HVAC specialist teacher, at the Hanover school.

Most of the participants in the field project are juniors and seniors because they have the basic understanding on the systems from working in the school's shop for two years. But, actually seeing a working project come together in all its parts is a memorable experience for the students, Mulkern said.

"Just to be outside the show, actually doing something we're going to be doing in a few years is really great," said Cameron Crowley, a Hanover resident and junior at SSVT. "We're going to help keep this bad boy cool and warm."

The South Shore Vo-Tech students are working to install a high-efficiency gas furnace complete with a ductwork system.

On Wednesday morning there was a flurry of activity as 10 students working in small groups tackled different sections of the project. Some were up in the crawl space above the bathrooms, others were measuring duct and still others were working on the furnace.

The current system, which does not have air conditioning, likely dates back to when the building was constructed. Mulkern described the current system as "antiquated" and operating within the 60 percent efficiency range. The new system will operate in the 95 percent efficiency range.

"There should be a significant drop in fuel usage, which is great for everyone involved," Mulkern said.

Recreation Director Ted Carroll said in the extremes of the thermometer it has been difficult to schedule programs at the recreation center space. The system was very loud so even in the winter it couldn't stay on if instructors wanted to be heard. At dances when over 100 kids are in the small building, it heats up pretty quickly and, with the exception of fans, there is

Senate race finishes Tuesday

Meet the candidates on page 14

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In sharp contrast to just the handful of absentee ballots received prior to the Dec. 8 Special State Primary to fill the late Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's long-held seat, 167 had been returned to the Cohasset Town Clerk's office for the Jan. 19 Special State Election as of yesterday morning (Thursday).

Absentee ballot receipts are normally considered a gauge of voter interest.

Due to the fact that this election occurs on the day following a holiday (Martin Luther King Day, Jan. 18), the Town Clerk's office will remain open until 5 p.m. today (Fri., Jan. 15), for absentee voting.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas is hoping for a turnout of 52 percent. About 22 percent voted in the primary.

There are 5478 registered voters in Cohasset. Of those 1223 are Democrats; 1196 are Republican; 3045 are unenrolled. There are eight registered

Attorney General Martha Coakley, a Democrat, is facing Republican state Sen. Scott Brown and Libertarian Joe Kennedy (unrelated to Edward M. Kennedy) in the upcoming election.

Judging from the 22 percent voter turnout in Cohasset for the primary, which was higher than most other towns, Town Clerk Marion Douglas predicts 52 percent turnout but she is hoping for more.

The upcoming State Special Election is unique. Hingham Democratic Town Committee Chairman Michael Traft, an election historian, recalled that "the other senator special elections only occurred at the time of the next statewide election, so you have to go back to Ted Kennedy's own election or, before that, to the election of Leverett Saltonstall, to fill a partial term of a senator who left in mid-term," he said. "We have had some recent Congressional special elections, most recently Niki Tsongas in the 5th Congressional in October, 2007, and, before that, Stephen Lynch in the 9th in October, 2001 and John Olver in the 1st in June, 1991."

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. both Cohasset Precincts vote at Town Hall.

Local donations to help Haiti

This week's horrific earthquake in Haiti is having reverberations around the world – and Cohasset has not been spared.

Cohasset resident Will Charles's sister, Gina Day, was living and working in Petion-Ville, Haiti, about 50 miles outside of Port-au-Prince, when the earthquake hit. His family heard from Gina at 3 p.m. before the earthquake, but has not heard from her since the disaster.

Charles' other sister, Sarah Besong, a nurse practitioner, is heading to Haiti as soon as next week to aid in relief efforts and help locate their sister.

She hopes to take with her as many needed supplies as she can. Donations of tents, flashlights and first aid kits, are especially needed. Donations can be dropped off at Charles' home at 25 Ripley Road. For more information call Charles at 781-696-0291.

Best day of your life: May 19, 2007 (My wedding day).

Best vacation: All vacations are great but I would have to say my honeymoon cruise was the best.

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite junk food or meal: Steak and cheese subs for a junk food and a nice steak dinner for a good meal.

Best book: "On Grampus Ledge."

Best movie or actor: Adam Sandler.

Best TV show: Anything to do with the Red Sox, Celtics, Bruins or Patriots.

Favorite music, group or artist: Any music from today besides jazz and country.

Most embarrassing moment: Accidentally breaking a rocking chair on (retired chief) Brian Noonan's front deck during a Memorial Day Cookout.

Pet peeve: Ignorance and people that think they are better or above everyone else.

Goal: To be successful and have a healthy family.

Person you'd most like to meet: Family members that I never had the chance to meet.

Biggest worry: Becoming unemployed sometime in my life and not being able to support my family.

Best part of Cohasset: The view and the people in the community.

Town Census for 2010

The Town Census for 2010 will be mailed to each household within the next several weeks. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through December 31, 2010. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible with a current rabies certificate although you may have recently renewed your 2009 license.

In addition to the census form, enclosed will be an informational form from the Veterans' Agent for veterans and their surviving spouse.

If you did not receive your census, please contact the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

In a phone interview, newly appointed Chief Mark DeLuca said he was looking forward to working in the community. "With the caliber of candidates Cohasset had I'm honored to have been chosen," he said.

Kenneth Walsh, Cohasset Sergeant John Conte and Norwell Deputy Chief John Suurhans.

"Throughout this entire process I have received an incredible amount of input and advice on what we should be looking for in the next police chief and who specifically should be the next police chief," Griffin said. "A number of individuals have very strong views towards the candidates themselves, in some cases strongly in favor, and in others strongly opposed."

Mary Snow, a lifelong resident and a town employee with the DPW, said the appointment was "a kick in the teeth."

"Someone puts their whole career in one town, works hard, expects to be promoted and doesn't," Snow said, referring to Sgt. Conte. Snow also said there was controversy around DeLuca and didn't expect it to go away.

"Some people in this town think all transparency is gone from this board and there is much more to this story than meets the eye," Snow said.

Bob Hayden of Hingham and a Boston firefighter from Hull, who said they have both known DeLuca for years, spoke highly of him and in support of the appointment during Monday's meeting.

Former Cohasset Chief James Hussey gave high marks to DeLuca, who he has known professionally for years. They worked together in the Boston PD.

"The town of Cohasset really hit a home run making him their chief," Hussey said in a phone interview, adding DeLuca's unique experience of being a chief for 10 years on the South Shore helped make him an "all-star."

"(DeLuca) has a ton of energy, does a lot in the community and is a real committed professional," Hussey said.

In response to the disappointment felt by some in the community Hussey said, "you have to understand being a leader in a police department is not about winning a popularity contest."

DeLuca is optimistic the "disappointment" will fade once he officially takes his post and gets working.

"Sergeant Conte will be every bit a part of how I run this department. It's totally a team effort," DeLuca said. "I don't think people will be disappointed once I start and get working."

To set the stage for his announcement, Griffin set forth a series of priorities he felt the next chief must possess. First was the chief needed to have the ability to lead the Cohasset PD as a whole and all the members of the department, he said.

"Though through Chief Hussey great strides were made over the past five years to bring the department closer together after a difficult period in its history, it is still clear to me after participating in this selection process that the department to a certain extent remains fractured and fragile," Griffin said.

Second, he was looking for someone to continue the department's focus on community policing and outreach to all segments of the population.

Third, the next chief must work with the school department to develop a "true partnership."

Fourth, the chief must be able to work with the relevant parties to reign in expenditures, especially overtime.

And finally, Griffin said, the next chief must be ready and willing to play a role in the establishment and operation of the regional emergency dispatch center.

Griffin said three out of the four members of the candidate evaluation committee supported his choice of DeLuca. One member backed the appointment of Sgt. Conte.

Further, Griffin said he was well aware DeLuca's departure from the Town of Duxbury was not without controversy. In 2009, DeLuca's Duxbury contract was not renewed by the Town Manager and his departure was met with a cloud of controversy when some residents and Selectmen did not support Town Manager's action.

"However, I have had hours of discussions with individuals with knowledge of Chief DeLuca's service with the town of Duxbury, and I am very confident that he has been and will continue to be a highly professional and principled law enforcement official who will be an outstanding leader of the Cohasset Police Departments," Griffin said.

"I know you will be incredibly proud of the police chief you picked," Bob Hayden, who served as DeLuca's superior officer at one point, said.

POLICE BEAT

Police find suspect in handbag theft

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The suspect emptied the contents of the handbag in his car and left the handbag where the car was parked and where officers found it.

Police plan to press larceny charges against at 32-year-old Hull man who allegedly stole a woman's pocketbook from Stop & Shop last Friday (Jan. 8). The report came in at 12:13 p.m. Police said a 42-year-old Cohasset woman reported to the service desk that someone had taken her pocketbook out of her cart. Police responded to the store and talked to the victim who said $100 in cash, her identification and credit cards were inside her handbag. She remembered someone acting suspiciously around her minutes before the theft.

Police watched the store videotape and were able to see a man commit the larceny and head out the front door with the handbag under his jacket. He was described as unshaven, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, in his 30s and wearing a dark-colored jacket. The video also showed him get into a white sedan in the parking lot but did not show the plate number. The suspect emptied the contents of the handbag in his car and left the handbag where the car was parked and where officers found it.

A detective, who was investigating the crime, took a cell phone picture of the suspect's car that was shown in security tapes. The detective was later showing that photo to a group of officers, and a Cohasset Police officer reported that she had run a computer check on that same car earlier in the day. The officers were able to conduct a review of all cars run by that officer that day. They identified the owner of the vehicle and interviewed him. As a result of that interview a full confession was obtained, police said. Larceny charges will be filed at Quincy District Court.

Larceny

A 41-year-old Cohasset man reported to police at 2:22 p.m. last Friday (Jan. 8) that $800 in cash had been stolen from his car outside a gym on King Street. Police said the man went to the gym and had the money with him. It appears that he decided not to put the money in a locker inside the facility but to leave it in his car.

Police said an unidentified woman, who went into the gym allegedly looking for a pair of gloves, apparently took some sets of keys of people working out there and opened cars remotely. She then allegedly went through the unlocked cars and found the money. The incident is under investigation.

Identity theft

A 38-year-old Cohasset woman, who recently moved to town from California, reported to police last Wednesday (Jan. 6) that someone was running up charges on her account fraudulently. Police provided her with an identity theft packet that walks victims through the steps of how to notify the three major credit bureaus that can put a watch on account activity. There are also forms to fill out that are turned over to detectives to start an investigation. The report generated by police supports a victim's claim of identity theft with the credit bureaus.

MV crashes

• At 7:32 a.m. on Monday (Jan. 4) there was a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Hingham Lumber. Police said a 53-year-old Scituate woman driving a 2002 Honda Accord was headed north when she stopped to make a left into Crocker Lane. A 2003 Toyota Camry, operated by a 33-year-old Marshfield man, rear-ended the Honda. Both cars were towed and the Scituate woman was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. Police cited the driver of the Toyota for following too closely. Police said the Marshfield man reported that he had looked down to see the time on the clock in the dashboard and when he looked up, he saw the Honda in front of him and could not stop.

• At 2:10 p.m. on Thursday (Jan. 7), a 1995 Toyota Camry, operated by an 87-year-old Cohasset woman, was headed south on North Main Street (from Hingham toward the village) when she crossed over the street and hit a utility pole outside First Parish Church, moving the base of the pole and snapping the pole in half. The woman told police she was driving along behind the car in front of her and the next thing she knew, she had hit the pole. Her car was towed and she was transported to South Shore Hospital by ambulance. She was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes. Police also filed an "immediate threat" with the Registry of Motor Vehicles that will assess her ability to operate a motor vehicle.

Ride

Police gave two women, who appeared to be under the influence of alcohol, a ride to a house on Beechwood Street where they were headed last week. There was a complaint from a village business about the women being out front at 9:46 p.m. on Monday (Jan. 4).

Erratic driver

Police followed a car that had been reported as driving erratically on Route 3A last Thursday (Jan. 7) at about 8:06 p.m. The caller reported the car was swerving and braking a lot. However, the officer, who followed the vehicle, did not observe any erratic driving. If an officer observes problem driving, he or she can stop the vehicle, police said. Police can also stop the vehicle for erratic driving even if they do not observe it if the caller makes him- or herself known to them. In this case the anonymous caller did not make himself known and the car was not stopped.

Kept going

A Cohasset officer working a detail at a funeral on Summer Street observed a 2005 Chevrolet Silverado registered in Scituate failed to stop at the crosswalk at 6 p.m. last Thursday (Jan. 7). The vehicle did not pull over for the officer. Police know who the registered owner of the vehicle is but need to determine who was driving before issuing a citation.

Cohasset Flag to head to space

Cohasset's own astronaut Captain Steve Bowen is heading to space again. Bowen has been scheduled to fly on the STS-132. The mission will lift off in May 2010 and deliver new technology to the International Space Station. This is Bowen's second mission into space and will involve at least three space walks.

After a brief discussion during which the Selectmen referenced the recent Cohasset Mariner poll on the subject, it was determined the Cohasset flag would be an appropriate memento to represent the town.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said the flag is a symbol of Cohasset and once it returned from space it could be flown on special occasions.

NASA was very specific on the type of item that could be brought into space by crew. Most soft objects that could be folded were allowed. Flags or banners were among the items allowed.

BEFORE

I have been a member of GISFW for almost 2 years. Being a member has been, and continues to be, a wonderful experience. When I joined I had some overdue baby weight to lose and was very out of shape. As someone who used to spend many hours at the gym, I was skeptical that three hours a week would be enough to get in shape, but with 2 active little boys and a full time job, that was about all I had time for. I have not only lost weight (I now wear a size 4), but have kept it off. I am in the best shape I have been in since long before I had kids, and I keep getting stronger and more fit. The trainers are fantastic and make sure that the weight workout is always very challenging and never boring. After almost two years, I still get sore after my workouts. Doing intervals on the cardio machines gives a great cardio workout in a relatively short amount of time.

It is a lot of fun working out with other women in a small group. There is a lot of laughter and encouragement. Both the GIS staff and the other women provide motivation to show up and work hard and hold you accountable when you don't. Having worked one on one with trainers before, I definitely have more fun working out in a small group with a trainer.

I really can't say enough about how great GIS is. It has definitely exceeded all of my expectations. I have so much more energy and feel so much better about myself (and look so much better) now then before I joined, and I am having so much fun getting in great shape!

FISCAL FOCUS

CHS athletic fees could soar

Budget options are on the table

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The ways and means schools can lower the operating budgets are being talked about. While still early in the budget process, the School Committee intends to make some big decisions in the coming month about school services, fees, and programs.

At the School Committee meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 6, the elected board began to delve deeper into the proposed school budget for fiscal 2011. The School Committee reviewed the line-item budget for the district (particularly curriculum and professional development), the Middle-High School, and the athletics department.

The preliminary fiscal 2011 budget is $15,383,761, which includes negotiated salary increases with the teachers' union, transportation costs and unemployment costs. The budget is a 4.6 percent increase, or $671,761 over this year's budget.

The overall middle-high school budget, not including athletics, is proposed to increase 1.2 percent, or $50,320, over the current year's budget.

The School Committee knows this budget may need to be adjusted further given the anticipated loss of state aid, grants and other needs in the town. While no method or methods have been chosen, vice chair Alfred Slanetz said, "(the School Committee has) to think very seriously about what we are going to be doing."

The prospect of cutting the athletic program was not on the table, but creating an athletic program that relies on increased athletic fees, booster donations, and gate receipts is, Slanetz said. In the current year's budget and in most recent budget history, the athletic department budget has covered about half of its cost through offsets (fees, gate receipts, donations). Now, the committee and the town are looking in to the possibility of having the whole department funded through offsets.

The current budget proposal outlines $381,560 for the high school athletic department, $216,000 of which is expected to come from an offset generated from user fees and gate receipts. That leaves $164,960 to come from the operating budget.

School Committee vice chairman Alfred Slanetz said the increased fee could be $600 per student per sport.

The current athletic user fee schedule is $250 for the first sport, $250 for the second sport and $150 for a third sport (there is a $900 cap per family). Slanetz said the increased fee could be $600 per student per sport.

In order to begin a serious deliberation, Slanetz said the school department would evaluate the impact on the programs and participation and return to the committee.

"We have to take a serious look at that and seriously consider all options…for me, the last place I want to cut is where there will be impact on the core academic program," Slanetz said.

According to Slanetz, there were several areas of the budget that they would like more detail and information for. School bus maintenance, a $95,000 line item, seemed high. Slanetz said they want to look at all the options within the town and possible partnerships with other towns to somehow lower that cost.

The School Committee also asked for two scenarios to be modeled when it came to transportation, Slanetz said. The first scenario would be to eliminate bus service not legally required; a school district must provide bus transportation to kindergarten to sixth grade students, who live more than two miles from school, as a minimum mandate. The second scenario is to increase bus fees.

"We'd be taking transportation out of the operating budget and covering it with fees," Slanetz said, adding more analysis was requested in order for the committee to make decisions.

Currently, any child in grades K through 6 whose residence is two miles or less from the attending school, and all children in grades 7 through 12 have to pay a fee to receive transportation services. The fee for one student is $180, with a family cap of $540.

Also on the table as a way to reap potential savings is to alter the block scheduling, Slanetz said.

Superintendent Denise Walsh said any change to the block scheduling, which was instituted in the early 2000s, would involve negotiation with the teachers' union.

The elementary school principals and student services director will be on hand at the Wednesday, Jan. 20 School Committee meeting to walk through their budget proposals.

"We are still in the process of building the budget…The school committee may make adjustments to the budget after that time and during the month of February," Walsh said in an e-mail. State aid figures are expected at the end of January.

The School Committee will hold a public budget hearing on March 3 and certify the budget recommendation to the town.

"We have a way to go yet in the process," Walsh said.

Senior Center still on horizon

$1 million grant kicks effort into high gear

"This is the kick-off month. The more we can get in front of people, the more interest we can get for the project, the better."
— Glenn Pratt, building committee

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The dream of a new Senior Center is moving forward.

This month the Council on Elder Affairs is kicking off its efforts and setting forth concrete goals that could have a groundbreaking on a new building a year from now.

The latest news is that the Attorney General's Office and the Supreme Judicial Court have approved a $1 million donation from the Mary Hooper Trust, which is administered by the Social Service League of Cohasset (see sidebar).

"We're really excited…we are happy we can be a part of a project that will meet the needs of the seniors in town," Marita Carpenter, president of the Social Service League, said in a phone interview. "But, there is still a lot of work to do."

With the promise of the grant, which will make a significant dent but not nearly cover the over $2 million estimated cost, the Council on Elder Affairs is now beginning to develop a more complete picture of the needs and desires of the community for the Senior Center.

A business plan and a capital fundraising plan are two of the main items that need to be accomplished in the coming months, according to a report presented to the Council on Elder Affairs by the senior center building ad-hoc committee Monday morning.

"This is the kick-off month. The more we can get in front of people, the more interest we can get for the project, the better," said Glenn Pratt, a member of the building committee.

The location for the prospective senior center is in the works. Land adjacent to the parking lot of the Cohasset Swim Center, located off Sohier Street, has been targeted for the new building. For a year members of the Council on Elder Affairs have been in talks with the Trustees of the Swim Center to do a land swap in order to secure the land most suitable for the building.

A trio of articles passed at Annual Town Meeting last year gave the Board of Selectmen the authority to negotiate a land swap or other exchange with the Cohasset Swim Center. With the passage of the three articles, the Board of Selectmen has the authority to use a five-acre parcel of land to negotiate, to accept a gift (or purchase) of land from the Swim Center for the sole purpose of a building a senior center.

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said selectmen would take up the land swap in February.

Elder Affairs is currently based in the front rooms of the South Shore Community Center located at the corner of Depot Court and North Main Street. There is a dining room, a small office space, and a shared kitchen. Both the senior center and the community center have grown considerably over the years and both organizations need more space.

Preliminary designs for the new senior center propose a three-floor building on a 10,000 square foot footprint. The basement would ideally be for storage and a "command center" for emergency management. With the emergency management component a federal Homeland Security grant is available. The second floor would be devoted to the Senior Center and its many functions. The third floor would be devoted to as many as 10 senior affordable housing units.

The incorporation of the affordable housing opens the project up for support from the Community Preservation funding. Town Meeting allocated $220,000 to develop plans for the project last year.

Al Moore, chairman of the Planning Board, was at the meeting to give an overview of his board's role in the project. The new building would likely need to receive site plan review.

"It gives a forum to vet the project with the neighbors," Moore said. "The more ventilation the project can get, the better."

Elder Affairs director Coral Grande agreed, "we want to make sure this is a transparent project. If there are issues, concerns, naysayers, we want to hear them now and address them."

Moore suggested once plans begin to solidify the Planning Board would welcome the building committee to come for an informal meeting to discuss the project.

The report sets forth a fairly aggressive timetable, given the amount of fundraising and steps it takes to build a new town building, to have a groundbreaking in the spring 2011. The opening of the building is slated to be spring 2012.

Mary Hooper had a dream

When Cohasset (summer) resident Mary Hooper wrote her will in 1924 her number one wish was to build "an old age home" in Cohasset. She left the sum of $25,000 for that wish.*

However, even in the 1920s, $25,000 was not enough to build and maintain an old age home (an antiquated term that likely meant something similar to a senior center). Hooper's heirs began to fight over the money.

The court ruled that the money would be placed in a very restrictive trust: income from the principal must be used to meet elderly needs in the Cohasset area.

Over the next 50 years church organizations and the Social Service League facilitated matching the needs in the community with the trust's funds. During those years the Social Service League put the Hooper Trust funding in their "Wilcutt Fund" named for Hooper's father.

In 2006, the long-standing trustee of the Hooper Trust, Davis Howes, wanted to step down from the role. He approached the Social Service League and they jumped at the chance.

They began the legal process to change the trustee-ship over the League, a process that took nearly two years. In September 2008, the Social Service League began to administer the Hooper Trust.

Then, the League knowing the needs of the elders in the community and the town, began to work toward making Hooper's dream of a "home" for elders a reality.

With the help of Sullivan and Worcester, they petitioned the Attorney General to release a portion of the principal for a new Senior Center. After a successful meeting with the Attorney General's office, Division of Charities, the League, with the AG's support, gained approval to use the funds from the Supreme Judicial Court.

The Social Service League is now pledged to donate $1 million to the building of the new Cohasset Senior Center. In order to release the funds several major pieces need to come together including legally obtaining the Swim Trust land, developing a business plan and an outline of where the rest of the capital cost is coming from.

In the meantime, the Social Service League is continuing their other work in Cohasset and the surrounding community.

News Update

Clear water comes with a cost

Residents flood forum on quality

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Fifty residents came out to ask for improvement in the water coming from their taps.

Residents reported an array of colors coming from their faucets: brown, pink, black, green, and even aqua water.

They asked questions about in-home filtration, about health effects of manganese ingestion and total trihalomethanes (TTHMs), and significantly, what the water department can and is doing to better their product.

The answer was: if residents need better water, it is going to cost more money.

In fact, it has already cost a great deal of money – $39 million, to be exact – to bring the water system up to the point where it is consistently meeting state and federal drinking water standards. And it might cost another $6 million to improve it to the point where Cohasset Water can survive the next round of stricter drinking water mandates.

A cross-section of residents from all over town came out to participate in Tuesday's water quality forum. A panel of officials and experts stood at the ready to answer questions: representatives from the Water Commission, the Board of Health, water department employees, consulting engineers, and the state Department of Public Health and Department of Environmental Protection.

Many residents came ready to ask questions of the panel. Some questions focused on how problems could be addressed at the micro level at individual homes, others focused on what as a town could be done to correct the issues. Some wanted assurances the water was safe and wouldn't harm their children or themselves. Other wanted to know what the root of the problems was.

Since the water crisis of 1994 when the lack of proper maintenance of the distribution system over the course of decades came to a head, the water department has made multi-million dollars worth of improvements. And because of those extensive upgrades to the water distribution system and its treatment plant over the last 14 years, water quality has improved.

However, residents made clear on Tuesday night the quality is not up to snuff, especially considering the high price Cohasset water users are paying for the product.

"The price we are paying for brown water – and it could potentially increase 15 percent – call me crazy but I used to work in sales and if I sell a customer a piece of junk they are going to want their money back," said Millie Oswald of Spring Street. "It may be within the regulations but it is not my standards and I don't want my kids drinking it."

The answer to the discolored water plaguing some homes in Cohasset is more improvements, the water commission said.

What can happen as early as this spring is the implementation of a "phosphate program" that is intended to improve the issues of discolored water primarily related to manganese. The water department is currently awaiting final approval from the DEP to move forward.

"It may be within the regulations but it is not my standards and I don't want my kids drinking it."

— Millie Oswald, Spring Street

In the long-term, water commissioners said a complete retro-fit of the water treatment plant is necessary. The construction of the MIEX (magnetic ionic exchange) pre-treatment system is expected to lower the organic content going into the plant making it easier for the plant to treat.

Pilot test results performed in 2005 and 2006 showed approximately a 50 percent reduction in THMs in treated water. This reduction of THMs is essential because the federal regulations are getting tougher in 2013.

The combination of both efforts comes with a hefty price tag, "the two projects on the plans (total) in the range of $6 million," Glenn Pratt, chair of the Water Commission, said. "We have no choice but to meet the standards."

The phosphate program will inject one chemical, which consists of two different types of phosphate, into the water. The two different types of phosphate do two different jobs. One type will "sequester" the manganese keeping it in solution. Right now the manganese precipitates out, coats the pipes and causing discolored water. The other type will inhibit corrosion.

The phosphate program is a widely used method in water treatment plants, water department superintendent Jared Hill said. The downside of the program is for roughly two months customers system-wide will experience an increase in discolored water. After the phosphate helps to clear the corrosion in the pipes, the water quality is expected to improve.

The Water Commission said plenty of public education would be done before the phosphate program was implemented. The estimated start-up cost for the phosphate program is $100,000, Pratt said.

Although the water would be clear, several residents were concerned this effort was masking the problem rather than addressing it.

"I'm not comforted by the fact that right now I don't drink the water, don't cook with the water and (after the phosphate program is implemented) I just won't be able to see the reason I don't drink the water," said Karen Quigley, a selectman and resident of Clay Spring Road. "Should I still be buying bottled water?"

In response, Mike Hutcheson of the DEP said, "judging from the criteria we use, there's nothing that says you shouldn't be drinking (the water)."

Kathy Devaney of Spring Street said she has had her home water tested monthly for the last four to five months. One of her samples was 300 times over the limit for manganese and every sample has shown consistently high THM levels.

Mike Celona of the Department of Public Health said the way the state evaluates water quality is not based on one sample.

"There can be fluctuations even between when the samples are taken. If you are not comfortable drinking the water, that's one thing. But, the regulations are designed to evaluate the water system-wide," Celona said.

Celona said residents had to keep in mind water quality and health are two separate things.

"Water may meet the health standard, but it may not be drinkable," he said. The case in point being the bottles of brown water brought to the forum by Jody Butman of Spring Street.

Over the past five to 10 years, Cohasset water has by and large met the heath standards on all parameters.

This is especially the case when it comes to manganese, where discolored water in fact meets the health standard, but often fails for the aesthetic value.

The impact of manganese, which is a naturally occurring metal, on health is still being studied.

"There is so much unknown about what appears to be somewhat scary on the front end," said Chapman, chair of the Board of Heath.

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Town Meeting, election dates set

Annual Town Meeting will take place on Saturday, March 27 at 9a.m. In light of the fact the following weekend is the Easter holiday, the annual town election be held two weeks later on Saturday, April 10.

Help save kidneys and lives

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This year, NephCure has the opportunity to raise $1 million in one week, just from the click of a computer key.

This one is a no brainer…and what a great way to start to the New Year than by helping someone else.

For no money, and less than a minute or two of time on the computer you and your friends, family, colleagues…everyone, can help NephCure Foundation win $1 million. All you have to do is vote for NephCure on Facebook and if enough people do that very same thing, it would be an enormous boost towards funding needed to find a cure for Nephrotic Syndrome and FSGS, two debilitating kidney diseases.

Kathleen and Matt Broderick of Cohasset have a son, Will, who has Nephrotic Syndrome. Since his diagnosis Will has served as inspiration for the Brodericks to throw themselves into finding a cure. Kathleen is on the Board of the NephCure Foundation and Matt is on the finance committee. They've taken an active role, personally meeting the local NephCure funded research teams at MGH, Brigham and Women's and Children's Hospital and have traveled to Washington DC to meet our elected officials and directors of the NIH to secure research funding. Last year, thousands of people helped fundraise – including many Cohasset residents – trying to raise money for this research.

This year, NephCure has the opportunity to raise $1 million in one week, just from the click of a computer key. Here's how it works:

Beginning today, Jan. 15 through Jan. 22, simply vote for NephCure via Facebook in the Chase Community Giving. Last month many people did just that in Round 1 of the challenge and NephCure won $25,000 and secured a spot in the top 100 to compete for $1 million.

Please reach out to everyone they know and ask them to also help out by voting. Ask them to ask their Facebook friends….start a buzz.

You don't have to be a Facebook member to ask your email contacts to help. Just forward them the link and if they're on Facebook ask them let vote.

For more information about NephCure visit the www.nephcure.org.

How to vote:

Simply go to this link and vote for NephCure:
[http://apps.facebook.com/chasecommunitygiving/charities/687190]
or go to [www.NephCure.org] for an easy link to vote.

Become and fan of Chase Community Giving and then cast your vote for NephCure.

JANUARY

Hello Cohasset. I hope everyone is enjoying the month of January so far with the snow, cold temperatures and outdoor winter fun. A number of families have the pleasure of a 4-day weekend this week so I know many of you will have some photos and stories to share. Try to get to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm with any of these items and they will appear in Friday of next week's column.

OH BOY!

What a wonderful family story to share about a new addition to our world. Christmas came early in Haddonfield, N.J. this December in the form of a healthy baby boy. On Dec. 8, 2009 Travis and Christine Coley and big brother, Blaise, welcomed Augustan Thomas into the world. Baby Augie was home in time for Christmas. Proud grandparents are Ralph and Susi Coley of Cohasset and Frank and Marie Messina of Haddonfield, N J. So excited and happy for your family.

MLK BREAKFAST

Please join the Cohasset Clergy and the Cohasset Diversity Committee in honoring the memory and achievements of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. at Cohasset's 9th annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast.

The breakfast will be held on Monday, Jan. 18 at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., from 9 – 11 am. A full breakfast will be served from 9 – 10 am followed by an uplifting program honoring the memory of Dr. King.The featured speaker will be Clementina Chery, President and CEO of the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute located in Dorchester. Childcare will be provided during the breakfast. Cost of the breakfast is $5 per person or $15 per family. For more information please call Connie Afshar at 781 383 6006.

DEAN'S LIST

Congratulations are being sent out to Susan Curry who made the Dean's List for the fall semester 2009 at the Georgia Institute of Technology. Great to hear Susan, keep up the great job!

Another message of congratulations is being sent out to John McCarthy who was named to Dean's List for the Fall 2009 semester at Quinnipiac. Nice Work!

BUCKNELL

Bucknell University has released the dean's list for outstanding academic achievement during the fall semester of the 2009-2010 academic year. The following students earned a place on the dean's list.

Kristin Monaco of Cohasset, daughter of Gerald Monaco of Hingham and Lynn Monaco of Cohasset, a 2009 graduate of Cohasset Middle H S.

Sarah W. Bookstein of Norwell, daughter of Donald and Helene Bookstein of Cohasset and Suzanne and Jack Genest of Norwell, a graduate of Thayer Academy, Braintree.

Meredyth A. Evans of Cohasset, daughter of Christopher and Melinda Evans of Cohasset, a graduate of Cohasset Middle H S. Cohasset.

A student must earn a grade point average of 3.5 or higher on a scale of 4.0 to receive dean's list recognition.

ANIMAL SHELTER

Mark your calendars for WinterFest Beer and Wine Tasting event! On Saturday, Feb. 13 from 7 to 10 pm., the beautiful Hatherly Country Club will host "Winter-Fest", featuring red and white wine selection, seasonal beers, gourmet food pairings and live and silent auction. Tickets are $50 and can be purchased online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org , in person at the Shelter during public visiting hours, or by telephone order with Visa or Mastercard at (781) 544-4533. Advanced ticket purchase is recommended; tickets may not be available for purchase at the door.

All proceeds from this event will support the exceptional care of the animals at the Scituate Animal Shelter.

The Scituate Animal Shelter is a non-profit, no-kill animal shelter proudly serving the greater South Shore region.

OUR WORLD

For all families who share in the fun and excitement here at the Our World Museum, we wanted to let you know that although renovations are still in the works, we will be open on Tuesday, Jan. 19th to the public! A Wintertime Exploration Session will take place for ages 18 months-Age 6 starting on January 19th with programs from 9:30-1:45, Tuesday-Fridays and more information can be obtained by going to www.ourworldcgdm.org or by calling 781-383-3198. You may also send an email to info@ourworldcgdm.org Come and visit and see the changes that are taking place and share in the excitement.

GLOBAL WARMING

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will meet at Bancroft Hall, Lightkeeper's Cottage, on Tuesday Jan. 26th at 9:30 a.m. for the monthly general meeting. The speaker will be Joe Joyce, NECN's weekend meteorologist. In his presentation called " The Truths and Myths of Global Warming" he'll give a brief history of how weather and climate work followed by a deeper look into global warming. He'll also discuss "cap and trade" and the politics behind it. For more information about this meeting or about the club visit the website www.communitygardenclubofcohasset.org or call Martha at 781-383-1614.

That is all for this week. If anyone has anything that you would like to appear in the Around Town Column, make sure that it arrives to me no later than 5 on Tuesdays. If you have a photo that you would like to be included, make sure it is with your email and arrives no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

St. Stephen's Concert Sunday is a classic

The program will feature works by Bach, Clarke, and Buxtehude as well as some arrangements of traditional songs and opera arias.

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., announces the first recital of the 2010 Concert Series is Sunday, Jan. 17 at 3 p.m. Featured artist will be trumpeter Christopher O'Hara accompanied by organist Mark Engelhardt.

O'Hara studied at the Boston Conservatory and has served on the staff at Maynard and Norwood high schools, as well as at the Boston Universtiy Tanglewood Institute in Lenox. He is currently Chairman of the Brass Department at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham.

Engelhardt is a distinguished concert organist who has won several national competitions. He has been heard in concert throughout the United States, including Trinity Church, Wall Street and Columbia University in New York City; Methuen Music Hall and Old North Church in Boston; and Bristol Cathedral (England); and in master classes with Arthur Poister, Marie-Claire Alain, Joan Lippincott, and Gillian Weir. He appears as solo organist and choral director on the recording "Author of Light" with the professional choir and unique double organ of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul.

The program will feature works by Bach, Clarke, and Buxtehude as well as some arrangements of traditional songs and opera arias. It promises to be both well performed and fun. The St. Stephen's Concert Series is family friendly, and welcomes people of all ages. A reception follows the concert, and offers a chance to meet the artists. Admission is free.

Unique Fitness Studio at 25 Ripley Road

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It has been a nursing home, a hospital, a single family home and now…a gym?

Yes, a gym and personal training facility is the latest reincarnation of the building at 25 Ripley Road located at the corner of Ripley Road and Sohier Street.

With its 40-B condominium plans currently stalled in an appeal process with the state property owner Wilmarc Charles has turned the first floor of his property into Unique Fitness Studio, specializing in one-on-one personal training.

"Given the legacy of this building and its history a fitness studio fits perfectly," said Charles. And while he waits for the word from the state on his condo development and for the economy to improve, the in-home business was a viable alternative.

The first floor has several rooms of varying sizes where there is now fitness equipment. The large front room has been converted to a cardio room with treadmills, elliptical machines, stepmaster and rowing machine. The far end of the room has a large flat screen television.

What may seem out of the ordinary for a gym is the chandelier hanging from the ceiling and the fireplace on one wall.

"What gym has that?" Charles notes on the tour, adding having the business in a home gives clients something they may not get at other gyms. "Here it feels like you're at home, it's that type of atmosphere."

It feels especially like home for Charles and Steve Myers, a certified personal trainer, who is running the day-to day operations of the business, as both call 25 Ripley Road home. Charles and his two sons live on the second floor of the home. Myers is living on the third floor with his fiancée.

— Wilmarc Charles, Unique Fitness Studio

According to building inspector Bob Egan the fitness studio is an allowed use in residential area under home occupation, similar to a dentist, lawyers, or artist who works out of their home. He said the business was described to him as one-on-one personal training.

Charles and Myers met at the most appropriate of places: the Weymouth Club. The two struck up a friendship after Myers suggested a tweak to Charles's technique.

"A fitness studio is something I always wanted to do," Myers, 29, said. "I love working with people one on one. Our motto is a customized program achieves positive results."

Myers said the space affords his clients the space, privacy and support they need to achieve results.

"We want to give clients the whole picture, we're teaching them how to eat better, train harder and live better in order to achieve results," Myers said. Myers is accredited through the National Academy of Sports Medicine. Charles is currently working toward his certification in personal training and is in charge of the administration and management of the new business.

The focus at Unique Fitness Studio is to tailor a fitness and lifestyle program to each individual client. In an initial meeting, a client's goals will be discussed, medical history reviewed, lifestyle details (nutrition, current amount of exercise, occupation) and then a plan of action (from nutrition to exercise) will be developed.

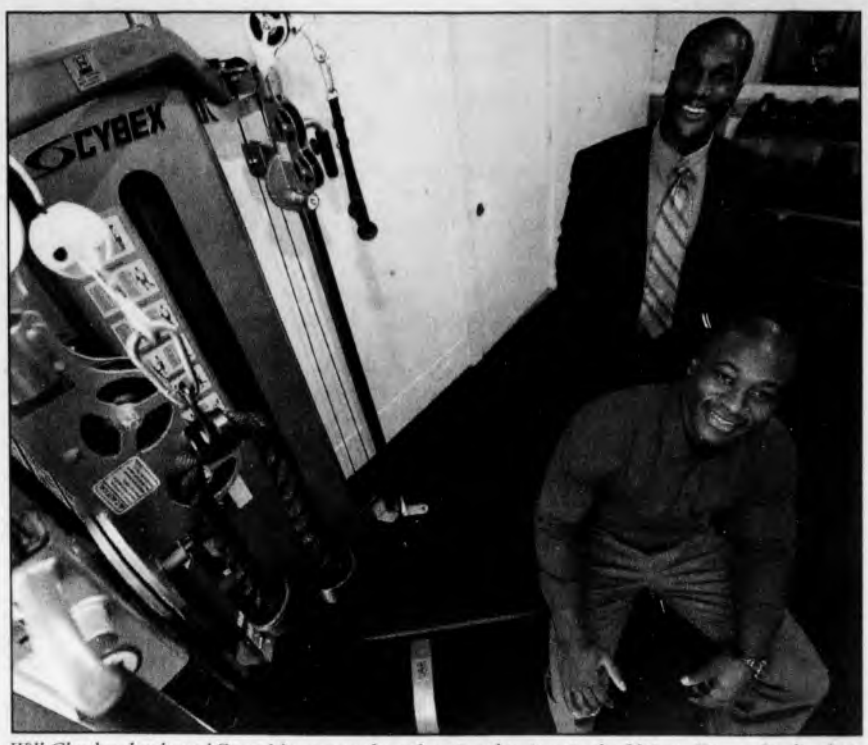
In order for a personal training experience to be successful, Myers said, the client and the trainer have to be a good fit for each other. He expects his clients to have a certain level of commitment to the program.

"One of the most important things is that you are here for a reason," Myers said, adding he expects to meet with clients more than once a week.

"I refuse to take someone's money to train with them once a week, because they are not going to see the results they want," Myers said, who wants to develop bonds with his clients and celebrate with them when they achieve milestones and ultimately their goals.

Both Charles and Myers hope to train all segments of the population from high school students to senior citizens.

In addition to the cardio room, there is a room for classes (kickboxing, mixed martial arts, yoga), a functional trainer, and a Smith machine.



"For some people (working out in a gym) is scary, we want to take that fear out of everybody," Charles said.

Unique Fitness Studio is open from 6a.m. to 9p.m. and welcome new clients to stop in from 5 to 8:30p.m.

"We're just going to have fun with it, it is all about having fun," Myers said.

Personal trainer Steve Myers of Unique Fitness Studio tells Derek Schwantner, 19, that he should keep knees parallel to his toes while doing squats. Unique Fitness Studio on Ripley Road has been open since Dec. 30 and specializes in one on one training with customized fitness regimens.

25 Ripley Road flashback . . .

The home at 25 Ripley Road has been in the news since the Housing Partnership Committee, a town committee dedicated to seeking out affordable housing opportunities, met with neighbors to discuss a proposal to convert the single-family home into several affordable housing units. When neighbors expressed concerns and opposition to the project, it was derailed, from a town perspective.

Cohasset resident Will Charles purchased the building and put forth a 40-B project very similar to what the town had proposed: a conversion to seven condominium units, two of which would be deemed affordable by state standards.

After going through the Zoning Board of Appeals this past spring with an aim to receive a comprehensive permit, his application was denied due to lack of evidence and complete plans. The application is currently under appeal with the state.

little way to cool the space down.

From his former position with the recreation department in Hanover, Carroll was familiar with the type of work the students at the South Shore Vo-Tech do. With the help of Kenny Thayer, Cohasset's representative to the SSVT school committee, they were able to get the HVAC team to come to Cohasset.

"The biggest thing is it gives kids hands-on experience…and it helps the town out with money when budgets are tight," Thayer said. The installation of the HVAC system, had the town hired a professional, would have run in the neighborhood of $20,000. With the help from the South Shore Vo-Tech students, the town is only responsible for the parts – about $4000. Carroll has raised about half of that money through the yard sale and other fundraising efforts.

The project will take about four weeks to complete and are about halfway through now.

Mulkern is one of two HVAC teachers at the South Shore Vo-Tech and is overseeing this project in Cohasset. There are a total of 40 students in the program, and about a dozen students work on the project at one time. James Morrill, his teacher in the HVAC specialty, stays in the shop with the other students.

With the new system Carroll is aiming to use the Recreation Center space more frequently by having more programs and activities there.

"The Recreation Department feels very fortunate to have a recreation center to help us better serve the Cohasset community. This project enables our ability to provide expanded year round recreational opportunities to all residents," Carroll said.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

The unenrolled

Political pundits seem always to be Republican, Democrat, Libertarian or part of another political designation.

Whether you watch the "regular" news on CBS, NBC, or ABC – or cable news on channels like CNN or Fox – guest "partisans" are always just that, speaking for their political party or group.

However, it is the great "unenrolled" masses that decide most elections, perhaps with the exception of primaries.

Not being unenrolled ourselves (most journalists tend to be very partisan and unfortunately for our profession this fact can show through in some political reporting) we wonder what the unenrolled masses are thinking about. Do they feel disenfranchised? Which way do they lean – right or left? What does being unenrolled really mean?

Here in Cohasset there is a healthy number of Republicans. We mention that because we live in Massachusetts where the Republican Party is very small and Democrats hold huge majorities in the House and Senate.

Cohasset has about 27 more registered Democrats than Republicans (1,223 to 1,196). However the lion's share of registered voters, some 3,045 (more than double those registered in either of the two major parties), are unenrolled. Those registered voters in Cohasset number 5,478.

Next door in Hingham, where there are 15,690 registered voters: 4,015 are registered as Democrats; 2,852, Republican and a whopping 8,784 are unenrolled.

It appears that unenrolled voters are growing in number. Since we have a two-party system, we wonder what this demographic could mean for the future.

Maybe there is too much "labeling" going on – meaning if you are Republican, you are too far right, and if you are Democrat, you are too far left. Maybe the unenrolled are all in the middle somewhere.

With partisan politics so prevalent at both the state and federal levels – there remains a big question mark as to how the unenrolled see things. Who is speaking for them?

As we approach one of the most exciting races for U.S. Senate in Massachusetts in memory — it is interesting to put our political thinking caps on about the prospects for our two-party system down the road.

Tuesday's ballot is a small one. There is only one race and three names (Scott Brown, Martha Coakley and Joseph L. Kennedy). Voting should only take a minute or two.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Town Hall. No matter what political party you are in (or not in) – make sure you cast your vote. The Town Clerk's office at Town Hall will stay open until 5 p.m. today (Friday) for absentee voting.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Alternative Energy Committee, Jan. 26, 7 p.m.

Are you interested in writing a column for the Cohasset Mariner? If so, we would love to hear from you! Please call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or email her at: mford@cnc.com

We would love to hear your ideas! Weekly, bimonthly, monthly or even quarterly submissions would be welcome.

Town Census for 2010

The Town Census for 2010 will be mailed to each household within the next several weeks. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through December 31, 2010. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible with a current rabies certificate although you may have recently renewed your 2009 license.

In addition to the census form, enclosed will be an informational form from the Veterans' Agent for veterans and their surviving spouse. If you did not receive your census, please contact the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

Griffin made wrong choice

TO THE EDITOR:

On Monday night, our own Town Manager Bill Griffin announced his choice for Police Chief Mark DeLuca. While normally I would trust that between Bill and our Board of Selectmen a choice would have been made that would have benefited our community, it didn't happen this time. While I admit that I have not met or spoken to Mark DeLuca I have investigated his background enough to know that the baggage he's bringing is not worth any amount of accolades he received at the Selectmen's Meeting. With three other qualified candidates that would have brought the same or more experience and no obvious controversies.

Mr. Griffin made the wrong choice. He is putting "our" town in risk of lawsuits that have followed and continue to follow Mr. DeLuca throughout his career. Mr. Griffin spoke about a fractured Police Department and he's right. It's been fractured since the Mark Haddad era and became even more so under the leadership of the preceding chief. To bring Mr. DeLuca here now will break it beyond repair. Let's hope that someone thought to increase the legal budget.

Upset over choice for chief

TO THE EDITOR:

A great injustice has been fostered onto the townspeople of Cohasset, yet again! Today it was announced the Selectman's choice for Police Chief.

It was not given to the person who has been on the force for 25 years. It was not given to the person who was born and brought up in this town, whose own father is a former police officer. It was not given to the person who received a UNANIMOUS vote from the selection committee.

No, the job was awarded to a person whose contract was not renewed by his last employer. A person who was having charges filed against him by the Haverhill Police Department until the matter was "settled." A person who has stepped down from the state boxing commission under a cloud of controversy. A person who probably doesn't know what Indian Rock is and has no clue where the Hillside is.

Our esteemed selectmen have chosen to ignore the vote of the group of townspeople given the job of interviewing the candidates and giving their recommendation. Their 4-0 vote meant nothing to the selectmen. These people, who gave their time because they care about this town, must feel that the whole process was a colossal waste of time. I know I do. I think the selectmen should just forgo the formation of anymore "Selection Committees."

Why waste anyone's time.

Chief process was open, fair

COMMENTARY

PAUL CARLSON

Bill deserves kudos for developing and managing a thoughtful and transparent process that produced an outstanding choice.

On Monday night's meeting of the Board of Selectmen, we heard about Town Manager Bill Griffin's choice for the new police chief. A supporter of one of the candidates who was not chosen made some negative comments about the transparency of the process. I just want to remind everybody that the process was highly transparent from beginning to end.

Shortly after former Police Chief, James Hussey resigned for personal reasons, Bill Griffin made a public announcement about the process he was going to use. First, there was an open advertisement, which brought in 80 replies. After personal interviews with several candidates, Griffin narrowed the field down to nine. Bill also publicly asked citizens to volunteer to be on his advisory committee. Four outstanding citizens stepped up to help. The committee helped Bill to focus on the key factors that should be used in the selection process.

Next, Griffin and his advisory committee interviewed the nine. They agreed on four finalists. The final four were interviewed by the committee and the selectmen in public sessions on Jan. 4 and 5. Members of the public were in attendance. Bill Griffin then canvassed his advisory committee and the selectmen. The successful candidate was one of two overwhelming favorites of those who heard all of the candidates. Bill then chose from those two. Throughout this process Griffin and the selectmen received numerous communications from members of the community.

In any selection process there will be those who will be disappointed and I respect that. However, it is manifestly unfair to characterize the process that Bill Griffin used in this case as flawed and opaque. Rather, Bill deserves kudos for developing and managing a thoughtful and transparent process that produced an outstanding choice. The town should also be grateful to the four citizens who helped Bill. Finally, I believe that Cohasset should be proud to have Mark DeLuca as our next police chief.

I am writing this note as a private citizen.

Paul Carlson, who is chairman of the Board of Selectmen, lives at 18 Old Coach Road.

HEALTH NOTES

Staying safe when temperature drops

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Frostnip is the freezing of the top layers of skin tissue and is normally reversible, mostly affecting cheeks, earlobes, fingers, and toes.

Well, the cold weather is on us and it's time for warnings about exposure to the cold. Here's a review of the problems and some of the ways we can deal with them according to the CDC (Center for Disease Control) and others.

Clothing for Cold Weather — Make sure to protect the ears, face, hands and feet in extremely cold weather. Mittens are warmer than gloves.

Wear several layers of loose clothing. Layering provides better insulation. Layers can also be removed if you become too hot. Be sure the outer layer of your clothing is tightly woven, preferably wind resistant, to reduce body-heat loss caused by wind. Wool, silk, or polypropylene inner layers of clothing will hold more body heat than cotton. Stay dry — wet clothing chills the body rapidly. Tight clothing reduces blood circulation. It's OK to wear sleeves that are snug at the wrist but, remember, warm blood needs to be circulated to the extremities. Footwear should be waterproof and insulated. By wearing a hat, you will keep your whole body warmer. It reduces the amount of body heat that escapes from your head. Excess perspiration will increase heat loss, so remove extra layers of clothing whenever you feel too warm.

Also, avoid getting gasoline or alcohol on your skin while deicing or using a snow blower. These volatiles in contact with skin greatly increase heat loss from the body. When working, avoid touching cold metal surfaces with bare skin. Move into warm locations periodically. Limit the amount of time outside on extremely cold days. It's a good idea to include a thermometer and chemical hot packs in your first aid kit.

Do not ignore shivering — an important first sign that the body is losing heat. Persistent shivering is a signal to return indoors.

Frostnip is the freezing of the top layers of skin tissue and is normally reversible, mostly affecting cheeks, earlobes, fingers, and toes. Symptoms include: numbness; top layer of skin becomes white and waxy; feels hard and rubbery, but deeper tissue is soft.

Freezing causes frostbite and Hypothermia. A victim is often unaware of frostbite until someone else points it out because the frozen tissues become numb and loss of feeling and color in affected areas, then grayish-yellow skin area, skin that feels unusually firm or waxy, numbness. Nose, ears, cheeks, chin, fingers, or toes, first affected, can permanently damage the body, and severe cases may require amputation. At first signs of redness or pain in any skin area, get out of the cold or protect any exposed skin. If you detect symptoms of frostbite, seek medical care. If immediate medical care is not available, proceed as follows: Get warm as soon as possible. Unless absolutely necessary, do not increase damage by walking on frostbitten feet or toes. Immerse the affected area in warm — not hot — water (the temperature should be comfortable to the touch for unaffected parts of the body). Or, warm the affected area using body heat. For example, the heat of an armpit can be used to warm frostbitten fingers. Do not cause more damage by rubbing the frostbitten area with snow or massage it at all. Don't use a heating pad, heat lamp, or the heat of a stove, fireplace, or radiator for warming. Affected areas are numb and can be easily burned.

Hypothermia — Since both frostbite and hypothermia result from exposure, it's important to determine whether someone also shows signs of hypothermia, a more serious medical condition involving abnormally low body temperature requiring emergency medical assistance. Body temperature that is too low affects the brain, making the victim unable to think clearly or move well. Thus, hypothermia is particularly dangerous because a person may not know it is happening and won't be able to do anything about it. Hypothermia occurs most commonly at very cold environmental temperatures, but can occur even at cool temperatures (above 40 F) if a person becomes chilled from rain, sweat, or submersion in cold water. Warning signs for hypothermia in adults are shivering/exhaustion, confusion/fumbling hands, memory loss/slurred speech, drowsiness. Hypothermia in infants is manifested by bright red, cold skin or very low energy. If you notice signs of hypothermia, call 911; it's an emergency.

Wind Chill — As the speed of the wind increases, it can carry heat away from your body much more quickly. When there are high winds, serious weather-related health problems are more likely, even when temperatures are only cool. A Wind Chill Chart (shows the difference between air temperature and perceived temperature and amount of time until frostbite occurs), Wind Chill Calculator and other useful information can be found at www.nws.noaa.gov/om/windchill.

Knowing what's wrong and what to do is an important part of protecting your health and the health of others. Awareness counts.

A woman ahead of her time

COURTESY ILLUSTRATION

Katharina was only five years old when her mother died, and her father delivered her to the Benedictine nuns.

Katharina von Bora - born January 29, 1499

Katharina von Bora, noblewoman, nun, was now a housewife and, eventually, mother of six children. The list of her successful enterprises is long.

On June 27, 1525, a former monk, Martin Luther, age 42 and a former nun, Katharina von Bora, age 26, were married in the castle church of Wittenberg, Germany. This was the "official" marriage. Several weeks earlier, realizing that their wedding would not be recognized by religious authorities, they devised a plan. Inviting a select number of friends to his home, they consummated their marriage before the "witnesses." Permission to wed in the church was granted.

The gold and ruby wedding ring the groom presented to the bride was engraved with the crucified Christ, a scourge pile, hammer, nails, rope and ladder. "Don't be frightened," he said. "As you are willing to live with me, know that our way will be a hard one. If you fear that you will not be able to measure up to such a harshness, then step back."

The controversial reformer Luther refused to accept wedding presents and money offered by the archbishop and other guests. Katharina, practical as always, accepted them in secret. Independent as always, she kept her maiden name.

Born into a noble family, Katharina was only five years old when her mother died, and her father delivered her to the Benedictine nuns. Although he later remarried and had three sons, Katharina was not invited to join the family. The convent would be her home and, fortunately, her school. She learned Latin, arithmetic, and writing, an extraordinary education for a woman in the 16th century. At the age of 15 she became a "Bride of Christ." Gardening and the healing power of herbs were her special interests.

From a merchant who made deliveries to the convent, the nuns received word of Martin Luther's passionate writings and later that 13 monks had resigned from the Black Monastery at Wittenberg. In 1523 Katharina was among the 12 nuns who fled the convent. Some returned to their families; others married. It seems that it was Katharina who decided upon Luther. Reluctant at first, he later agreed "Since I did not want to deny this last duty to my father who urged me in hope for offspring." It was, at first, a marriage of convenience, not of love. A little while later he wrote "God has ordained that I have pitied her."

Katharina von Bora, noblewoman, nun, was now a housewife and, eventually, mother of six children. The list of her successful enterprises is long. To augment Luther's income as professor and pastor, she leased the former cells of their abbey-home to students. As lady of the manor, she nursed the old and sick, even caring for plague victims while pregnant. She brewed her own beer to sell, raised hogs, cattle, and poultry; cultivated vegetables and flowers and kept beehives. As Luther's fame spread, the number of esteemed guests at her dinner table would often reach 50 or more. Apparently, according to accounts written at the time, theirs was a happy home.

Luther was hopeless with money. He never claimed royalties for the many books he wrote, nor took any lecture fees, saying "You received it for free, pass it on for free." Generously, he would empty his pockets to the poor, even giving away the money received after the christening of his son. But he was smart enough to listen to a good friend who advised "I recommend that you leave the upkeep of your home and family to your wife." And tender enough to confess later, "I would not give my Kaethe away for France with Venice in addition. I love my Kaethe more than myself."

At age 46, Katharina was the widow of the great reformer who had changed the Christian world forever. In his will he left everything to his wife, giving her power of attorney. The local judge, however, refused to honor Luther's wishes, and even appointed guardians for her children.

With no allowance, she was forced to spend the rest of her life petitioning friends in various cities for a place to live. In 1552, suffering a hip injury, she wrote her eldest son, a university student, begging him to come and care for his younger brothers and sister. She died before he arrived.

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

Carlsons share their overseas experiences

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

The winter holidays have come and gone; so much preparation for so short a time. With all the snow, we know that winter has arrived; makes me wish that I were still able to make snow angels and whiz down hill on my Flexible Flyer.

At one of our Wednesday gatherings last month we were pleased to have Paul and Tana Carlson entertain us with tales of their experiences in post-war communist Europe. Mr. Carlson had been invited to teach in Romania, a course on capitalism and the stock market. Under his tutelage their stock market was opened in 1996 for the first time since 1930.

The ladies were particularly interested in Mrs. Carlson's stories of every-day living in a country where the language and customs were different from those in the USA.

One week and a half before Christmas day, lunch was enjoyed at the Golden Living Center. After lunch, a vocalist who sang familiar tunes and Christmas songs entertained the group.

Our thanks go out to the Girl Scout Brownie Troop 4792 from whom we each received a gift and favors of candy at each place setting. It reminded me of when my troop of girls would do that for special occasions throughout the years.

On Dec. 30, a large group gathered at the Paul Pratt building (Cohasset Historical Society) to say goodbye to 2009 and to welcome 2010. The exhibits were of the Hagerty Company, which carried on business at the end of Parker Avenue. Refreshments were served under the direction of Anna Abbruzzese and were tasty as well as pleasing to the eye.

At the first Wednesday lunch of 2010, Carol Taylor and Linda Chuckran, from the Welch Company, spoke to us about housing options for seniors who wish to downsize. The Welch Company is opening a new facility in Marshfield in March of this year. We played "Name That Tune," with Linda at the piano. Prizes were awarded to the winners. A good time was had by all.

As we embark on a new year, wishes to out for joy and happiness to all.

Experiencing a different culture

Group of volunteers went to Guatemala

They also built a one-room addition with a Guatemalan family, whose sweat equity was combined with the First Parish team's labor and Common Hope's donation of materials.

Imagine that you could really understand what life was like for people in a very different culture. What are their daily concerns, hopes, and aspirations?

This was the privilege that a group of volunteers from First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset had when they traveled to Antigua, Guatemala, on a 10-day volunteer trip with Common Hope this past October.

They were welcomed into local homes in many of the villages that never see tourists. They worked side by side with the villagers and bilingual volunteers, learning how to accomplish significant tasks using very modest resources. There were also opportunities to share their skills and interests with the Guatemalans.

The connection with the villages around Antigua began 10 years ago when First Parish decided to help one of Common Hope's clients, a young boy named Salomon, by providing funding to help with Salomon's education. Salomon is now entering his last year of high school, which is a major accomplishment in Guatemala where the mandated education is only through sixth grade. Young people who are able to finish high school in Guatemala have access to opportunities equivalent to those available here in the States to college graduates.

Because of this initial connection, 15 other families also decided to become involved with Common Hope clients. This October trip, however, was the first opportunity for many of these families to meet these young people and their families. What a welcome they received! The packed dirt courtyards were swept clean and glinted in the mountain air. The entire family attended. Gifts were exchanged. Although the direct language skills were weak, the emotional connections were strong, and many stories were translated back and forth.

Kay met her sponsored child, Edy, who has special mechanical talents, and saw the robot he had built. Edy's father hand carved a gift of appreciation for Kay. Margie and Steve visited Manuel, who after 10 years of their support has "graduated" from Common Hope, and met his younger brother whom they are now sponsoring. Manuel is another example of a Common Hope success story. He graduated from high school and is now working as an accountant during the day as well as "paying it forward" by tutoring illiterate adults at night. He's planning on applying to university, which he could attend on the weekends. See this brief youtube interview with Manuel: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QgvUUj47qqE. Edy and Manuel are just two examples of the over 2700 Guatemalan children that Common Hope helps to attend school every year.

In addition to these emotional meetings, Common Hope helped coordinate a variety of activities for the group. Individuals joined social workers on family visits to their clients' homes to learn about their current challenges and successes. Alberto showed them his new coffee fields, his technique for picking out only the most flavorful fruit, and his roasting of the beans over his new indoor stove with external exhaust.

In the warehouse they sorted the school supplies and new black school shoes that had been donated in a drive before the team left for Guatemala. Tucked inside the shoes were notes dictated by the donors and translated by students from Peg Jordan's Cohasset High School Spanish classes.

The volunteers worked with children in occupational therapy classes, taught new math concepts to the teachers and students, led pre-school classes, volunteered at the Common Hope library, and offered a variety of classes ranging from yoga and international folk dancing to computer skills and photography.

They also built a one-room addition with a Guatemalan family, whose sweat equity was combined with the First Parish team's labor and Common Hope's donation of materials. The party celebrating the completion moved into the new room when a brief tropical downpour drove them inside. Although the rain on the new steel roof drowned out the conversations and songs, the cake was no less delicious.

About Common Hope

Created in 1986, the heart of Common Hope's work in Guatemala is education. They provide the necessary resources for over 2,700 children to attend school each year in seventeen villages outside of Antigua and Guatemala City. They understand that education is about more than books and uniforms – a comprehensive approach is critical to help students and their families to reach their full potential. For this reason they also focus their efforts on health care, housing, and family development.

The Common Hope Vision Team non-denominational program sends approximately 25 teams of volunteers to Guatemala each year with a three-fold mission: to connect needs and resources; to foster encounters that educate, provoke compassion, and challenge complacency; and to build relationships that inspire visitors to multiply Common Hope's work.

For more information about Common Hope view www.commonhope.org or contact: Molly Weisgram, Common Hope/Familias de Esperanza, 651-917-0917 or e-mail mollyw@us.commonhope.org

The First Parish Team will lead a Sunday program about their experience at 10 a.m. on Jan. 24, 2010, in the First Parish UU Parish House at 23 North Main St., Cohasset. All are welcome. Please consider bringing a toothbrush/toothpaste/floss for the collection for Common Hope. The team included First Parish members Pat Baird, Steve and Margie Brown, Bev Burgess, Dee Lehner, Jack and Carol Martin, and Kay Mixon.

A view of one of the town's gems: Cohasset Harbor. Residents are urged to attend a panel discussion Jan. 28 on harbor issues.

CSCR reminds residents to attend Jan. 28 talk

By Terry MacCormack
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Center for Student Coastal Research invites all concerned residents of Cohasset to attend its groundbreaking panel discussion into the critical issues that face our town's harbor. The panel discussion will take place on Thursday, Jan. 28 at the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Residence on Government Island. The panel will be moderated by Mr. Jack Buckley, a teacher at Cohasset High School and CSCR's president.

He will pose discussion-provoking questions to the five member panel, which includes Frank Carey, Laure Gibbons, Paul Figuerido, David Marks,and Chuck Peterson, who will share their personal views.

The panelists' answers and subsequent discussions will be incorporated into future CSCR projects. At the end of the discussion, attendees will be invited to pose questions to the panel.

A preview of some of the questions that will be asked on the 28th will be featured in next week's Mariner. However, a list of topics that will likely be broached follows:

- Freshwater and Pollution in Cohasset Harbor
- Priorities of the Town and Community
- Changes in the Harbor over Time
- The Harbor as a Historical and Cultural Asset

CSCR's hope is that the discussion will increase the town's awareness of the issues confronting Cohasset Harbor. In keeping with that hope, the organization invites all town residents to come out on the 28th to allow their voices to be heard and to better understand what is for our coastal community, a very important topic.

Water theme for Art Center Exhibition

Water is the theme of South Shore Art Center's current Bancroft Gallery exhibition through February 21st. The exhibition, which opens on Friday, Jan. 15, was selected by Boston artist Jennifer Wood and represents recent work of Art Center Gallery Artists.

Juror Jennifer Wood wrote: "I chose the most refreshing, authentic and accomplished work. SSAC is a gem that offers artists and their audience a very valuable resource and home." Wood award prizes to Valerie Forte Vitali of Scituate (first prize); Gretchen Moran of Plymouth (second prize); Beverly Rippel of Easton (third prize). Honorable mentions were received by Becky Haletky (Pembroke), Stephanie Roberts-Camello (Pembroke), Patricia A. McCarthy (Scituate), Pam Golden (Marshfield), Dianne Panarelli Miller (Abington), Susan Denniston (Scituate) and Nancy Colella (Norwell).

With today's edition, this newspaper continues its monitoring of local state representatives and senators and begins coverage of the 2010 Massachusetts legislative session with the weekly Beacon Hill Roll Call report. This feature is a clear and concise compilation of the voting records of area state representatives and senators at the Statehouse.

Beacon Hill Roll Call provides an unbiased summary of bills and amendments, arguments from floor debate on both sides of the issue and each legislator's vote or lack of vote on the matter. This information gives readers an opportunity to monitor their elected officials' actions on Beacon Hill. Many bills are reported on in their early stages and readers often have the opportunity to contact their legislators and express an opinion prior to the measure being brought up for final action.

Beacon Hill Roll Call is provided by Bob Katzen who has covered the Legislature for 35 years. He has been providing this feature to hundreds of newspapers across the state since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on four roll calls from the week of January 4-8. There were no roll call votes in the Senate last week.

EDUCATION CHANGES INCLUDING LIFTING CHARTER SCHOOL CAP (H 4410)

House 119-35, approved a lengthy and complicated 34-page bill making changes to the state's education system including implementing new mechanisms designed to improve underperforming schools. The measure abolishes the current cap on the number of charter schools allowed in the lowest performing school districts. Another key provision includes creation of Innovation Schools that are district schools with increased autonomy and flexibility.

Supporters said that this long overdue bill would make major reforms to a system that has not had an overhaul for many years. They noted that this legislation must be signed into law soon in order for the state to be in compliance with federal regulations and be eligible for its portion of up to $250 million in federal education grants.

Some opponents said that the bill is just another temporary Band-Aid solution to an ever growing list of problems with the state's school system. Others said that the legislation is irresponsibly being rushed through the House and argued that most legislators have little or no idea what is in it.

The Senate has approved a different version of the measure. A six-member House-Senate conference committee has been appointed to work out a compromise version.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

Y

CONTINUE SESSION BEYOND 9 P.M.

House 129-26, suspended rules to allow the House to meet beyond 9 p.m. and continue until midnight if necessary.

Supporters of rule suspension said that it is important to remain in session to finish action on the education reform bill.

Opponents of rule suspension said that it is irresponsible for the House to act on bills late at night while taxpayers are asleep. They noted that lengthy, complicated amendments are being approved without debate and argued that most legislators have no idea what is in the bill.

The session continued and eventually adjourned at 12:11 a.m. (A "Yes" vote is for allowing the session to continue beyond 9 p.m. A "No" vote is against continuing beyond 9 p.m.).

Y

House 121-33, approved a Democratic-sponsored amendment calling for a study of the possibility of increased state funding of charter schools. The amendment replaced a GOP proposal that would simply increase state funding of charter schools.

Under current law, when a student leaves a school district to attend a charter school, the state reimburses the district 100 percent for the first year, 60 percent for the second, 40 percent for the third and zero in subsequent years. The Republican proposal would have expanded state funding by providing 35 per cent reimbursement in the fourth, fifth and sixth years.

Supporters of the study said that the cost of increased reimbursement is unknown and argued that the entire issue needs further study. They noted that the state is facing another budget deficit and simply cannot afford additional reimbursement at any price.

Opponents of the study said that it is simply a clever way for legislators to avoid a vote on increased reimbursement itself. They said that the study would never be conducted and that reimbursement would never be increased. They noted that local funding of charter schools is taking away much needed money from public schools which are already struggling.

The roll call vote is on the amendment to study increased reimbursement. (A "Yes" vote is for studying increased reimbursement. A "No" vote is against the study and in most, if not all cases, supports increased reimbursement).

Y

House 118-37, approved a Democratic-sponsored amendment that would require the commissioner of elementary and secondary education to study and then report to the Legislature on the best method that the state should use to determine the resources necessary to achieve the state's educational goals. The amendment would replace a Republican-sponsored proposal that would skip that first step and simply create a committee and hire an independent consultant to determine the necessary resources.

Supporters of the study said that the state should take one step at a time and first ensure that there is general agreement on what the state's educational goals are and what constitutes a quality education. Following that determination, a committee could determine the resources needed to reach the goals.

Opponents of the study said that it will simply delay the very important task of finding the resources to fund a quality education. They argued that the state should skip the study and get right to the issue of funding and resources.

The roll call vote is on the amendment to study the best method to determine the resources necessary to achieve the state's educational goals. (A "Yes" vote is for studying the best method. A "No" vote is against the study and in most, if not all cases, supports skipping that step and simply moving immediately to determine the resources necessary to achieve the state's educational goals).

What you need to know about safe ice

By Ted Carroll
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

With the winter season upon us, residents of all ages look for outdoor areas for ice skating. When we start getting consistently cold weather Elm's Meadow, located at Cushing Road and Spring Street, will be prepared by the DPW for skating, and lights, until 9:30 p.m., are also on for night skating. Elm's Meadow offers a regulated, shallow area for safe skating.

However, as with any outdoor skating area, the ice should be tested before venturing on it. There are specific ways to test ice safety, which do not include throwing debris such as rocks, sticks, etc. on the ice making it hazardous for everyone.

Rather, test the ice by the edge of a skating area by carefully stepping out 6- to 8-inches, proceeding carefully to about 2 feet out from the edge only if the ice appears to be safe under your weight. Chip the ice with a tool or stick until you can ascertain a rough idea as to the thickness of the ice. You should always have another person with you when doing this.

Many outdoor skating areas do not have the same thickness of ice universally over the area. Always be on guard for soft spots or thin ice that manifest from underground springs, drain pipes, etc. This is especially true at Elm's Meadow by the Spring Street/Cushing Road corner of the area due to drains off the hillside.

General safe ice standards

- Ice safe for: 0-30 degrees; 30-40 degrees; 40-50 degrees
- Single skaters: 1-3/4 inches; 2-2/4 inches; 6 inches
- Couples: 2-2/4 inches; 3-3/4 inches; 8 inches
- Crowds: 3-3/4 inches; 4-3/4 inches; 12 inches

Stay off saltwater ice!

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only; for snow ice, add 2 inches; for waterlogged ice, add 3 inches; if skates cut it, go home! Saltwater in mild climates is always treacherous — keep away from it. Also, thickness when temperatures are 40-50 degrees are safe depths for short periods of time only.

Letters to the Editor

Wind turbines don't comply — must deny

To the Editor:

I was astounded to hear about all the ways the CCI wind turbine project violates the town's wind bylaw and zoning bylaws, and yet somehow still has life with the planning board. Among other violations:

- The turbines will generate about 10 to 20 percent more noise than allowed for at the property lines, particularly next to the residences being built at Avalon.

The developer readily acknowledges this, yet expects the planning board to look beyond it.

- The two turbines are between 250 and 300 feet too close to residential lot lines, allowing them to fall on residentially-zoned property against the very specific wording of the bylaw. The developer readily acknowledges this, yet expects the planning board to look beyond it.
- According to one drawing, in the best case one turbine will infringe the industrial zoning setback by 30 feet, and in the worst case it will hang over the lot line by 8 feet.

These are significant and material violations that everyone seems to agree on, without even going into the extensive concerns regarding safety, noise and shadow flicker that fly in the face of our bylaws and industry standards.

Why then is this application still alive? How it got this far is anyone's guess, but it's time for the planning board to uphold the town's bylaws and deny this project unanimously once and for all. Otherwise, our bylaws aren't worth the paper they are printed on and our votes aren't worth a nickel.

Common sense lacking with turbine project

To the Editor:

Last week I attended the Planning Board's hearing regarding the CCI-Energy wind project and although there were many different facets that could be described as "eye opening" there was one moment that stood out to me above all else.

No, it wasn't the atrocious letter that was sent to the Committee Chairman, nor was it the Chairman's highly confrontational tone. The point that stood out to me was far more subtle and occurred while the applicant's attorney was reading off the myriad of financial considerations the company was willing to pay to the town of Cohasset. As Mr. Ingber was reading through his laundry list, I looked over and saw a member of Cohasset's police force standing there, and the irony wasn't lost on me.

In a move touted to save money, the safety of the residents of Cohasset is being diminished by the closing of our police station at night. Yet here we sat listening to a business offering all sorts of small incentives to get on the Planning Board's good graces. Let's be perfectly clear, the reason why CCI-Energy is offering concessions to the town is that because they will be making a ton of money off of these wind turbines. Neighboring towns, Hull and Scituate, are both expected to save in excess of $300,000 a year with their smaller turbines, yet Cohasset is expected to be happy with a closed police station and a new sidewalk. As I looked at the officer standing there, I kept thinking, "Where's the common sense?"

The Town of Cohasset shouldn't stand for diminished protection not when there's a logical solution staring us in the face. The meeting revealed that the project is in direct violation of a residential set back bylaw. I believe the town should embrace the letter of the law, reject this current project and put forth a smarter more reasonably sized project in which the entire town reaps the benefits. I ask you, do a few shrubs and a sidewalk equal the security of being able to maintain round-the-clock police protection?

Full body scanners at airports

To the Editor:

A commentary column in last week's Mariner about scanners at airports suggests that the possibility of saving lives from terrorism doesn't justify the loss of personal freedom (the freedom not to have one's nakedness under one's clothing revealed on the airport scanning screen). Willingness to be screened is judged to be cowardly and un-American.

What nonsense! We are at war with terrorism; terrorism that seeks to bring down planeloads of people, terrorism that already has succeeded in bringing down the Twin Towers with 4,000 deaths, bringing down at least three planeloads of passengers and the deaths of several hundred in various other incidents over the last few years. There is nothing cowardly or un-American about co-operating with an examination that might save the lives of 200 to 400 fellow passengers; it's just one of the sensible precautions that need be taken to avoid losing the war, bit by bit.

Granted, the probability of a terrorist being on any one plane is slight, nor can a full body scan be expected to reveal all the tricks that a terrorist might employ, but it's just one of the inconveniences we need accept in order to be the ultimate victors.

Having been a soldier many years ago, I seem to remember that being thoughtlessly fearless is akin to terminal foolishness, as well as likely to endanger ones comrades. Whether civilian or soldier, surely our duty to country and comrades is to accept some discipline, exercise self-discipline, and co-operate with common sense precautions. A person is no use dead, nor is a planeload of dead.

Besides, the scanning personnel need a few good laughs to relieve the long boring day.

LWV to host forum on running for local office

This event is relevant for anyone contemplating involvement in public service.

A sentiment one often hears expressed in trying times – such as several readily called to mind over the past year – is, how did these officials come to be making these decisions? The most positive result of these ruminations might be a proliferation of new names on the ballot, residents motivated by current events to step forward and get involved in the political process. A favorite motto of the League is "Democracy is not a spectator sport," and more recently, "Don't just sit there – run!"

The League of Women Voters of Hingham will present "How to Run for Local Public Office" at 2 p.m., on Sunday, Jan. 24. This forum, which will take place in the Whiton Room of Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St., is offered by the League as a public service and will feature a panel of local officials – elected and appointed – who will summarize their personal motivations and experiences, and then answer questions from the audience regarding the process of running for public office, from obtaining signatures to holding signs on election day.

The audience is invited to submit questions for the panelists at the event; the League also welcomes questions submitted by email any time before the event, at the Voter Education address below.

This event is relevant for anyone contemplating involvement in public service. There is no fee but space is limited. Email Kathleen Nugent at voteredu-cation@hingham.ma.lwvnet.org if interested in attending.

Special State Election

Voters will choose new U.S. senator Tuesday

Tuesday voters will choose among candidates, Republican state Sen. Scott Brown, state Attorney General Martha Coakley, a Democrat, and Libertarian Joseph L. Kennedy to fill the U.S. Senate seat vacated by the death of U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy in August. Sen. Paul Kirk was appointed to fill the seat on an interim basis. In Cohasset, the polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Town Hall.

Brown: 'I don't owe anybody anything'

By John Hilliard
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

The Republican candidate to succeed the late Sen. Ted Kennedy said he'd be a vote to take a proposal for health care reform back to the drawing board because he said the plan could worsen care already available to Massachusetts residents.

"For this particular instance, for us to subsidize what other states have not done at a higher cost and higher taxation and lesser care along the lines for the people of our state, I can't support it," said state Sen. Scott Brown, R-Wrentham, 50, one of five Republicans elected to the state Senate.

Last month, Brown beat fellow Republican Jack E. Robinson for his party's nomination to replace the late Sen. Ted Kennedy. Now Brown faces Attorney General Martha Coakley, Democrat, and Libertarian Candidate Joseph L. Kennedy in the Jan. 19 special statewide election.

Brown has been in the state senate since beating a Democrat in a special election in 2004. Before the state senate, the Wakefield High School graduate served three terms in the House, and started his political career as a selectman and an assessor in Wrentham.

He's also a lieutenant colonel in the Massachusetts Army National Guard.

On health care, Brown said each state should be left to handle provisions for its residents, like Massachusetts did when it required coverage beginning in 2007. He said the state could share its programs with other states and replicate them, and work with other congressional delegations if federal aid would be needed to get state-level health care plans in place. Imposing a federal-level insurance plan may mean Massachusetts residents could see lesser care and higher cost, he said.

Brown contrasts himself with Coakley, whom Brown said would vote with Senate Democrats if elected. He said he'd operate as an independent thinker that Republicans and Democrats could work with to pass legislation.

Brown said the national GOP has supported his Senate campaign with technology and phone lists — and former Republican candidate Sen. John McCain endorsed him recently — but Brown's campaign has largely been on its own.

"I don't owe anybody anything. I never have. The Republican Party isn't throwing ... tens of thousands of dollars at this race. While I have Sen. McCain's endorsement, which I greatly appreciate, I don't owe anybody anything," said Brown.

Brown said the third-party candidate, Kennedy, who is not related to the famous political family, will not affect the election, and noted that "this race is clearly between Martha and me."

Before the state senate, the Wakefield High School graduate served three terms in the House, and started his political career as a selectman and an assessor in Wrentham.

Brown said he was unclear of Libertarian Kennedy's positions: "I don't know much about him, to be honest with you. If his name was Bob Smith, would he be running?" Brown asked.

While abortion coverage proved a sticking point lawmakers developing federal health care reform, Brown said the positions he and Coakley take on abortion aren't pivotal to the Massachusetts Senate race. Both support Roe vs. Wade, but Brown opposes late-term abortions and lowering the age of consent to have one.

"Abortion really isn't a large part of this race. It's not something that is important at this point, because the major issues are dealing with taxation, deficit spending and where our national security interests are in terms of keeping our country safe," said Brown.

Brown also noted that whether a candidate for a federal judgeship was pro-life or pro-choice holds "very little importance to me" and would have voted to appoint Supreme Court Justice Sonia Sotomayor. He would not want a judge "legislating from the bench."

Brown said he opposes using taxpayer dollars to provide civil trials for suspected enemy combatants, such as 23-year-old Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab, the Nigerian man investigators said tried to bring down a Northwest Airlines flight with explosives he smuggled on board. Brown, who is a military attorney with the National Guard, did support offering military counsel to suspects.

He said he's taken positions that put him at odds with the Republican party, such as supporting stem cell research and working to maintain funding for the METCO program. METCO, which allows students from Boston to attend school in participating districts, sends students schools in Brown's district, including Wellesley, Needham, Natick, Sherborn and Wayland.

Brown supports education reform measures like No Child Left Behind, he said, but would seek federal funding to support schools' efforts to comply with requirements.

He criticized the number of taxes being levied during the recession at state and federal levels, which will "dramatically hurt people," he said, and supported spending limits and tax cuts.

Brown wouldn't answer whether he'd eye a run at a state-level office such as state treasurer or attorney general, should his Senate campaign fall short, noting he'd have to discuss any future campaigns with his family.

"I'm not going to say anything because I'm so focused on this particular race. It's in 15 days — if you want to speak to me in 16 days, that's great," Brown said earlier in the month.

Coakley: Record of defending rights marks tenure in politics

By David Ertischek
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Massachusetts Attorney General and U.S. Senate candidate Martha Coakley, 56, who was the Middlesex County District Attorney from 1998-2006, has championed herself as a fighter for civil rights, citing how she led Massachusetts' federal lawsuit against the Defense of Marriage Act.

"Frankly, our government shouldn't be discriminative," said Coakley, who feels that same-sex couples should be given the same benefits of any opposite sex couple.

Like the late Ted Kennedy, the man whose Senate seat she's hoping to win, Coakley would like to see "a pathway to citizenship" for immigrants who are working hard to realize the American dream. "I've always treated people equally regardless of their (legal or illegal) status. It's a disgrace we haven't done it yet."

Coakley touched on many issues while meeting with a GateHouse Media editorial board in December, including the health care bill, which she believes should not sets women's reproductive rights back.

There are two goals to reforming health care, said Coakley: coverage for everybody and cutting costs.

Coakley said her office started a health care division when the state implemented statewide health coverage.

"There will be a bill. ... I'm in favor of a strong public option," said Coakley. "Now we have to figure out how to pay for it and how to keep costs down."

There are two goals to reforming health care, said Coakley: coverage for everybody and cutting costs.

Reforming health care should include determining how much health care costs, as she said two people could get varying rates from the same doctor for the same procedure.

"If you receive cancer treatment or a checkup, you don't know how much it costs."

She added she's against cuts to Medicare, too.

Coakley said while she was Middlesex District Attorney and Massachusetts Attorney General, her offices reached out to help immigrants when dealing with issues such as domestic violence, regardless of their residence status. Her offices have also gone after companies exploiting non-legal workers, said Coakley.

Originally from North Adams, Coakley said she has worked to protect children from predators by training police on how to track digital evidence online.

She also touted a $450 million Big Dig settlement now in trust, which can be used to repair Big Dig problems.

Coakley said Massachusetts' public transportation infrastructure is out of date and is insufficient particularly in urban areas. She said local and federal officials should work hand in hand to get federal money to improve public transportation.

Coakley was asked about what she would've done if she were the Cape and Islands DA representing Chappaquiddick in 1969 when Kennedy's car was found in a tidal pool with Mary Jo Kopechne's body still in it. Kennedy told officials he was in the crash the night before while driving Kopechne home and pled guilty to leaving the scene of an accident after causing injury. Coakley said with modern-day media there would be a "fuller investigation and more accountability," but didn't go into detail of how she would've handled the situation.

When talking about Kennedy, she said, "People loved that he was a liberal lion, but also that he understood Massachusetts."

As the country has looked back on Kennedy's legacy, Coakley was asked to look into the future and talk about her own legacy, "I want to be known as someone who was fair, competent and a good advocate for the bread and butter issues of constituent services. And that I did my best."

Kennedy: 'Heck of a lot closer to an average person'

By John Hilliard
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Libertarian candidate Joseph Lewis Kennedy — no relation to the famed political clan —says he offers a fiscally conservative, socially accepting alternative to the two major party candidates vying for the state's vacant Senate seat.

"Somebody has do it. If I didn't do it, we'd be stuck with a government that would increase spending. Both candidates are pro-spending, both candidates are pro-health care in some kind of government-run (form)," said Kennedy during a recent meeting with GateHouse Media New England editors.

Kennedy, 38, is currently vice president of architecture and user experience at the financial giant State Street in Boston. He said his work experience includes managing staff in the U.S., China, India and Europe, and that he knows how to build an efficient office, which he can apply to government.

According to his campaign Web site, the Dedham resident was born in Boston to a Puerto Rican mother and Portuguese father, then given up for adoption and raised by the senior minister of Trinity Lutheran Church in Worcester. He graduated with a computer science degree from Clark University, his site says.

Kennedy is running against Attorney General Martha Coakley, a Democrat residing in Medford, and Republican State Sen. Scott Brown of Wrentham. The special election is set for Tuesday, Jan. 19.

"The priority I have in going into government is to eliminate as much pork as there is from the entire the system."
— Joseph L. Kennedy

Kennedy has raised about $11,000 and has about 170 volunteers with varying degrees of involvement in his campaign, he said.

"I'm an ordinary person. I sit in a cube ... any single day of the week, my boss can come into my office and he can fire me," said Kennedy, who drew a contrast with his two main rivals.

"When you talk about the average person, I'm a heck of a lot closer to an average person than an attorney general or state senator," said Kennedy, who said he'd serve for only two terms if elected.

Kennedy said he'd work to reduce taxes, earmarks and spending as ways to free up more money here in Massachusetts. He said the state is a "loser" when it comes to federal aid: He said the Bay State gets 80 cents back on every dollar collected by the federal government.

"The priority I have in going into government is to eliminate as much pork as there is from the entire the system," said Kennedy.

Libertarian US Senate candidate Joseph L. Kennedy sits for a photo at GateHouse Media's Needham office in December 2009.

Though a Libertarian, Kennedy said he'd caucus with the Republicans if elected to the Senate.

He opposes a federally-backed health insurance plan, calling it "inappropriate and irresponsible" to expand coverage before costs are reduced. He supported tort reform, eliminating the anti-trust exemption for insurance companies and other steps to reduce the expense of medical care.

"The big issue is neither the Massachusetts legislature or the federal government has taken the time, in any way shape or form, to address cost (for health care)," he said.

He called Social Security a "Ponzi scheme," because there's no money budgeted for it, other than what's paid into the system. He supported an increase in the retirement age and the option for people to drop out of the system to privately fund their own retirements, he said.

"You have to give people the opportunity to be responsible" for themselves, said Kennedy.

He said people who need medical care can go to an emergency room, and prohibitive emergency room bills for the uninsured can be reduced by addressing medical costs. Tax cuts would also allow for more support to charitable organizations that would offer aid.

"People neglect that. People ignore the fact that these people are cared for" via emergency room care, he said.

Kennedy called himself a "pro-peace guy," and would pull back most troops from Afghanistan and Iraq, and focus on Pakistan, he said.

"We can't be all over the world being the police," he said.

Kennedy said that efforts to cap carbon dioxide emissions don't affect other contributors to global warming, such as water vapor and methane, he said. He's concerned about published reports that some of the data supporting the extent of global warming has been falsified by some climate researchers.

"What we're putting into place ... doesn't address or cap it, all it does is tax it," said Kennedy of carbon emission reductions.

The candidate said he wouldn't have run if former Congressman Joseph P. Kennedy chose to run for Senate because their similar names could confuse voters. The Libertarian Kennedy also said his father is friends with the Kennedy family, and didn't want to upset that relationship in case the former congressman ran a campaign.

In 2002, Libertarian Michael Cloud collected 369,807 votes against Sen. John Kerry, but Libertarians didn't mount a campaign against Sen. Ted Kennedy four years later. The last Libertarian candidate to run for senate — Robert J. Underwood of Springfield — earned 93,713 votes in 2008 against Sen. John Kerry. By comparison, Republican challenger Jeff Beatty collected 926,044 votes that year.

— Mark Olivieri, publisher

Mathis has more than 20 years of newspaper and online experience on his résumé. He began his career at MPG Newspapers in 1985, where he served as community editor for several Reporter newspapers, as well as sports editor for the Old Colony Memorial during his 12-year tenure with MPG.

Mathis joined Community Newspaper Company in 1997 and has served many roles, from editor of several Mariner newspapers to his previous role of senior managing editor for 13 newspapers and Web sites in Marshfield.

"Over his career Greg has shown great dedication and passion toward local journalism," said GateHouse Media New England South publisher Mark Olivieri. "In the past two years as publisher, I have admired the additional responsibilities and leadership role Greg has voluntarily assumed in our editorial department. Greg has been a pioneer in our continued transition to a print and online media company."

Mathis, a longtime Plymouth resident, said he is looking forward to the challenges ahead.

"We'll continue to look for ways to make our newspapers better, as well as evolve in the Web world with our online products," said Mathis. "It's an exciting time to be in the media business."

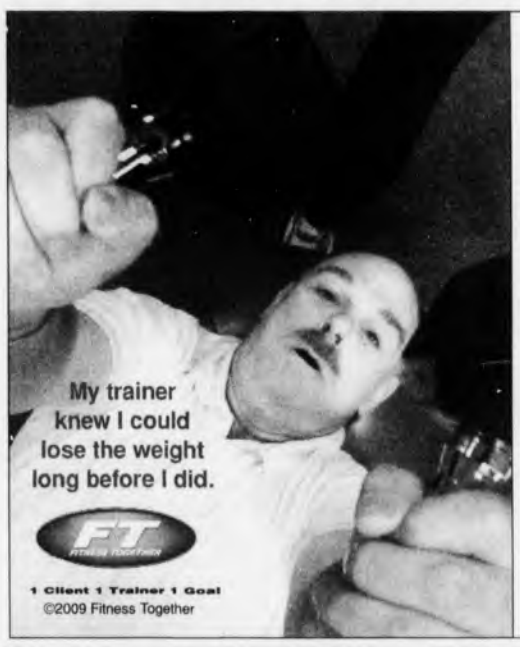
Six so far pull papers for Town Election

Candidates have until Feb. 18 to return their papers to the Town Clerk's office.

It has been a busy week at the Town Clerk's office. Six potential candidates pulled nomination papers within the last week, but no races have shaped up.

One candidate, Paul Carlson for Selectmen, has returned his nomination papers to the clerk's office. Citizens have until Feb. 18 to return their papers to the Town Clerk's office.

Abigail Alves and Andrew Quigley have taken out papers for seats on the Recreation Commission. Alves, who is running for re-election, is seeking the five-year term. Quigley was appointed to the Recreation Commission in 2009 and is running for a one-year seat to complete an unexpired term.



A newcomer to the Library Trustees, Henry Rattenbury, took out papers to seek one of three three-year terms on that board.

James Dow pulled papers for a three-year term on the Sewer Commission. Sean Cunning, who currently holds that seat, is not seeking re-election. Dow ran for Sewer Commission two years ago and lost to sitting sewer commissioner Wayne Sawchuk.

Nomination papers for the annual Town Election for 2010 became available on Thursday, Jan. 7. The last day to take out nomination papers is Thursday, Feb. 18. In order to hold an elected office, one must be a registered voter of the town. Citizens are not running for office until they take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies signatures.

Consistent improvement

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

Despite opening the season with a pair of losses, the combined Norwell/Cohasset gymnastics team has seen improvements. After losing to Carver/Sacred Heart last Wednesday to start the winter season, the girls on an individual level saw a few improvements, hoping to carry that momentum into their upcoming competitions.

One day after losing to the combined Carver/Sacred Heart team, Norwell/Cohasset lost, 124.6 to 122.1, to the combined Pembroke/Silver Lake squad.

Freshman Maddie Ward from Norwell won the all-around with a score of 31.65, while sophomore Amber Silvia from Cohasset took third place with a score of 30.40. Junior captain Samantha Sprague (Norwell) came in first on the floor with an 8.6 and second on bars with an 8.3.

Gymnastics

Ward placed third on the bars (8.1) and tied for third on the vault (8.0). Silvia placed third on floor with an 8.1 and second on vault with an 8.1 Freshman Melinda Dignam from Cohasset and Emily Kuhn from Norwell helped the team out on vault with scores of a 7.2 and 7.45, respectively.

In Norwell/Cohasset's first competition of the year, a 123 to 121.4 loss to Carver/Sacred Heart, a number of Norwell and Cohasset girls turned in impressive performances. Ward placed second in the all-around with a score of 32.40, while Silvia came in third place with a score of 30.30. Ward also came in second on bars (8.4), third on beam (8.2), and her and Silvia tied for third on the floor with a score of 8.1. Cohasset's Betsy Crawford finished fourth on the floor with an 8.0. Sprague placed first on the floor with an 8.8, and she came in first on the bars with an 8.5.

Top of the League

Girls knock off unbeaten Hull

By John Johnson
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

HULL — High school basketball enthusiasts have been eager for the girls teams from Hull and Cohasset to square off.

After much anticipation, the pivotal South Shore League matchup between the undefeated squads was over in 94 seconds.

That's all the time it took for Cohasset to score the game's first nine points behind some can't miss-shooting and a stifling trap defense that forced Hull mistakes.

The end result was a 57-38 Cohasset victory, which improved the Skippers record to 9-0, and 6-0 in the South Shore League. Hull (7-1) suffered its first defeat.

"I think it was just one of those nights where we were hot, and they were cold shooting the ball, and that was the difference," said Cohasset coach John Levangie. "We got a few breaks early. Hull is a good team, but we had a few more shots go in."

Cohasset received double-figure scoring from Meredith Kelly (20), Tori Lehr (13) and Sam Crough (11). Lindsey Davis dished out eight assists for the victors, while Carli Haggerty scored six in the decisive first half. Senior captains Ashleigh Condon (13) and Julie Manning (nine) led Hull, and junior forward Nicole Heavern added eight points for the Pirates.

"I think it was just one of those nights where we were hot, and they were cold shooting the ball, and that was the difference."

— Cohasset coach John Levangie.

After Kelly opened the scoring with a pair of free throws, Haggerty followed with a mid-range jumper, and Crough buried two high-arc jumpers only 14 seconds apart, the second a 3-pointer that gave Cohasset its 9-0 lead. The lead stretched to 13-1, and a layup by Anna Seraikas gave the Skippers a 24-11 lead after the first quarter.

Girls Basketball

The Pirates showed signs of life in the second quarter after two inside moves by Manning, and seemed content to take a 10-point deficit into halftime until Cohasset's Rachel Fredey banked a 3-pointer off the glass as time expired for a 33-20 halftime edge.

"That shot by Rachel as the buzzer sounded was huge," Levangie said. "It was nice to get out of the gate fast. We were happy with that. Sometimes it swings the other way after you get a big lead, but our kids didn't let that happen."

Hull's comeback hopes were dashed quickly in the second half when the Skippers opened on an 8-0 run, capitalizing on three straight baskets by Lehr and an inside move by Kelly. Lehr scored 10 of her 13 points in the second half.

"They were just on and were just off tonight," said Hull coach Liz Londergan, whose club was victimized by 23 turnovers. "It's as simple as that. When you play Cohasset you need to play a perfect game, and we just didn't take care of the ball."

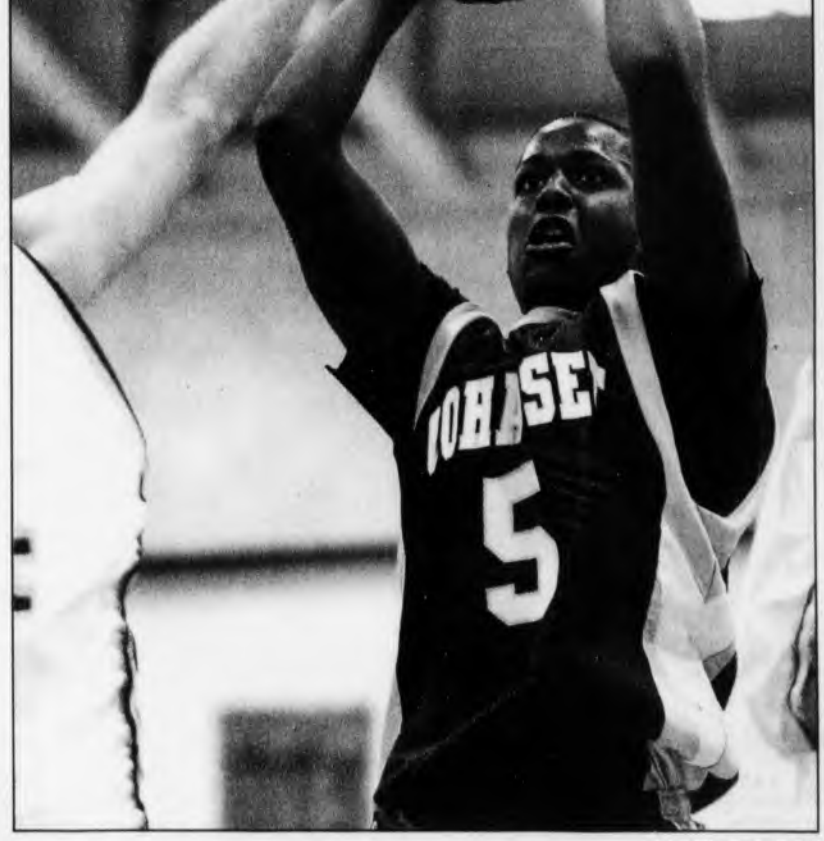
The Green Wave (6-4, 4-2 SSL) are coming off a 56-33 win over East Bridgewater on Tuesday night.

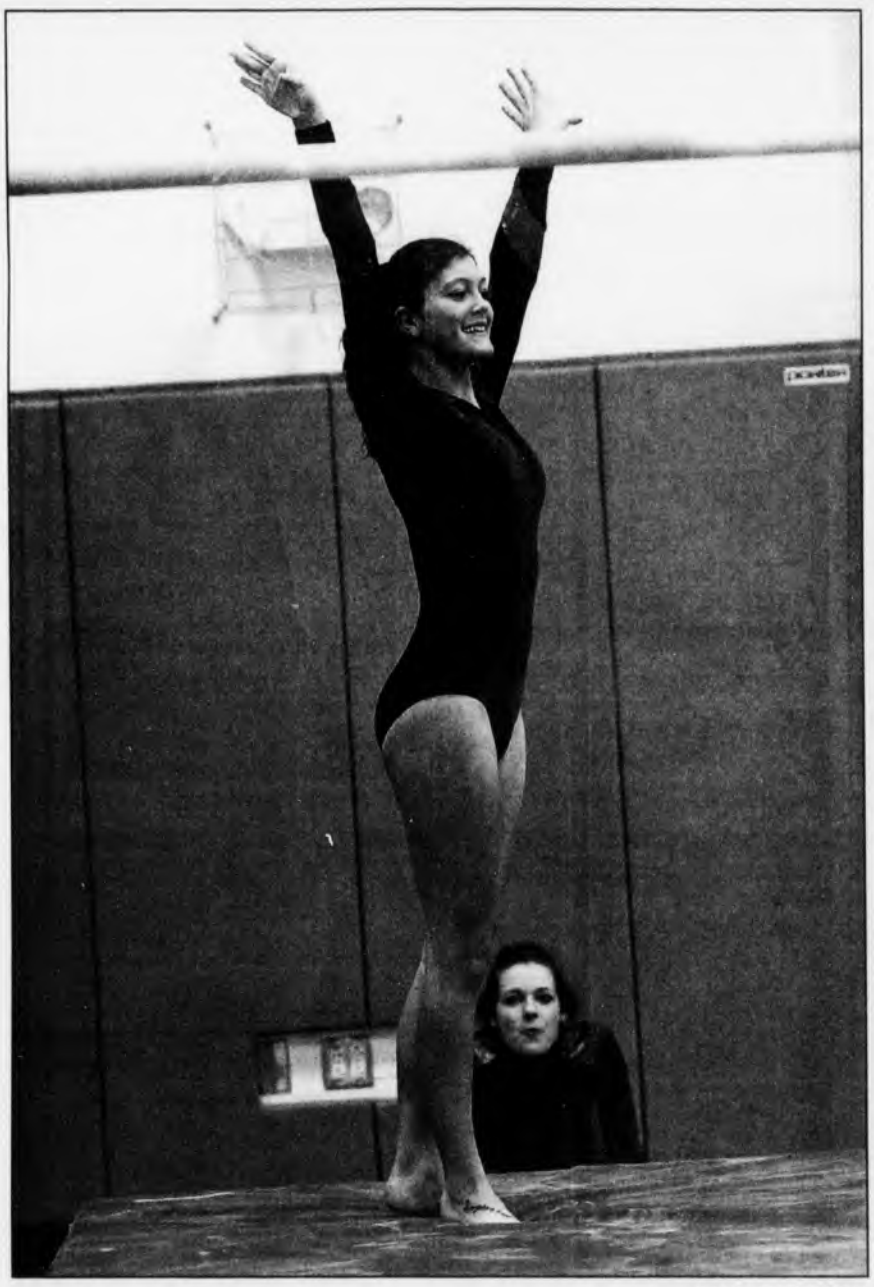


For the Lady Skippers, things have been going the way they'd hoped, at least on the scoreboard.

In their nine wins, Cohasset has only been held under 50 points once, and that was in a 48-19 victory.

The Lady Skippers have scored more than 60 points five times and even more importantly, they are playing solid defense.

Only Carver has broken 40 points against Cohasset, and that was in a 60-47 Carver loss which was the closest final score of the season.



BIG CHALLENGE

Jeff Charles (5) takes it strong to the hoop during third quarter action of Cohasset's 68-41 loss to Norwell earlier this season. The Skippers dropped their last game 53-48 in a battle to the wire against a strong Hull team. Cohasset hosts Abington (8-1, 6-0 SSL) tonight at 6:45 p.m.

South Coastal Men's Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The Bruins and the Canadiens saved the best for last in their South Coastal Men's Hockey League Classics Div. game that started the Winter Season.

Kirk Souza broke a 2-2 and gave the Canadiens a 3-2 lead with 2:51 left in the game, but the Bruins tied the game with a Tom MacInnes goal with

Dan Sloan of Abington and Tom Dromey scored the other Bruins goals while Mike Fahie of Pembroke and John Hernon of Marshfield both scored for the Canadiens.

Mike Ryan was a one-man show for the Maple Leafs as he scored three goals and assisted on another to lead them to a 4-1 win over the Rangers in a Classics Div. game. Joe Craig of Marshfield scored the Rangers goal.

Tim Fallon, Tim Ryan and Brian Barcelou each scored a goal to lead the Black Hawks to a 3-1 Classics Div. win over the Red Wings. Duxbury's Brian Dennehy scored the Red Wings goal.

The defending Masters Div. champion Grizzlies got five goals from Jeff Ray of Hanover in their 7-2 win over the Roadrunners. Joe Bevilacqua of Abington and Chuck Laubenstein added a goal each for the Grizzlies while Ted Duggan and Bob Ward scored the goals for the Roadrunners.

Tom Maguire was one of the top scorers in the Masters Div. and he got off to a good start in the Winter season as he scored four goals to lead the Thunder to an 8-4 win over the Vipers. John Cardarelli scored two goals, Mike Maguire of Hanover and Bill Daley added a goal each for the Thunder.

Mark Dorsey in his first game for the Aeros scored three goals and Kevin Marani added two in their 5-3 Masters Div. win over the Wolves.

Keith Smith of Marshfield, John Hildebrandt of Hanover and Bob McCabe scored the goals for the Wolves.

Scituate's Bob Zerfoss, James McNeill, Mike White of Marshfield and Jeff Nelson scored a goal each in the Saints' 4-2 Legends Div. win over the Toros.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse registration ends on January 31

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will close its on-line registration for the Spring 2010 season January 31. To register go to our website www.cohasset-lacrosse.com and click on the REGISTRATION link.

Registrations will be accepted for both boys and girls at U15 (7th and 8th grade), U13 (5th and 6th grade) and U11 (3rd and 4th grade). We will also be accepting registrations for our 1st and 2nd grade clinic. All youth players are welcome, regardless of experience.

The program is committed to accepting every player who signs up by January 31. Once that sign-up period is completed the program will establish its ideal roster sizes and take late registrants on a first-come, first-served basis only until the rosters are filled. At that point a waiting list will be established, or players may be turned away.

Fees for grades 3-8 in 2010 are $150 per player, with family pricing of $100 for each additional family member. The fee for the 1st and 2nd grade clinic is $75. Scholarships are available for families facing unusual circumstances or financial difficulty. Please check the appropriate box on the on-line form.

If you have any issues with on-line access, or registration related questions you may contact Joe Fitzgerald at fitzpj8@aol.com.

Notre Dame skiers racing to victories

Cohasset's Gilman finishes seventh

The Notre Dame Academy alpine ski team continued to put up impressive finish times and places as the Cougars added two more team victories last week. NDA raced under the lights at Blue Hills in Milton for the first time this season. This came last Wednesday, and the Cougars picked up where they left off as their depth and talent continued to show.

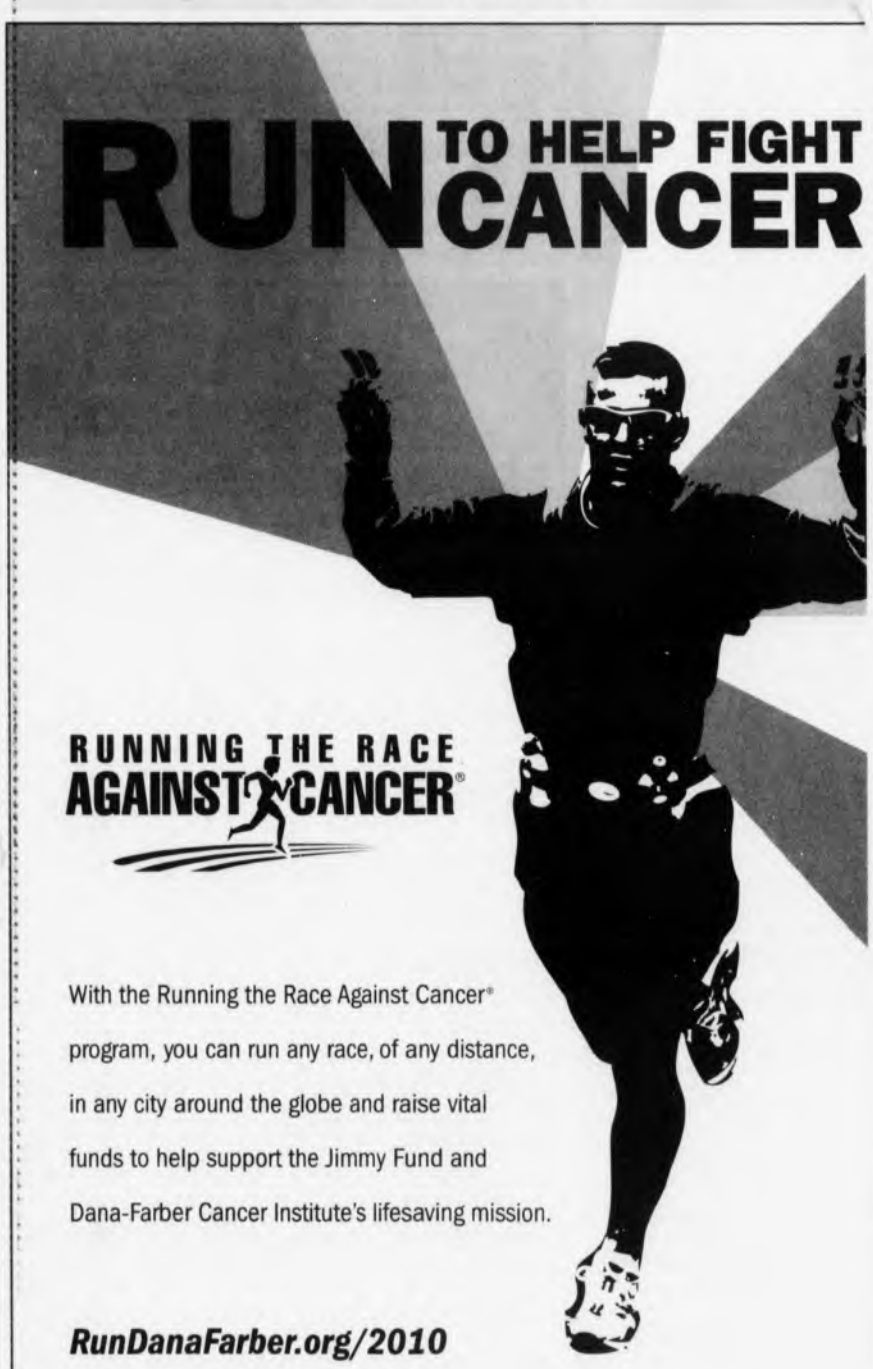
The Cougars placed their six scorers in the top overall 12 finishers and won the giant slalom race going away with 43 points, far outdistancing second-place Hingham with 95 points. Leading the way for NDA was freshman Amelia Brown from Hingham, who finished first out the 90 varsity racers with an extremely fast time of 27.09 seconds. Coming in third place overall was junior Jordan McSherry (Pembroke) with a time of 28.05.

Sophomore Marie Gilman (Cohasset) took the seventh overall spot with a time of 29.57. Freshman Grace Petro (Duxbury) was right behind Gilman, finishing in ninth (29.87). Jessica Peterson (Milton), another one of NDA's talented group of freshmen, finished 11th, skiing the course in 30.17 seconds. Sophomore Stephanie McSherry (Pembroke) and freshman Katie McNamara (Scituate) finished in 12th and 14th place, respectively, with McSherry putting up a 30.23 and McNamara a 31.48.

Senior Captain Heather Flaherty (Quincy) finished 16th overall with a solid run, finishing in 31.62. Junior Dylanne Axelson (Cohasset) had to overcome a fall and hike towards the bottom of the course but did finish up in 34 seconds flat. Notre Dame only had a few days before its next race, which was held Saturday at Ragged Mountain in New Hampshire. This would be the Cougars first two run combined time race of the season, which puts more pressure on the racers to finish both runs.

The giant slalom course at Ragged Mountain was longer then at Blue Hills and the snow was very firm, as the temperatures and wind chill were frigid. The freezing weather did not stop the Cougars from putting up some very fast times and great individual finishes. Taking first place overall out of the 90 varsity girl racers for the NDA was Jordan McSherry with a combined time of 72.77. McSherry's first run was the fastest in the morning as she was the only racer to go under 36 seconds with a blistering time of 35.39. Finishing second overall was Brown with a two run total time of 73.29 seconds. Brown put down the fastest time in the afternoon run clocking in at 37.14 seconds. Gilman skied very fast on both runs and finished fifth overall with a combined time of 75.03. Petro had her best finish of the season, picking up NDA's fourth place scoring points, and coming in seventh place overall with a time of 78.34.

Peterson continued her impressive freshman season, finishing in 11th with a time of 80 seconds flat. Stephanie McSherry and McNamara went back-to-back, finishing 12th and 13th overall with times of 80.19 and 80.49, respectively. Axelson had a great finish, coming in 15th place overall with a time of 81.33. Flaherty and Audrey Madigan put up two more great finishes as Flaherty came in with a 17th place finish in 82.66 and Madigan in 83.23. Notre Dame placed its six scorers in the top 12 overall and won the race with a very impressive 38 total points, besting a talented Hingham High School team, which tallied 92 points. The Cougars are in first place in Ski East and will be in action again in a giant slalom race under the lights Jan. 13 at Blue Hills.



The Notre Dame Academy alpine ski team opened its season late last month with a very impressive victory at Ragged Mountain. The defending Ski East champions looked even more impressive and deeper than their 2008-2009 season where the team captured the league championship going away and qualified seven individual skiers for the MIAA state championships.

With four returning qualifiers from states, as well as four freshmen and a junior transfer with high-level alpine race experience, NDA looks to have the deepest and most talented team in more than a decade. The Cougars placed six racers in the top 12 spots in the season opener at Ragged. Leading the way for Notre Dame in the giant slalom race at Ragged was freshman Brown with a blistering time of 20.21 seconds. Brown's time was not only the fastest for the varsity girls, but it also beat all the varsity boys except for one. Finishing in third place overall out of the 90 varsity racers was junior transfer Jordan McSherry (Pembroke), who clocked a great time of 21.04. Gilman also had an outstanding run for the Cougars with a time of 21.69 seconds, good for fifth place overall. Sophomore Stephanie McSherry (Pembroke) took seventh place overall with a time of 22.05. Peterson looked great in her first-ever high school race with a top-10 finish, coming in ninth place overall with a time of 22.46.

Axelson started her season off with a great finish and also getting the final scoring points for NDA with a time of 22.94, good for a 12th-place overall finish. Finishing in 16th and 17th place overall were Flaherty and freshman Grace Petro (Duxbury) with times of 23.03 and 23.05, respectively. Sophomore Taylor Morley (Hingham) placed 24th with a time of 24.28. McNamara had to deal with a near fall and a missed gate at the top of the course, which cost her some time, but finished her run strong and looked very impressive and fast from the middle of the course on. Notre Dame's totaled 37 place points were one of the lowest totals seen in several years in the Ski East League, besting the second place finisher, Hingham High School, which had 79 points.

A number of local athletes compete on the Notre Dame Academy of Hingham ski team, including ones from Marshfield, Pembroke, Duxbury, Hingham, Cohasset, and Scituate. Stay tuned for more updates from the NDA ski team throughout the season.

Great vibe in the hallways

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

This is probably because everyone was fresh from the long break and because everyone knew it was only a 4-day week with a 4-day weekend ahead of them.

I'MMMMMMM BACK!!! And that means the award winning "Life at CHS" column is back too. And if you are scratching your head right now wondering when this column won an award, clearly you missed out on Time Magazine's 42nd annual Newspaper Awards. The "Life at CHS" won column of the year. I would post up a picture of the humungous trophy I received but I completely made up the last couple of sentences.

So after a ridiculously incredible Christmas break, a 2-1/2surgery on my left knee, I have returned to bring you, the "Life at CHS". With that being said, let me tell you what happened within the school on Monday: Fun. That's what happened. There was just a good, fun vibe in the hallways. Everyone seemed rejuvenated and had a little extra something in their step (or roll for those in a wheelchair, like myself). This is probably because everyone was fresh from the long break and because everyone knew it was only a 4-day week with a 4-day weekend ahead of them. Now, the kids just needed to get through Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday and they had another (mini) vacation.

Tuesday…Tuesday…Tuesday…you know, I feel like Tuesdays are consistently one of the least exciting days of the week. Not much going on at all during the school day but at night it was a different story. Tuesday was first day that the basketball rivalry between Cohasset and Hull was renewed. The girls went to Hull and remained undefeated after they bulldozed over the lady Pirates with a 20-point plus victory. The boys' basketball team had a grueling match up on the home court. They had control for the majority of the game but couldn't seal the deal in a very close loss. Both teams are looking great so far. The hockey and wrestling teams are also doing quite well this season.

Wednesday held the main feature of the week: a meeting to determine the location of the Junior-Senior Semi Formal. All that hype and no direct outcome. Although I cannot reveal to you the location of the dance yet, I can assure you this: This dance will be phenomenal. The decorations are going to be unreal, the music is going to be magnificent, and the atmosphere of wherever we have it will be very welcoming and will ensure that everyone will have a blast.

Thursday marked the start of some good ol' fashioned community service. Who provided the service? All those that were in Virtual High School courses (VHS) ended up with nothing to do after their online courses finished. This led to all those who took the VHS courses to go out to serve the community. Who say's kids aren't caring? Wrong people. That's who.

On Friday, oh wait, there is no school on Friday! For the students at least (the teachers didn't get so lucky). I hope there wasn't any noticeable writer's rust since I have been away from the game for so long. Hope you all have a nice Martin Luther King Jr. Day! See ya next week, friends.

Sean MacCarthy is a senior at CHS. His column runs weekly during the school year.

SCHOOL NOTES

Kindergarten registration

Kindergarten registration for the 2010-2011 school year will begin Monday, Jan. 25. Registration will be at the Osgood School, daily, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Parents registering children for kindergarten will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration, but do not have to commit at this time. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for programs. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required for kindergarteners in order to register. Call the school office at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Preschool registration

Preschool registration for the 2010-2011 year will begin Tuesday, Jan. 19. Children who turn 3 or 4 by Sept. 1, 2010, are eligible to register for the Osgood Preschool Program, which takes place four days per week, Monday through Thursday, for 2-1/2 hours. Entrance to the preschool program is based on a lottery system. Registration applications should be returned to the Osgood School no later than Friday, Feb. 5. The lottery will take place on Wednesday, Feb. 10, and parents will be notified immediately following. A deposit of $150 will be required to hold a space for those selected. A birth certificate and proof of residency must accompany applications.

Preschool open house

A preschool open house for parents will take place at Osgood School from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m., on Friday, Jan. 29. Parents will have an opportunity to meet preschool teachers and support staff and view the classrooms and facilities. Call the school office at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Join the Drowned Hogs and chill out for a great cause

All individuals, teams, groups or families with warm hearts willing to do something cool for charity are welcome to join the craziness.

January winds up with an icy edge when the Drowned Hogs storm Nantasket Beach and make their annual mad dash into the Atlantic Ocean. At noon, on Saturday, Jan. 30, hundreds of hardy nutcases committed to doing something cool and crazy for a cause — Wellspring Multi-Service Center — will predict the arrival of spring in their own special way. Anyone can join, and there are only a few rules.

The swim doesn't count unless the swimmer fully dunks. Wet suits are allowed only if the wearer also wears a tutu and a tiara.

All individuals, teams, groups or families with warm hearts willing to do something cool for charity are welcome to join the craziness. Information and pledge sheets are available at www.drownedhogs.org or www.wellspringhull.org. Registration fee is $10 and includes the 2010 Drowned Hog T-Shirt and a Drowned Hog button entitling the wearer to great discounts at local retailers all weekend.

Following the icy plunge at high noon, survivors and onlookers are all invited to warm up in the Clarion Hotel at the Nantasket Beach Chamber of Commerce Drowned Hog Soup and Chowder Festival presenting scrumptious offerings from dozens of local eating establishments. Tickets are $10. All proceeds will benefit the food pantry at Wellspring.

It's not too late to join in the craziness. The New Year takes on new significance when an icy dive in the ocean is part of the program! Join the hundreds of philanthropists who straddle a fine line between charity and insanity…and go hog-wild for charity. Visit www.drownedhogs.org, www.wellspringhull.org or call 781-925-3211 to be part of this polar plunge.

COURTESY PHOTO

Cammi is an older kitten, who came to Hull Seaside Animal Rescue from a rescue group that does not have a shelter.

Older kitten has 'purrsonality'

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Camille, or Cammi as we call her. Cammi is a short-haired black and white 9-month-old feline. She came to us from a rescue group. They don't have a shelter so when they are inundated with felines, they will bring the most adoptable ones to us. Cammi is a sweet, playful, adorable older kitten. She's "purrsonality" plus and is looking for a home. The rewards of sharing your home with a pet are many. We invite you to come and check out all our available cats and kittens.

Cammi is a sweet, playful, adorable older kitten. She's "purrsonality" plus and is looking for a home.

"Cats know how to obtain food without labor, shelter without confinement and love without penalties," W.L. George, American writer.

Mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull. MA 02045. The actual address is 50 L St., Hull. Telephone number is 877-378-1195, and the website is www.hsar.org. Open hours are 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays, and 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays. For adoption information and appointments only, call Shirl at 781-925-3380. To become a member or volunteer, call Mary at 781-925-3121 or stop by during open hours.

Cabaret is Jan. 28 at Hingham Armory

The 48th Hingham Cabaret will take place at 7 p.m., on Thursday, Jan. 28, and 8 p.m., on Friday and Saturday, Jan. 29 and 30, at Hingham Armory, Central Street, Hingham. Cabaret benefits the Hingham Community Center at 79 South St., Hingham. This year's show, "Ain't Nothing Stopping Us Now," will feature a Charleston, a tap number, a Michael Jackson tribute, a "Bye Bye Birdie" medley and more.

Tickets prices are: $18 for general admission and $15 for senior citizens on Thursday night; $23 on Friday and Saturday nights. Tickets for all three nights are on sale to the general public at the Center, 70 South St., from 9 a.m. to noon, and 7 to 9 p.m. Call the Center at 781-749-9786 for more information. "The Saturday night show is filling up fast, but tickets are still available for the Thursday and Friday shows," said ticket chairman Jody Nash.

A shuttle bus sponsored by Linden Ponds will make pickups before the shows at Hingham Town Hall, Central Street and Hingham Institution for Savings, Main Street parking lot.

Winter parking

No overnight on-street parking between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. is allowed during winter parking regulations.
Violators are subject to a fine of $25.

Walgreen's offering H1N1 vaccine

Walgreen's in Cohasset is offering H1N1 vaccinations at its pharmacies. Walgreen's is working closely with the Massachusetts Department of Public Heath to serve as a distribution partner for the H1N1 vaccine and a community resource for information on H1N1 immunization.

Any resident who wants an H1N1 vaccination and who meets state age requirements can receive an H1N1 vaccination at Walgreen's, as the public health has recently lifted priority group vaccination restrictions. Walgreen's pharmacists in Massachusetts can immunize those age 12 and older.

Vaccinations are available on a walk-in basis when an immunizing pharmacist is on staff, by appointment and also during scheduled flu shot clinics at select Walgreen's stores. To find the immunizing pharmacist hours, consumers are asked to call 1-800-Walgreens or visit www.walgreens.com/flu. Consumers can also contact a store directly to schedule an appointment.

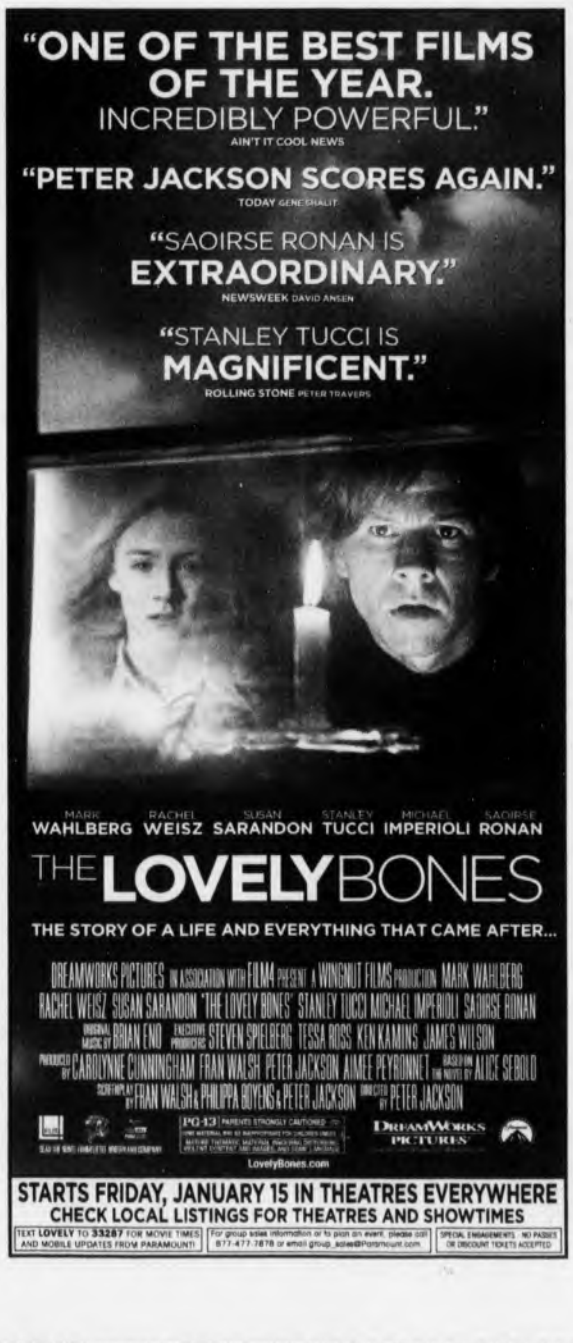
The cost for the administration of the H1N1 vaccine is $18. Vaccinations are covered by Medicare and may also be covered by Medicaid and other insurance plans. Consumers are encouraged to check with insurance provider for coverage details.

To find the immunizing pharmacist hours, consumers are asked to call 1-800-Walgreens or visit www.walgreens.com/flu.

When snowstorms, ice arrive

The Cohasset D.P.W. reminds residents that a sand and salt mixture will be available in the upper corner of the town parking lot.

When snow is in the forecast, residents are asked to not park on streets plowed by the town to expedite snow removal. Vehicles that obstruct snow removal operations will be towed at the owner's expense. Residents and contractors are reminded not to move snow, ice or water onto roadways that may impede traffic.



The town is not responsible for damage to mailboxes, driveway aprons, walkways, stonewalls, grassed areas, shrubs, trees or fences that fall within the town layout.

Vehicles that obstruct snow removal operations will be towed at the owner's expense.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JAN. 25, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Mixed signals could create problems. Make sure your views are presented clearly, and insist others do the same. Don't let an unanswered question go by without a full explanation.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Financial pressures ease, allowing for more budget flexibility. But as the money-wise Bovine will appreciate, thrift still beats out splurging. Expect news from someone special.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Getting things done is what you do so well. But be careful not to overtax your energy reserves. Take time out to relax or to do something different to help keep them at optimum levels.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) This is a good time to satisfy the Moon Child's growing sense of wanderlust. Choose a really special place to go to, with a very special person to share it all with you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You love being in the spotlight. But be careful it doesn't blind you to the truth behind a seemingly wonderful opportunity. Look closer and you might be sadly surprised at what you find.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Isn't it time to take a break from your hectic schedule? Sure it is. And the sooner you do, the sooner you can return fresh and more than ready to take on all those new projects.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A recent family incident can help bring everyone closer, and there's no one who's better at making that happen than you. Accept (indeed, insist on!) help from others to get things off and running.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Long-held habits are often difficult to break. But the change from how you always did things to how you can do them now can be liberating. So, be flexible and give it a try.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Someone you met in your professional world last year and thought you would never hear from again could make a sudden reappearance in your life, along with an interesting job offer.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Once again, you delight everyone by coming up with a solution for a problem that actually works. On another note, it's not too early to get started on those travel plans.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Before you go ahead with finalizing your plans for your new project, check them over to see if you can make some improvements or if you can find ways to cut costs.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The Fabulous Fish might have been out of the social swim for too long, and it's time you plunge back in. Reinforce your old friendships and be open to starting new ones.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

'Enduring Effects of Sexual Abuse by Clergy'

Glastonbury Abbey, in conjunction with the Scituate Affiliate of Voice of the Faithful, is hosting a talk titled "The Enduring Psychological and Spiritual Effects of Clergy-Perpetrated Sexual Abuse." The event will take place at the Abbey Center at the Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham at 7:15 p.m., on Tuesday, Jan. 26.

Presenters of the talk will be Barbara Thorp and Robert McMackin. Thorp is the director of the Boston Archdiocesan Office for Pastoral Support and Outreach. McMackin is a psychologist consultant for OPSO and co-editor of the book "Understanding the Impact of Clergy Sexual Abuse," Routledge Press, 2009.

OPSO, established in 2002, assists those who have been sexually abused by a priest, deacon or other church personnel of the Archdiocese of Boston. OPSO's mission is to provide assistance, pastoral/spiritual care, support, counseling referrals and other resources to survivors, family members of survivors and parishes. Thorp, Cardinal Sean O'Malley and survivors of clergy sexual abuse met with Pope Benedict in Washington, D.C., in April 2008.

On Jan. 26, Thorp and McMackin will discuss the long-term effects of sexual abuse by clergy and the work of OPSO to help survivors. Admission is free. Donations are appreciated to help defray costs. All are welcome.

Children's Theatre Company honors MLK Jr.

All are welcome to the annual Martin Luther King Day breakfast at 9 a.m. and program beginning at 10 a.m. Monday morning Jan. 18 at the Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St. in Hingham, sponsored by the Hingham Hull Religious Leaders Association.

"Raising Peacemakers" and the Children's Theatre Company, Greater Boston will offer an inspiring original program in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.

Created by New England Emmy award-winning local scriptwriter and CTC associate drama director, Stephen Hemingway, "The Dream and the Heroes" includes the words of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., interwoven with spirituals and music by Lory Lazarus and Eric Dozier, as well as reenactments of the lives of great peacemakers in the past who have given their life for the elimination of prejudice and the creation of a more just world. The performance honors those who have devoted their lives in the past on behalf of the unity of the human family. The children are not just coming to perform — they ask the audience to renew their own commitment to making a difference.

The Children's Theatre Company (CTC) was formed in July 2005, sponsored by the Greater Boston Baha'i Community, and has performed before thousands of people, sharing their message of peace and hope. The children have not just been performing their message—they have been living it. They met and performed for the Hurricane Katrina evacuees in Massachusetts, and raised over $6,000 to send to the Red Cross on their behalf. They have recorded their wishes for friendship and peace for children in the Grammy listed CD "Well Wishes and Blessings", (www.wellwishesandblessings.com), which has been translated into Arabic and is being delivered through Peaceful Tomorrows throughout Iraq and the Arabic-speaking world. "It's amazing what children can create, if you give them the chance to dream and support them in making a difference," says Somava Stout, Director of Children's Theatre Company, Greater Boston and Raising Peacemakers. "That's what the Children's Theatre Company and Raising Peacemakers kids are all about—making a difference."

A suggested contribution of $5 may be made at the door; children are free.

For more info about Children's Theater Company visit www.childrenstheatrecompany.org and for more info about Peacemakers visit www.raisingpeacemakers.org.

Peter David Androski

Peter D. Androski

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. – Peter D. Androski, (1950-2010), of St. Petersburg, Fla., formerly of Cohasset and Bolton died Sunday, Jan. 3, 2010, at the age of 59. He was the husband of Heidi Trilsch and the late M. Lee Androski.

A lifelong athlete, Peter was a four-year starter for Nashoba Regional High School football (Bolton), his freshman year playing left guard with his brother, Jack, at right guard. He went on to attend Rensselear Polytechnic Institute in Troy N.Y., balancing his time as linebacker (#66) with studies in Environmental Engineering. He was a passionate supporter of both schools and was quick to share stories, history, or a little-known bit of trivia with friends and family about his experiences there.

Peter was the founder and president of the commercial construction management company, The Torrey Company, based in Plainville. In recent years, he enjoyed cruising the east coast and the Bahamas with his wife, Heidi, on their sailboat Spartina, and had recently become an avid cyclist. From his home in St. Petersburg, he continued to follow his favorite hometown team, the Boston Red Sox.

His friends and family remember him as a strong presence in their lives, a steady-hand through difficult times, and someone who enjoyed life. They will continue to draw strength from his example. He is survived by his wife Heidi, daughter Torrey, brothers Joe and Jack, niece Jane, and nephew Jonathan.

A remembrance will be held Friday, Jan. 22, from 4-7 p.m., Fruitlands Museum, 102 Prospect Hill Road, Harvard MA http://www.fruitlands.org.

Memories can be shared at: http://www.andersonmc-queen.com/obituaries/PeterAndroski.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to: The Epilepsy Foundation of America 8301 Professional Place, Landover, MD 20785 www.epilepsyfoundation.org.

David Brody, bestselling author of The Cabal of the Westford Knight, and featured author on the History Channel, will be at the Duxbury Free Library Jan. 17, at 2 p.m. to give a talk on the historical artifacts around New England that support the theory that Templar Knights came to America long before Columbus. In 1398 a group of Masons from Scotland fled the overzealous Catholic Church and made their way throughout New England, befriending Natives and leaving behind clues that are still visible to this day, clues that would help their fellow Templars to eventually locate their legacy. Fact or fiction? It's hard to tell since Brody's latest rollercoaster novel encompasses so much actual history. In much the same way that The Da Vinci Code has piqued interest in the Templars, Brody is turning heads in New England. Books will be available for purchase at the event courtesy of Westwinds Bookshop. Free tickets are now available at Westwinds Bookshop and the library. For information call 781-934-2721, ext. 108.

Trail of jeers

Comedian Jimmy Tingle tackles politics and more

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

South Carolina Governor Mark Sanford didn't only anger his wife and his constituents when his summertime tales of hiking the Appalachian Trail turned out to be cover for trips to see his mistress in Argentina – he also gave comics like Jimmy Tingle plenty of new material.

"Sanford not only lied to his wife, his staff, and the voters who elected him, but he also ruined the Appalachian Trail," explained the Cambridge-born comedian and satirist by telephone last week. "Now, no wife will ever let her husband just go off and hike the Appalachian Trail. Those days are over thanks to Governor Sanford."

If Sanford now has a past he wishes people would forget, then Tingle – who plays Norwell's Company Theatre on Friday and Saturday – is just the opposite.

Tingle was the American correspondent for Sir David Frost's show for PBS and the BBC, "The Strategic Humor Initiative." He also spent two seasons as a commentator on CBS TV's short-lived "60 Minutes II." He's made the talk-show rounds with appearances on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno," "Late Night with Conan O' Brien" and "Larry King Weekend," and he's appeared in feature films like "Next Stop Wonderland" and "Head of State," starring Chris Rock.

That success began some 30 years ago with appearances at the now legendary Ding Ho Chinese Restaurant and Comedy Club in Inman Square, Cambridge, where other Massachusetts-born comics like Denis Leary, Steven Wright, and Lenny Clarke also got their starts before going national.

"Those guys were headliners even then. I was the daytime bartender at the Ding Ho in the early days and I would go when they had open mike nights. In those early days, the biggest challenge was to try not to be influenced too much by the other comics where I would end up copying them. They're some of the greatest comics I know, but I've always known I needed to do something different from each of them."

While developing his own style, Tingle acknowledges being influenced by some of the giants of comedy.

"I've always admired George Carlin, Rodney Dangerfield, and Richard Pryor, but Lenny Bruce was my biggest influence. He showed me the way to use humor to talk about serious subjects."

Along the way, Tingle decided that traditional comedy clubs might not be the best venues for the material he wanted to do.

Jimmy Tingle comes to the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, on Jan. 15-16. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787, or go online at either companytheatre.com or jimmytingle.com

"I gravitated to theaters to be able to do one-person shows like the ones Jackie Mason, Eric Bogosian, and Spaulding Gray were doing. My heart is really in one-person shows. Doing them, especially in theaters, allows for fewer punch lines and more commentary which is exactly how I like it."

To date, Tingle has written and starred in four different one-person shows, the latest of which is "Jimmy Tingle for President: The Funniest Campaign in History." One of his earlier stage shows, "Jimmy Tingle's American Dream," is the basis for a documentary film of the same name currently in post-production. From 2002 to 2007, Tingle was owner, principal performer and producing director of Jimmy Tingle's Off Broadway Theater in Somerville.

Tingle says he is very happy to be paying a return visit to Norwell this week.

"The great thing about working in this area of the country is that audiences are intelligent and well-educated. I'll be able to talk about everything from global warming and health care to airport security. I'm psyched to be headed back to the South Shore. I just want to give people a show that leaves them hopeful and optimistic."

Jimmy Tingle comes to the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, on Jan. 15-16. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787, or go online at either companytheatre.com or jimmytingle.com

Movie review

Will Bad (Jeff Bridges) find salvation in Jean (Maggie Gyllenhaal)?

'Crazy' for you

By Al Alexander

Crazy Heart (A-)

With a twang in his voice and a thirst for an Oscar in his heart, Jeff Bridges lays down some of the best licks of his career as a washed-up country star in "Crazy Heart."

It's a beaut, too, with Bridges looking and sounding more haggard than Haggard as the aptly named Bad Blake. True, the dude is little more than a hard-drinking, tough-living country music cliché. But Bridges masterfully makes the role — and the movie — work.

He's the headliner, but he's ably backed by some all-stars — Maggie Gyllenhaal, Robert Duvall, Colin Farrell and the movie's MVP, T Bone Burnett, who produced and helped compose the film's handful of original songs.

The tunes are terrific, but not as terrific as the way Bridges sings them with all the conviction and authenticity of a man, who like Bad, has spent the better part of his 57 years on the road accompanied by loose women and his old friend, Jack Daniels.

When we first meet Bad, he's near the bottom of a long slide down from playing arenas to scrounging for gigs at gin joints and bowling alleys in tiny Southwestern backwaters. It's a cruel reality that a raging alcoholic like Bad has to eke out a living in so many drinking establishments.

Redemption, of course, always waits around the next corner in the form of a good woman; in this case, Gyllenhaal's Jean Craddock. A budding journalist with a 4-year-old son and a history of irresponsible men, Jean scores an interview with the fading star. He in turn scores with her, a one-night stand that improbably evolves into a full-blown May-September relationship.

If you're beginning to have "Tender Mercies" deja vu, then you've pretty much honed in on where writer-director Scott Cooper wants to take you with his tale of love and redemption.

It might not turn out quite like you expect, but you'll often know where it's headed, including the melodramatic moment when Jean stupidly entrusts her son to Bad's care.

It also doesn't help having Duvall lurk around the edges, serving both as Bad's good buddy and a recurring reminder of the superiority of "Tender Mercies."

But you'll still be engrossed. And what keeps you riveted is Bridges. No matter if he has a guitar or a bottle of whiskey in his mitts, he always has you in the palm of his hand.

The Hollywood vaults are overflowing with films about drunks, from "The Country Girl" to "The Days of Wine and Roses" to "Leaving Las Vegas," but Bridges always makes it seem like you're watching this story for the first time. He makes you feel every regret and missed opportunity. But it's the genuineness of his character's self-loathing that proves most affecting. Thanks to Bridges, you'll always root for this screw-up.

And Farrell's character brings out the worst in him. Playing way against type, Farrell is a flashy Keith Urban-type who evolved from Bad's backing band to achieve worldwide fame in both music and film. So we spend much of the first third of the movie listening to Bad grouse about what an ingrate his former protégé is. The film offers a nice twist when we finally meet Farrell's Tommy Sweet.

Farrell, who continues to rebuild his clout with superb supporting turns, is almost as good as Bridges, displaying a booming singing voice and a stage presence that could rival Tim McGraw. He's so strong, you regret there aren't more scenes between he and Bridges because their relationship is far more interesting than the pat romance that develops between Bad and his woman.

But some of Bridges' best work comes when he shares the stage with only a mic. You'll want to rush home and download the soundtrack off iTunes and then play it over and over. That's how good he, Farrell and the songs sound, as Burnett adds to a resume that already includes the soundtracks to "O, Brother, Where Art Thou?" and "Cold Mountain."

He and Ryan Bingham (who sings the film's theme, "The Weary Kind") are virtual locks to walk away with Oscars, as is Bridges, who despite his long, outstanding career has never been honored.

Some will consider it a lifetime achievement award, but it's far more than that, because "Crazy Heart" is possibly his best work yet, another iconic performance that deserves every award it's likely to snag.

Rated R. "Crazy Heart" contains adult language and brief sexuality.

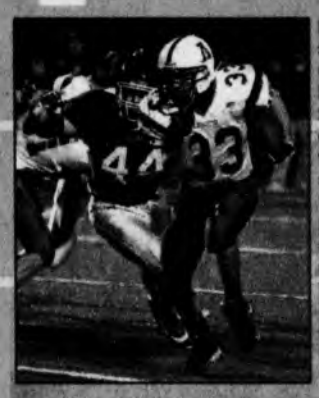
NAME: Sean Griffith
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Running back
STATS: The question isn't what can Sean Griffith do, it's what can't he do. A two-way starter and kicker for the Rams, Griffith was the team's leading rusher. He scored nine touchdowns, and he kicked three field goals and 26 extra points. His biggest games came against the two Plymouth schools. He scored two touchdowns each against North and South, leading his team to two crucial Atlantic Coast League victories.

NAME: Derek Newcomb
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Sophomore
POSITION: Tailback
STATS: Derek Newcomb emerged as an all around threat for the Wildcats this season. He had 70 carries for 780 yards, caught 41 passes for another 650 yards. He scored 21 touchdowns. As good as he was on offense, he was demonic on defense. He had 84 tackles and two interceptions. On special teams, be put Weymouth in good field position time and time again. His kick/punt return yardage put him over 2,100 all-purpose yards for the Wildcats.

NAME: Brett Wheeler
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: HB/DB
STATS: Wheeler rushed for better than 1,300 yards with 17 touchdowns to lead the Indians to a 7-4 record and a shot at a second straight Patriot League Fisher Div. title.

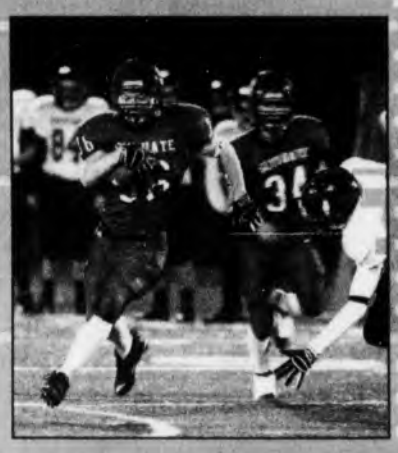


NAME: Will Lynner
SCHOOL: Cohasset
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Guard/Tackle
STATS: Lynner was the one lineman on the squad who played on both sides of the ball regularly. A senior captain, he was an undisputed leader and a key to helping protect quarterback Jeff Cavanaro and open holes for Dana Valentine.

NAME: Tom Pomella
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: LB
STATS: Ask nearly everyone on the Marshfield High School football team who was one of the biggest keys on defense this season, and 99.9 percent of them will say Tom Pomella. One of the team's leading tacklers, this junior linebacker was a beast on defense and was a huge reason that opposing teams scored only 78 points combined in Marshfield's nine victories this season.

NAME: Dana Valentine
SCHOOL: Cohasset
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Running Back
STATS: Dana Valentine led the Skippers to a 9-2 season and a playoff appearance. He rushed for 1,884 yards and scored 17 times. He had multiple 200-plus yard games this season and added a 167-yard effort in the Skippers' playoff game against Holliston. Valentine plans to play football at a prep school next fall.

NAME: Kristian LaPointe
SCHOOL: Abington
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Tailback
STATS: He missed the opening two games and still was a 1,000-yard rusher, scoring 16 touchdowns and finishing the season with 121 points. LaPointe is a three-sport standout, a penetrating point guard, leading the Green Wave to the EMass finals in basketball, and a steady second baseman and clutch hitter in baseball, part of last year's state championship team.



NAME: Aaron Kramer
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Tackle
STATS: When opposing teams size up Duxbury, the first player they notice is Aaron Kramer. The 6-foot-7-inch, 275-pound Boston College-bound tackle was a beast on the line for the Dragons, helping the team secure the Patriot League title and a berth into the Division 2A playoffs.

NAME: Bob MacNeil
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: RB/LB
STATS: The Bulldozer. The Punisher. One of the toughest football players in the state. Bob MacNeil is one player that you don't want to go head-to-head with. He runs right over his opponents, scoring seven touchdowns this season, and he capped his phenomenal career at Marshfield High School by running for 100 yards on 19 carries in the Rams' Division 2A Super Bowl victory.

NAME: Dan Murphy
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: LB
STATS: Dan Murphy was a snow plow that opened holes for the Wildcats' awesome offense the past two seasons and contributed 50 tackles and six sacks on defense. He is also the Division 1 South Sectional wrestling champion hopes to attend a four-year college for wrestling or football.

NAME: Matt Stewart
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: RB/DB
STATS: Stewart always seemed to be the guy coming up with the big play, especially in league games. He had a huge 75-yard kickoff return against Whitman-Hanson that set the tone in a huge victory, and also had a 95-yard touchdown against Duxbury. Stewart had a pair of interceptions against Middleboro, one he ran back for a touchdown and another in the end zone. Stewart was voted Scituate's Unsung Hero by the team's coaching staff.

NAME: Patrick Ivens
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: OL/DE
STATS: A staple on the line, Ivens wasn't flashy and didn't garner headlines, but quietly made all the plays on both sides of the ball. The Patriot League All-Star was voted the team's MVP and was nominated to play in the summer's Shriner's Game.

SENATE RACE

Brown wins big in Cohasset

Republican receives 60 percent of vote

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It was a clear, decisive – and stunning – victory for state Senator Scott Brown in Cohasset and statewide in an election that captured attention nationally.

In this unusual January special election held to fill the seat of the late Senator Ted Kennedy, Attorney General Martha Coakley, a Democrat, faced off against the Republican Brown and Libertarian Joe Kennedy (who is not related to Edward M. Kennedy).

In Cohasset, Brown was able to secure more than 62 percent of votes, or 2,401. Coakley received 1,419 votes, or 37 percent. Less than one percent of voters (17 votes) cast their ballots for Kennedy. Cohasset had no write-ins, but one voter left their ballot blank. In total 3,838 Cohasset voters came out to vote for their candidate of choice. There are 5,478 registered voters in Cohasset. Of those 1223 are Democrats; 1196 are Republican; 3045 are unenrolled.

Statewide Brown garnered 52 percent of the vote, Coakley took 47 percent and Kennedy had the support of 1 percent of voters.

"He is the perfect candidate for these times; he understands the issues moving our country," said Republican Town Committee chair Kevin O'Donnell, naming those issues as terrorism, jobs, and health care.

Brown is the first Republican senator elected from Massachusetts since 1972 when Sen. Ed Brook won a second term.

"He is the perfect candidate for these times; he understands the issues moving our country."
— Kevin O'Donnell, Republican Town Committee

In an interesting local connection, O'Donnell said when Brown appeared at the Republican Town Committee's annual picnic in September he had just announced his intention to seek the Senate seat. The attendees of that picnic signed his first nomination papers.

"He owes it all to Cohasset," O'Donnell said with a laugh.

Leading up to the election, O'Donnell said the demand for Brown signs was enormous. The Republican Town Committee was able to get 40 signs and within minutes of sending out an e-mail indicating their availability, every single one was spoken for.

"The enthusiasm for this candidate is unlike anything I've ever seen, except for maybe the enthusiasm when JFK was running," O'Donnell said.

Wind turbines blown away

Bylaw deals setback to this, future projects

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Wind turbines may not have a future in Cohasset under the current zoning bylaw.

The Planning Board on Wednesday night once again denied CCI Energy's wind turbine application.

Down the road, the current wording of the bylaw on setbacks will likely prohibit a turbine's construction anywhere in town.

This time around it was not the technical aspects – the shadow flicker, the noise impacts, the visual impact, the ice throw – that derailed the twin turbine proposal sited off Route 3A. Rather, it was an issue that did not even come to light during the first round, eight-month-long, public hearing process last year.

According to Cohasset's wind energy conversion facility bylaw there must be "laydown area" equal to the height, including the turbines' blades, and that laydown area must not encroach on a residential district.

Recently it came to the attention of the applicant and the planning board that the Trustees of Reservations' Whitney and Thayer Woods, one of the adjacent properties to the proposed siting for the turbines, is zoned "Residential C District."

The laydown area largely falls on property zoned technology/business district, but part of both turbines' laydown area falls on the Whitney and Thayer Woods property, which is currently utilized for open space.

"We spent so much time looking over the complicated portion of the application, we failed to look at the simplest – the setback issue."
— Stuart Ivimey, Planning Board

"We spent so much time looking over the complicated portion of the application, we failed to look at the simplest – the setback issue," said Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey, who was the sole vote against the project the first time around. "Under the application of the bylaw (this project) simply can't be done."

Planning board members used the words "embarrassing," "unfortunate," "conflicted" and "stuck" to describe where they were on Wednesday night.

The ultimate vote was 1-3, with three members voting against approval of the special permit application and one, member Clark Brewer, voting in favor. Planning Board member Jean Healey Dippold did not vote because she did not serve on the board during the entire course of the application.

The vote denies the project application, put forth by a private developer, Plymouth-based CCI-Energy, which proposed the installation of two 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the Scituate Hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber. The towers are 462-feet (or 100-meters) in height, including the height of the blades.

The project has had a long and arduous history with vocal opposition from a group of neighbors and residents around town and over a dozen lengthy (and at times contentious) public hearings. The Planning Board effectively denied it in May. The application, which is the first under town's wind energy conversion facility bylaw, has been on the Planning Board's docket since September 2008, but returned to the planning board in early December due to a court ordered remand. Sufficient and material changes were made to the application since its denial and the planning board was ordered to re-consider the application in light of those changes.

The Planning Board, as chair Al Moore explained on Wednesday, is a "quasi-judicial board."

"We look at the bylaws and act upon them," Moore said. "When a bylaw passes that is somewhat unpopular, it puts us in a difficult position as we try to follow those rules and bylaws fairly."

Moore congratulated the applicant on addressing all the technical aspects of the application, but ultimately felt the portion of the bylaw that addressed the setback could not be overlooked.

The Planning Board spent more than

Fitness studio ordered closed

Business to stay open; seeks resolution

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The personal training fitness studio at 25 Ripley Road, which was featured in a Mariner article last week, has been issued a cease and desist order from the Building Commissioner, Bob Egan.

In an official order hand delivered to the address as well as mailed as a certified letter, the order mandates the business be shut down or face a $100 per day fine.

Egan said after reading the Mariner article on Friday he visited the first floor of 25 Ripley Road.

"(I) found that almost the entire first floor has been covered with heavy rubber mats and that there were at least 10 professional style pieces of exercise

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Town Meeting, election dates

Annual Town Meeting will take place on Saturday, March 27 at 9a.m. In light of the fact the following weekend is the Easter holiday, the annual town election be held two weeks later on Saturday, April 10.

When snowstorms, ice arrive

The Cohasset D.P.W. reminds residents that a sand and salt mixture will be available in the upper corner of the town parking lot.

When snow is in the forecast, residents are asked to not park on streets plowed by the town to expedite snow removal. Vehicles that obstruct snow removal operations will be towed at the owner's expense. Residents and contractors are reminded not to move snow, ice or water onto roadways that may impede traffic.

The town is not responsible for damage to mailboxes, driveway aprons, walkways, stonewalls, grassed areas, shrubs, trees or fences that fall within the town layout.

— TOWN ELECTION —

Ivimey pulls papers for planning board

Still, no races have shaped up and no candidates have come forward to run for the School Committee.

This week, Sankey Road resident Stuart Ivimey pulled nomination papers to seek re-election to his seat on the Planning Board. Still, no races have shaped up and no candidates have come forward to run for the School Committee.

Incumbent candidate Paul Carlson for Selectmen has returned his nomination papers to the clerk's office. Citizens have until Feb. 18 to return their papers to the Town Clerk's office.

Abigail Alves and Andrew Quigley have taken out papers for seats on the Recreation Commission. Alves, who is running for re-election, is seeking the five-year term. Quigley was appointed to the Recreation Commission in 2009 and is running for a one-year seat to complete an unexpired term.

A newcomer to the Library Trustees, Henry Rattenbury, took out papers to seek one of three three-year terms on that board.

James Dow pulled papers for a three-year term on the Sewer Commission. Sean Cunning, who currently holds that seat, is not seeking re-election. Dow ran for Sewer Commission two years ago and lost to sitting sewer commissioner Wayne Sawchuk.

Nomination papers for the annual Town Election for 2010 became available on Thursday, Jan. 7. The last day to take out nomination papers is Thursday, Feb. 18. In order to hold an elected office, one must be a registered voter of the town. Citizens are not running for office until they take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies signatures.

Positions available for the 2010 Town Election

- Selectmen – Two for three years
- School Committee – Two for three years
- Trustees Paul Pratt Memorial Library – Three for three years

- Planning Board Associate Member – One for three years
- Recreation Commission – One for five years
- Recreation Commission – One for one year to fill an unexpired term
- Sewer Commission – One for three years
- Water Commission – One for three years

Friday, March 5, 2010 is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting to be held on Saturday, March 27, 2010 and for the Annual Town Election to be held on Saturday, April 10, 2010.

Town-wide H1N1 flu clinic is Feb. 2

"We are hoping for another good turnout."
— Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin

A second town-wide H1N1 flu vaccination clinic will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 2 from 6 to 8p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium. Anybody over age 9 is eligible and ample vaccine is available.

If residents have yet to receive the seasonal flu vaccination that will be available as well. Both vaccines are inactive and can be given at the same time.

Public Health nurse Mary Goodwin said about 300 residents attended the first H1N1 vaccination clinic held in early January.

"We are hoping for another good turnout," Goodwin said.

Please call 781-383-2210 with questions.

SSCC annual meeting is Tuesday

In accordance with Article V, Section I of the bylaws, notice is hereby given to the members of the South Shore Community Center, Inc. that the Annual Meeting will be held on Tuesday, Jan. 26, at 6:30 p.m. at 3 North Main St., Cohasset. Only active members shall be entitled to vote.

POLICE BEAT

Attempted burglary, car crashes, summonses and more

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Attempted B&E

Police are investigating an attempted break-in at Good Sport on King Street last Friday. The owner of the business called police at 9:15 a.m. on Friday (Jan. 15) and showed officers that someone had broken the front plate-glass window and a side window. The burglar alarm was not triggered by the activity and the suspect or suspects did not enter the store likely because something frightened them. Nothing was stolen. Police said it appeared the windows had been kicked in.

Unpaid bill

Feng Sui in Cohasset Plaza reported on Friday at 11:14 p.m. that four women (ages 18-21) had fled the restaurant only paying $40 of an $88.56 bill. An employee was able to get the plate number that came back to a Chevrolet Lumina owned by a 42-year-old Hull woman, who was the mother of one of the patrons.

The bill was paid in full with an apology, police said.

MV crashes

- At 7:38 a.m. on Monday (Jan. 11) there was a mishap in the parking lot behind the medical building at 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Police said a 2003 Honda Accord, driven by a 40-year-old Scituate man, backed into a 2005 Toyota Scion, operated by an 86-year-old Scituate woman. Police said the man driving the Honda did not see the Toyota that was traveling down the parking lot aisle. There was minor damage to both vehicles. There were no injuries. Police did not issue a citation because the accident was on private property.
- At 5:33 p.m. on Wednesday (Jan 13), there was a very minor, two-car accident in the parking lot of a business at 135 King St. There were no injuries and the parties involved exchanged paperwork; there was no police investigation. Police said the two cars involved were a 2008 Chrysler minivan, operated by a 19-year-old Scituate woman, and a 2003 back Audi A4 sedan, operated by a 30 year-old Cohasset man.
- At 6:11 p.m. on Friday (Jan. 15) a single-car accident was called in after the fact. Police said a 25-year-old Pembroke woman operating a 2008 Toyota Corolla was driving north on Forest Avenue (toward the water) when she lost control and hit a large rock at the foot of the hill by Black Rock Beach. There was minor damage to the car; there is no cell phone reception at the site so she left the scene and drove to the Hull Police Station. The caller reported that the woman, his daughter-in-law is seven months pregnant and he would take her to the hospital for evaluation.
- An officer on his way to work observed an 1998 Mazda pickup at the entrance to the MBTA station off Route 3A. Further investigation revealed the 87-year-old Cohasset man driving the pickup had lost control and hit the island at the entrance to the train parking lot taking down a traffic control sign. The truck had to be towed and police gave the driver a ride home. Police have filed for a medical evaluation of the driver with the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

Summonsed

- A 24-year-old Malden man driving a Chevrolet pickup truck is being summonsed to court for being unlicensed. An officer monitoring traffic on Sohier Street at about 10:14 a.m. on Monday (Jan. 11) observed the pickup had a failed inspection sticker and pulled it over. The operator could only provide a Brazilian passport and did not have a Massachusetts license after having lived here for seven years, police said. The man is facing charges of operating while unlicensed and operating a motor vehicle with a failed inspection sticker.
- A 23-year-old Hull woman is being summonsed for operating an uninsured motor vehicle, an unregistered vehicle and operating with a failed inspection sticker. Police said an officer saw the failed sticker and pulled over the 1991 Hyundai she was driving at the intersection of Sohier Street and Ripley Road at 9:53 a.m. on Wednesday (Jan. 13). A computer check revealed the registration had been revoked for not having insurance.

Warrant

A 25-year-old Cohasset man was arrested at about 3 p.m. on Monday (Jan. 11) on a warrant out of Brockton District Court for larceny over $250. The arrest was made when an officer was assisting with a landlord/tenant dispute on North Main Street and ran a computer check on the 25-year-old man.

Lost pouch

Police picked up a pouch containing a caller's identification and State Police badge after getting a call at 12:53 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 12). The caller had left the pouch on the bench at the train station. He later picked it up at the police station.

Dark tint

Police pulled over a 2003 BMW with tinted windows last Tuesday (Jan. 12) at 1:40 p.m. on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. In speaking with the 26-year-old Weymouth operator it was determined he had a doctor's note allowing the dark tint. Police said it is illegal in Massachusetts to have dark, tinted windows on a vehicle. Windows must allow 65 percent of the light through unless there is a medical need for the dark tint. Police have tint meters that can measure the tint. The law governing tinted windows was enacted about 20 years ago for officer safety, police said. An officer needs to be able to see into the car that he or she is walking up to.

Customs

On Tuesday (Jan. 12) police heard from Customs and Border Patrol at Kennedy Airport in New York that they had detained a Cohasset woman with an active warrant that showed up on the National Criminal Information Center database. She was attempting to leave the country for a vacation.

The warrant was for a misdemeanor and was therefore non-extraditable, police said.

Envelope

A 65-year-old Cohasset resident in the Jerusalem Road area reported to police last week that someone had tampered with a FedEx envelope left at her home. When she found the envelope, it had been opened and the contents had apparently been read.

The FedEx driver said the envelope was sealed when it was delivered. Police are looking into the matter.

Fitness studio to stay open; seeks resolution equipment. Some of the equipment is in duplicate — a factor which, alone, leads me to conclude that this far exceeds a permitted home occupation," Egan wrote in the order.

On Thursday morning, property owner Wilmarc Charles said in an e-mail he was told by the Town of Cohasset his business of one-on-one personal training would be allowed under zoning and plans to continue operating Unique Fitness Studio while the "misunderstanding" is resolved.

If the business continues to operate without complying with zoning bylaw, Egan said, they face the $100 per day fine.

"We're going to find out what sort of changes we can make so we can comply with the bylaw.'

— Will Charles, 25 Ripley Road

Several months ago, Charles approached Egan with general questions about conducting a home occupation at 25 Ripley Road. According to the cease-and-desist order, Egan reviewed the basic criteria of a home occupation as outlined in the zoning bylaws.

"I also reminded (Charles) that the 25 Ripley Road property was very visible and, having been the subject of a controversial proposal in the past, would certainly attract attention if regulations were not followed," Egan stated in his letter.

When the Mariner interviewed Egan last week in preparation for its feature article on Unique Fitness Studio, he said that the fitness studio is an allowed use in residential area under home occupation, similar to a dentist, lawyers, artist, or piano teacher who works out of their home. He said the business was described to him as one-on-one personal training.

However, when he toured the Unique Fitness Studio he found the business to be more than what he felt was appropriate for a residential area.

"It's beyond the scope of allowed home occupation, well beyond," Egan said in an interview, adding he imagined the business as being more of a personal fitness consulting, rather than the multiple professional fitness equipment he found at 25 Ripley Road last Friday.

"It's certainly not fair to the residential neighborhood, but it's also not fair to legitimate commercial operations paying commercial rent," Egan said. The cease and desist order was effective immediately on Tuesday, Jan. 19.

In the letter, Egan states if Charles is to pursue the endeavor he needs to furnish a floor plan showing the areas designated for instruction, proof of personal trainer Steve Myers' residency at 25 Ripley Road, proposed hours, a plan to contain any sights and sounds associated with the business, and any other information necessary to insure compliance with the town's zoning bylaws.

However, in an interview, Egan said what they have in mind may not be do-able in the context of a home occupation.

"Frankly, I don't think they can make (enough) changes to comply with the bylaw," Egan said.

Charles said Unique Fitness Studio plans to address the building commissioner's concerns.

"We're going to find out what sort of changes we can make so we can comply with the bylaw," Charles said.

Clarification

As a clarification, Charles said the Mariner's description of his Unique Fitness Studio as a "gym" in last week's article, "Gym is latest use of Ripley Road building," was not accurate.

"This is not a gym, this is studio," Charles said. As Unique Fitness Studio they intend to cater to up to three clients at one time. A "gym," he said, implies a membership, many multiples of equipment, and the ability to work out on your own. At Unique Fitness Studio all clients must have a relationship with a personal trainer, Charles said.

The zoning bylaws allow a portion of a single-family home in a residential district to be used for a home occupation under specific conditions including, no more than one non-resident can be employed at any given time, no more than 40 percent of the ground floor (and not to exceed 500 square feet total floor area) can be devoted to the business. There can be no display of goods, wares, or materials of the occupation visible from the lot line. There can be not advertising on the premises (with few exceptions) and the building cannot be rendered objectionable or detrimental to the residential character of the neighborhood.

Bylaw deals setback to this, future turbine projects an hour deliberating. The deliberation took several twists and turns as members tried to reach a consensus. Several motions and amendments to those motions were proposed and discussed.

Notably, Brewer proposed approving one turbine, the one sited farther away from Route 3A. However, his motion failed to receive any support and a vote was not taken. The board did take a 3-1 vote to deny the special permit (Ivimey, Moore, and member Charles Samuelson voted in favor of denial; Brewer voted against). The vote could not constitute a denial because according to state statutes a super-majority, with at least four members agreeing to a motion to approve or deny, is necessary.

Moore also proposed a motion that would have approved the project contingent on the applicant seeking a variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals on the setback issue.

Eventually, Ivimey moved to approve the application for the sole purpose of bringing the proceedings to a close.

"There is no other motion that will bring this to a head, to a termination," Ivimey said.

During the deliberation Samuelson noted the bigger picture evident in what came to be the ultimate denial of the project.

"The way the bylaw is written (not allowing a fall down zone in a residential district) prohibits wind turbines from being built in Cohasset," Samuelson said. All the large swaths of land targeted as potential turbine sites are in, or abut, residential districts. "I would support the (Alternative Energy Committee) adding something in (the bylaw) to enable these types of facilities to be built."

In an e-mail sent after Wednesday's decision, CCI-Energy legal counsel Kenneth Ingber said the project became "an unintended casualty of that flawed language (in the bylaw).

"The Planning Board went out of its way to commend CCI Energy for fully and satisfactorily answering every concern raised in the initial denial of the application for a wind energy project on Scituate Hill," Ingber said.

"CCI reaffirms that its proposed project exemplifies Cohasset's stated goal of encouraging wind energy and remains the single best project in the single best location in the town. It is in as remote a location as there is in Cohasset yet still will provide the Town of Cohasset the significant financial and green benefits of a good wind energy project."

Ingber said the CCI Energy would re-evaluate the situation and determine the best way to proceed.

"CCI Energy remains committed to realizing a wind energy project that Cohasset overwhelmingly wants to see implemented," Ingber said.

Voices from the meeting

"This whole thing has not been a lot of fun. I wouldn't wish it on my worst enemy."

— Al Moore, Planning Board chairman, on the entire wind turbine application process.

"I'd hesitate to fix the bylaw through this permit."

— Jean Healey Dippold, planning board member, but a non-voting member on this application.

"I can't think of a reason why it would be illegal but it is not a common thing in my experience."

– Town Counsel Richard Hucksam, on chair Al Moore's motion to approve the special permit conditioned upon the applicant seeking a variance from the Zoning Board on the setback issue.

"CCI wants this to be a good project, not good in the sense the opponents want use to build it in a different hemisphere, but good in the sense it addresses the reasonable concerns raised by the board and the public."

— Kenneth Ingber, legal counsel for CCI-Energy.

"It's a judgment issue. You may believe that wind power is the way to go, that it is good for the town, but also believe there are problems with the application."

— Clark Brewer, planning board member, who ultimately voted in favor of approving the turbines.

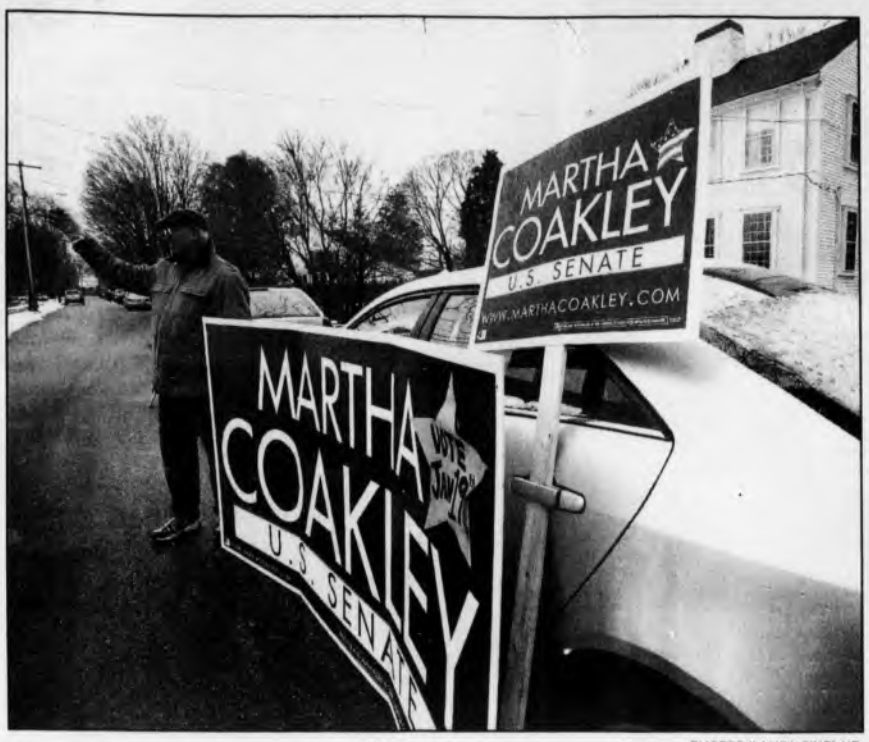
Town census for 2010

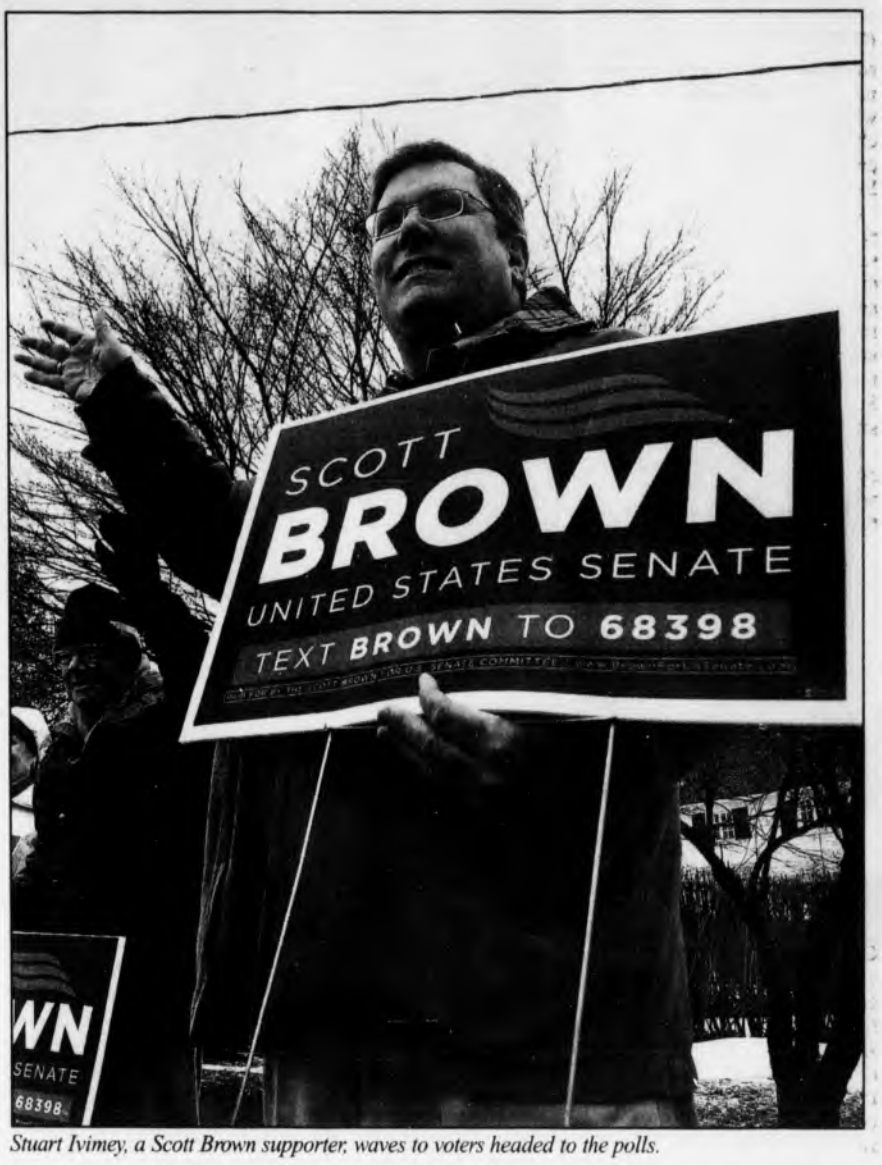
The Town Census for 2010 will be mailed to each household within the next several weeks. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.



The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through December 31, 2010. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible with a current rabies certificate although you may have recently renewed your 2009 license.

In addition to the census form, enclosed will be an informational form from the Veterans' Agent for veterans and their surviving spouse.



If you did not receive your census, please contact the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

SENATE RACE

All day on Tuesday the polls in the Town Hall auditorium were abuzz. The quick ballot, with only one circle to blacken, helped keep the lines moving.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said the morning hours were very busy and at times the line to get in the door was all the to the Town Hall driveway. By 3:30p.m., 42 percent of the voting public turned up at Town Hall. The after-work rush pushed voter turnout a clear 10 percent over an anticipated 52 percent voter turnout.

Supporters of Republican Brown and Democrat Coakley were on Highland Avenue waving to cars and both sides were receiving various signs of approval.

COHASSET RESULTS FOR SENATE RACE

	Pr1	Pr2	Total
Scott P. Brown	1,265	1,136	2,401
Martha Coakley	722	697	1,419
Joseph L. Kennedy	11	6	17

Total	1,998	1,840	3,838

"Most people have made up their minds before they drive by, but we want to show support," said Judy Fitzsimmons, who was holding a Brown sign. At 4p.m. Cohasset resident Owen O'Malley said he had been holding his Brown sign since 7a.m. when the polls opened.

"I'm a big supporter of the winner," O'Malley said hours before the results came in, turns out he was right.

"(Brown) is a common-sense guy. He has the best policies, he's down to earth, firm on terrorism, he wants to reform health care, just not with the present bill," said Adele Janssens of Nichols Road.

A few steps away about a dozen democrats had been holding signs in shifts throughout the day.

"We don't want to see the country go backwards," said Ronnie McMorris in the Coakley camp. In the morning both camps reported there had been some friendly sparring between the two groups.

John Cafferty, Republican state committeeman of Hingham, which represents the same eight-town district as Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, was at the Park Plaza Brown headquarters in Boston to celebrate Scott's victory. "It is really rocking here," he reported. "The place is mobbed. This race has implications for the state and the entire country."

Describing Election Day and the race itself, Cafferty said, "It's like the seventh game of the World Series. We are playing the Yankees and the game is tied, 5-5. Then David Ortiz comes to bat and hits one over the Green Monster."

Cohasset's Democratic Town Committee chairman Kevin McCarthy may not have utilized the same analogy, but was ready to move forward when reached on Wednesday. He congratulated Scott Brown in his decisive victory.

"While we Democrats are disappointed in the results it's important to note that the people of the Commonwealth have spoken and clearly chosen Scott Brown as our new U.S. Senator. It is now time for us all to come together and work collaboratively to address the very serious domestic, economic and foreign policy challenges pressing upon our nation," McCarthy said in an e-mail.

Home Instead SENIOR CARE
by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison
MED HELP
Two-thirds of the aging population suffers from two or more chronic conditions that requiare medication. For a senior receiving home health services, assistance with medication management may be necessary. Many seniors can require assistance with their prescribed medications for issues such as high blood pressure, diabetes, and arthritis. Without the appropriate support system, it can be difficult for an elderly client to manage his or her medication regimen. An experienced home care aide can accompany the senior to the doctors, inform you about the findings, and assist in getting new prescriptions filled. A home healthcare nurse can assist the senior with medication adherence by repackaging the patient's medications into medication organizers (pill boxes).
Managing your parents' medication can be a complex and time-consuming process, especially if it means interrupting your day several times to remind them to take the right pill. We can help. Our home healthcare aides can provide medication reminders, as well as monitoring possible reactions. We can also provide the day-to-day care that can be so exhausting – bathing, grooming, running errands, cooking, and cleaning. We also have trained Alzheimer's care available. Our services are flexible, to match your needs, which means we can offer 24-hour long-term care, or temporary respite care for overnight. Call 781-878-2994 to learn what we can do for you. Our address is 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

GIVING KIDS A NEEDED BOOST
New research shows that children ages four to eight years are safer while riding in automobiles if they sit in booster seats instead of just using seat belts. Children in belt-positioning booster seats were found to be 45 percent less likely to sustain a serious injury during a crash. This updated research supports recommendations from the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, which recommend that children use booster seats from age four until they are tall enough to fit in vehicle seats. The American Academy of Pediatrics says that children are tall enough to fit into a regular seat-belt seat when they reach 4'9", which occurs anywhere from age eight to twelve.
When you have children of any age riding in your car, safety is your first priority, from booster seats to brakes. At ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT, we can provide the regular maintenance that every car needs to run safely and efficiently. Our friendly ASE Master-certified technicians can check your car from bumper-to-bumper and make sure that your most important treasures are safe and secure on the road. AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

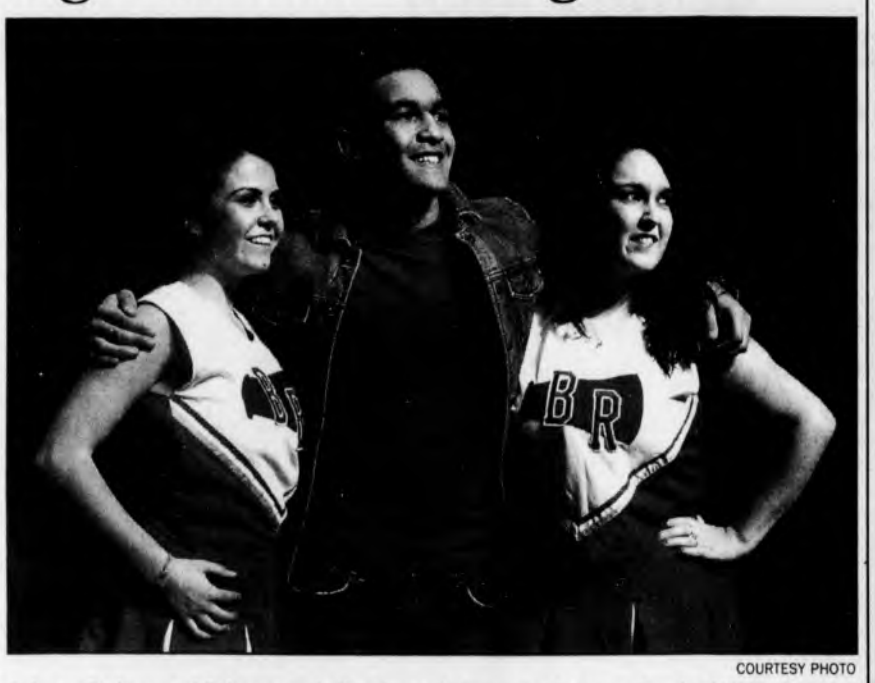
JANUARY

Hello Cohasset. This week has been an interesting one as we had the election that of course, some are pleased with and some are not, some mild weather (well, a bit warmer than the last few weeks at least) and not a whole lot of news to share. It is hard to believe that we are getting ready to enter the last week or so of January as it still feels like the holidays and New Years Day just happened. Make sure to get your news for February to me as soon as you can for next week's column.

U. CONN

Congratulations go to Clifford J. Musto, a Cohasset resident who was recently named to the Dean's List for the fall 2009 semester from the University of Connecticut. To make the Dean's List, students must take at least 12 credits, finish the semester with a grade point average that is among the top 25 percent of students enrolled in their school or college, and have no grade below a "C."

This is great news Cliff and we look forward to hearing more.



ST. MICHAEL'S

Timothy A. Pilczak, son of Kenneth and Jo-Ann Pilczak of Cohasset, was named to the Dean's List for the Fall 2009 semester at Saint Michael's College. Tim is a Senior Business Administration major at the liberal arts, residential Catholic college located in the Burlington area of Vermont.

Tim graduated from Cohasset High School in 2005 and from Kents Hill School in Kents Hill, Maine in 2006. He is also Senior Captain of the Varsity Baseball Team at Saint Michael's. Tim attended Bond University in Brisbane, Australia in the Fall of 2008.

Students who complete a minimum of 12 credits and achieve a grade point average of at least 3.4 at the end of a semester are recognized for their scholarship by inclusion on the Dean's List.

Congratulations, Tim!

TUFTS

Tufts University recently announced the dean's list for the 2009 fall semester. Among these students were the following Cohasset residents:

Hat's off to Joseph Rosano, Class of 2010; and Caren Garber, Class of 2011.

Dean's list honors at Tufts University require a semester grade point average of 3.4 or greater

NOTRE DAME

Thomas Chase of Cohasset has been named to the Dean's List in the University of Notre Dame's College of Arts and Letters for outstanding scholarship during the Fall 2009 semester. Students who achieve dean's honors at Notre Dame represent the top 30 percent of students in their college.

Great work, Thomas!

ANIMAL SHELTER

Mark your calendars for WinterFest Beer and Wine Tasting event! On Saturday, Feb. 13 from 7 to 10 pm., the beautiful Hatherly Country Club will host "Winter-Fest", featuring red and white wine selection, seasonal beers, gourmet food pairings and live and silent auction. Tickets are $50 and can be purchased online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org, in person at the Shelter during public visiting hours, or by telephone order with Visa or Mastercard at (781) 544-4533. Advanced ticket purchase is recommended; tickets may not be available for purchase at the door. Make sure as you are out and about driving around during our crazy and hectic at times busy days, you stop and enjoy the small things that make you smile.

'FOOTLOOSE'

"Footloose," based on the1980s movie, will explode onto the Company Theatre Stage with classic '80s anthems such as "Holding Out For a Hero," "Almost Paradise," "Lets Hear it for the Boy" and the title track, "Footloose."

Life in small town Beaumont is peaceful until city boy, Ren, arrives. Breaking every taboo, Ren brings back dance to the heart of a town held back by the memory of a tragedy.

Cohasset cyclists raise money for Jimmy Fund

Six Cohasset residents raised $17,682 in the 30th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge held this past August. That sum was part of the total $30.4 million that the nearly 5,000 PMCers raised in the 190-mile bike event.

Cohasset participants included: Peter Vitello, Kevin Butler, William Prendergast, William Doyle, Joseph Joyce and Rue Wilson.

The PMC's 30th year marked a total of $270,000,000 in funds raised for cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. The contribution represents 100 percent of every rider-raised dollar, a charity pass through rate nearly unparalleled within the $3 billion athletic fundraising event industry. This PMC fundraising gift is the single largest contribution made to the Jimmy Fund in 2009, representing 50 percent of the charity's annual revenue.

The organization had set the fundraising goal at $30 million. "Exceeding our fundraising goal in this troubled economy is a tribute to PMC riders' commitment to raising money for cancer research and care," said Billy Starr, PMC founder and executive director. "It also shows that people understand the necessity of funding research for this deadly disease."

The ceremonial check was presented to Dana-Farber president Dr. Edward J. Benz Jr. at the House of Blues recently at a party attended by some 800 PMC cyclists and volunteers.

This is the third straight year the PMC has been able to contribute 100 percent of every rider-raised dollar to the cause. The results were possible due to presenting sponsors the Boston Red Sox Foundation and Overstock.com who, along with 200 other corporate sponsors, underwrite the cost of producing the event and provide in-kind contributions of goods and services. In addition, 3,000 volunteers work throughout the year and during PMC weekend, fulfilling many roles that are typically paid positions.

In 2009, the PMC attracted 4,937 cycling fundraisers from 36 states and eight countries. Each cyclist was required to raise a minimum of between $1,000 and $4,200 to participate, depending on the route chosen. Routes ranged from 47 to 190 miles over one or two days. More than 90 percent of PMCers raised more than their respective fundraising minimum, according to Starr.

Founded in 1980 when 36 cyclists rode across Massachusetts and raised $10,200 for the Jimmy Fund, the PMC is known today as the "gold standard" of athletic fundraising events, due to the sums it raises and its consistently efficient charity pass-through rate. In 30 years, 61,606 cyclists have ridden in the PMC and 36,269 people have volunteered to make the PMC such a successful and well-supported event.

The 31st annual PMC is set for Aug. 7 and 8, 2010. Registration opened online on Jan. 12 for alumni, and Jan. 19 for newcomers. For more information about the Pan-Mass Challenge visit the website at pmc.org.

A glimpse at history

Historical Society welcomes new staff member

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A winter walk in the village today may involve a pair of pajamas pants, a winter coat and snow boots. But, in the late 1800s, a winter walk in the village was an event.

To show what a winter walk may have looked like for a stylish Cohasset lady in the 1890s, the Cohasset Historical Society has put together a vignette of just that.

A three-piece walking suit of maroon and black with a full skirt is on display with a variety of 1890s-era accessories: a parasol, a fan, a black hat and gloves, a shawl, a beaded bag, and a hair combs.

It's the first in what is likely to become a bi-monthly "vignette" display of different clothing and accessories found in the Society's extensive textile collection. The new effort is the brainchild of Martha Hurtig, the society's chair of the textile department.

"We have all sorts of good things (in our collection) that haven't been out" on exhibit recently or at all, Hurtig said. The Historical Society has over 3,000 cataloged pieces of historical textiles from elaborate ball gowns, to fancy hats to children's clothes.

The small displays seemed like a good way to rotate pieces of the collection through exhibits — and take less time than putting together a full exhibit.

The idea for the micro-exhibit was spurred on, in part, by a new addition o to the Cohasset Historical Society team — Martha Fisher. Fisher is able to work at the Historical Society through a grant sponsored by Coastline Elderly Services and aims to primarily help out in organizing, repairing, maintaining and exhibiting the textiles collection.

"I've dropped into a little piece of heaven," Fisher said. A large part of her career – 17 years – was spent working for Filene's in Downtown Crossing as a decorator. She designed in-store displays as well as the window displays.

In one of those small world coincidences, Fisher, a Hull resident, the maroon and black dress which is currently on display bears her handwriting on one of the tags.

Twenty-nine years ago while she was working for Filene's, they were putting together an interior display with antique sleighs and wanted historical clothing to match. From a previous visit to the Cohasset Historical Society Fisher knew of its collection. She and co-worker ventured to Cohasset to pick out the historical attire. One of the dresses they chose was the maroon and black three-piece walking suit.

"It's strange I have ended up back here 29 years later," Fisher said.

Harnessing her experience as a decorator, the vignette could have ended up in one of the Filene's windows.

"I started with one figure…and it just expanded," Fisher said.

Unfortunately, like many local historical societies, many of the items were not recorded accurately and little is known of their origin.

"There are so many things in here that just appeared, back in the day the records weren't kept," Hurtig said.

One of Fisher's focuses over the next year is to do stabilizion and repair work on many of the older dresses that were not conserved properly in the past.

"Every time I open something I get surprised…everyday is like a treasure hunt," Fisher said

Martha Fisher, who is joined the staff at the historical society on a grant, stands among her 1890s-era winter walk vignette. She chose pieces from the collection to represent what a woman might have worn for a walk in Cohasset village in the 1890s.

One of Fisher's focuses over the next year is to do stabilizion and repair work on many of the older dresses that were not conserved properly in the past.

Here are some stylish accessories that a fashionable Victorian-era woman would have had in her wardrobe.

Post-1950 donations wanted

In the preparation of the current small exhibit as well as in other recent exhibits, it has become clear the Historical Society's textiles collection is significantly lagging after the 1940s.

"We'd like more contemporary, Cohasset-connected donation," said Lynne DeGiacomo, historical society director.

The Society only had one dress from the 1950s and nothing later than that. On their wish list is prom dresses worn by Cohasset students from the 1950s up to last year. However, older everyday dresses would also be welcomed. Bathing suits are also sought.

All new donations should be able to have a documented connection to Cohasset due to space and storage restrictions.

And the Historical Society always welcomes volunteers.

On a bi-monthly basis, the Historical Society plans to put together small exhibits, like this one, to display more of its collection throughout the year. The winter walking scene featuring 1890s clothing, including a maroon and black three-piece walking suit, and accessories will be on display into February.

Mr. and Mrs. Jared Upton Cosulich

Cosulich — Sardina

Lauren Elizabeth Sardina and Jared Upton Cosulich were married in Concord, on Oct. 11, 2009. The ceremony was held at Trinitarian Congregational Church and officiated by Rev. John Lombard. A reception with dinner and dancing took place immediately following at the Pierce House in Lincoln.

The bride's parents are Susan and Michael Sardina, of Cohasset, formerly of Concord. The groom's parents are Chris Upton and Jeff Cosulich, also formerly of Concord but now living in Bedford.

The bride and groom met in eighth grade when the Sardina family moved to Concord, but there were many years of friendship before the couple eventually became engaged in December of 2007.

Following a honeymoon in Tahiti and New Zealand, the couple returned to their home in San Francisco, Calif. There, Mr. Cosulich is an entrepreneur whose primary product is the wedding-planning website WeddingMapper.com. Mrs. Cosulich does private wealth management with Barclays and serves on the board of trustees for C.E.O. Women (Creating Economic Opportunities for Women).

A lawyer who rocks

Howie Altholtz plays local show in Hull Jan. 30

On Saturday, Jan. 30, Altholtz and his three-man band will take to the stage Hull's C-Note and plan to put on an energy-filled set.

The Boston lawyer and Cedar Ledge resident is bundling his musical passion and talent in an effort to give local residents the chance to have fun and dance.

On Saturday, Jan. 30, Altholtz and his three-man band will take to the stage Hull's C-Note and plan to put on an energy-filled set.

The band, dubbed howieHowie, has had several late nights (and plan to have a few more) of rehearsal in preparation for the Jan. 30 show at the C-Note across from Nantasket Beach.

The band that backs Altholtz are current or former Berklee College of Music students and he said it just may be the best band he has ever played with. It includes Tatsuya Yoshinaga on bass, Tim Schrock on drums and backup vocals, Joe Feloni on guitar and Altholtz plays guitar and does vocals.

"They have tremendous energy and are super-talented technically," Altholtz said, adding his focus is "teaching them the passionate side of music."

Altholtz knows a lot about having a passion for music – it is what has kept him playing for audiences across four decades.

In the 1970s Altholtz was the frontman for the Test Tube Babies, which had a decade of success in the New York City music scene.

Altholtz, a songwriter, wrote the music and lyrics for the Test Tube Babies and has never stopped writing. He'll debut a few new original songs at his upcoming gig.

However, he admits, he does not know how to read or write music. (He quickly notes he shares this quality with Paul McCartney).

COURTESY PHOTO

HowieHowie will play at the C-Note in Hull on Saturday, Jan. 30. Members include bass player Tatsuya Yoshinaga, drummer and backup singer Tim Schrock, guitar and lead singer Howie Altholtz of Cohasset and guitar player Joe Feloni.

One thing Altholtz said his audience could expect is the unexpected.

"I like to mix it up and get that spontaneous energy," Altholtz said.

Some of the surprises he was willing to divulge to the Mariner include a couple of surprise guests – a young guitar prodigy from Boston, Leo Fama, and well-known rock violinist, Craig Thaler. He also plans to have two of his band members switch instruments for a song to show off their versatility and "add to the drama."

In addition, Altholtz plans to use his place on the stage to raise awareness of the opportunities to help those suffering in the wake of the earthquake in Haiti.

Music has been a small, but steady, part of Altholtz's life.

"I'm busy, I have a job, a real job at a law firm, and I'm a dad, but I've never lost the passion for the music," Altholtz said. He works in Boston for the law firm Ruberto, Israel & Weiner and is father to two teenage daughters.

In addition to his original songs, Altholtz will mix in a few select cover songs – done his way.

To give a taste, he said he plans to do a "punked out" version of Mariah Carey's love ballad "Without you."

"No one's every done it the way we're going to do it," Altholtz said with a laugh.

Overall, he said his music has been described as "edgy pop" and many of his original songs include messages of social justice and progressive values.

For Altholtz, music is a combination of "good songwriting, meaningful lyrics, a high-energy rock structure and plenty of attitude…that's what rock and roll is all about."

With howieHowie he has played shows at Boston's Paradise, in Quebec, in California, but has only recently started playing shows in "his own backyard." He played a Thursday night show at the Hull's C-Note in August.

"If I can spread a message, believe I'm saying something important, have fun and dance, then it is all worth it," Altholtz said.

HowieHowie will play at the C-Note, 159 Nantasket Ave., on Saturday, Jan. 30. There are two opening acts beginning at 9p.m.; howieHowie plans to go on around 10:15p.m.

"It's going to be the place to be on a cold January night," Altholtz said.

Chill out for a great cause!

All individuals, teams, groups or families with warm hearts willing to do something cool for charity are welcome to join the craziness.

January winds up with an icy edge when the Drowned Hogs storm Nantasket Beach and make their annual mad dash into the Atlantic Ocean. At noon, on Saturday, Jan. 30, hundreds of hardy nutcases committed to doing something cool and crazy for a cause — Wellspring Multi-Service Center — will predict the arrival of spring in their own special way. Anyone can join, and there are only a few rules.

The swim doesn't count unless the swimmer fully dunks. Wet suits are allowed only if the wearer also wears a tutu and a tiara.

All individuals, teams, groups or families with warm hearts willing to do something cool for charity are welcome to join the craziness. Information and pledge sheets are available at www.drownedhogs.org or www.wellspringhull.org. Registration fee is $10 and includes the 2010 Drowned Hog T-Shirt and a Drowned Hog button entitling the wearer to great discounts at local retailers all weekend.

Following the icy plunge at high noon, survivors and onlookers are all invited to warm up in the Clarion Hotel at the Nantasket Beach Chamber of Commerce Drowned Hog Soup and Chowder Festival presenting scrumptious offerings from dozens of local eating establishments. Tickets are $10. All proceeds will benefit the food pantry at Wellspring.

It's not too late to join in the craziness. The New Year takes on new significance when an icy dive in the ocean is part of the program! Join the hundreds of philanthropists who straddle a fine line between charity and insanity…and go hog-wild for charity. Visit www.drownedhogs.org, www.wellspringhull.org or call 781-925-3211 to be part of this polar plunge.

Cohasset High School yearbooks

Cohasset High School is missing a couple of yearbooks from their collection including 1984, 1998, 2005 and any yearbooks prior to 1954. People who have one and are willing to donate it to the school can call assistant principal Mike Gill at 383-6100.

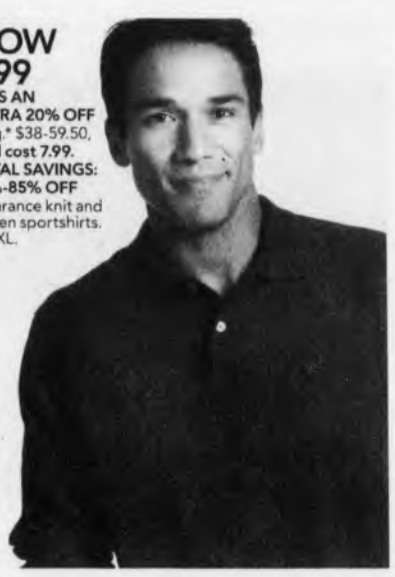
Also, a woman's CHS class ring has been found, circa 1953.

OCMS to host open house

The beginning of the New Year marks the active enrollment period for many schools in the area and Old Colony Montessori School is opening its doors to all community members interested in learning more about the OCMS Montessori curriculum.

A school-wide open house will take place 10 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Jan. 30. Parents are invited to tour the OCMS campus, meet with the director, teachers and staff members and visit the elementary and Children's House classrooms. Parents will also be invited to view Montessori materials and have questions answered while visiting the school.

OCMS is one of the oldest Montessori schools in the country, fully accredited and recognized by the Association Montessori Internationale. The AMI was founded in 1929 by Dr. Maria Montessori to maintain the integrity of her life's work, and to ensure that it would be perpetuated after her death. Currently, OCMS is the only school on the South Shore to hold this accreditation.



The open house is free of charge and open to the public. For more information or to have an information packet sent, call the school at 781-749-3698. Old Colony Montessori School is at 20 Derby St., Hingham.

Haitian hearts bleed for hope

The 7.1 magnitude quake crumbled buildings, tore apart communication lines, disrupted the port and airfield, and claimed as many as 200,000 lives on the large Central American island of Hispaniola which Haiti shares with the Dominican Republic.

Millions desperately need emergency relief.

Broken hearts lie scattered among the bloating dead piled up in the streets.

The medical response in the ravaged Haitian capital can't keep up with the crush injuries continuing to maim and kill. Workers claw through the ruins, praying to be rescuers of the living, not recoverers of lifeless remains.

People cry out for loved ones, not knowing if they are dead or alive.

The agony of not knowing reaches our shores, touching our neighbors who have friends or family in Haiti.

South Shore Hospital dietary aide Chardine Siclait, 42, has had many a sleepless night since the quake. All his family lives in Port Au Prince. His sister, eight months pregnant with twins, died in the quake. He also lost a cousin and her two small children.

Even before the deadly grasp of the earthquake dug into Port Au Prince, poverty stalked the Haitian people. There was already a lack of sanitation and medical care, and food and clean water were scarce.

Haiti is the poorest nation in the Western hemisphere. The people of Haiti are often called "the poorest of the poor" by relief groups.

The Rev. Mr. Stephen Buttrick, a deacon of Immaculate Conception Church in Weymouth, visited Haiti last month, staying at the now-destroyed Hotel Montana in Port-Au-Prince where five missionaries may have lost their lives during the quake. Deacon Buttrick, who was in Haiti as part of the Food For the Poor effort, vividly described the country's poverty.

"You can't even begin to imagine how bad it is without seeing it," he said. "Nothing can prepare you for what you see there. We witnessed children without clothes walk on animal and human feces to find food while picking through garbage dumps... there is poverty everywhere in Haiti."

As the Haitians still fear aftershocks from the quake, the cruelest aftershock is that there is now even less.

There isn't enough of anything.

Life blood pours into the dust, and there are no medical supplies, no food, no shelter from the dehydrating sun, no protection for wounds against the rats and swarming flies, not even water.

Many who thirst will not be assuaged.

As you read this, more than a week has passed, and millions still pray for help.

More than 3 million Haitians, a third of the nation's population, may need emergency relief.

The U.N. World Food Program plans to start feeding a million people in a week, 2 million in a month.

How can people who now thirst and hunger and bleed wait for a month?

Without life's basic needs, thousands will die in the days ahead.

Unless we help.

Across Cohasset, across our nation, across the world, people are banding together and reaching out to help the people of Haiti.

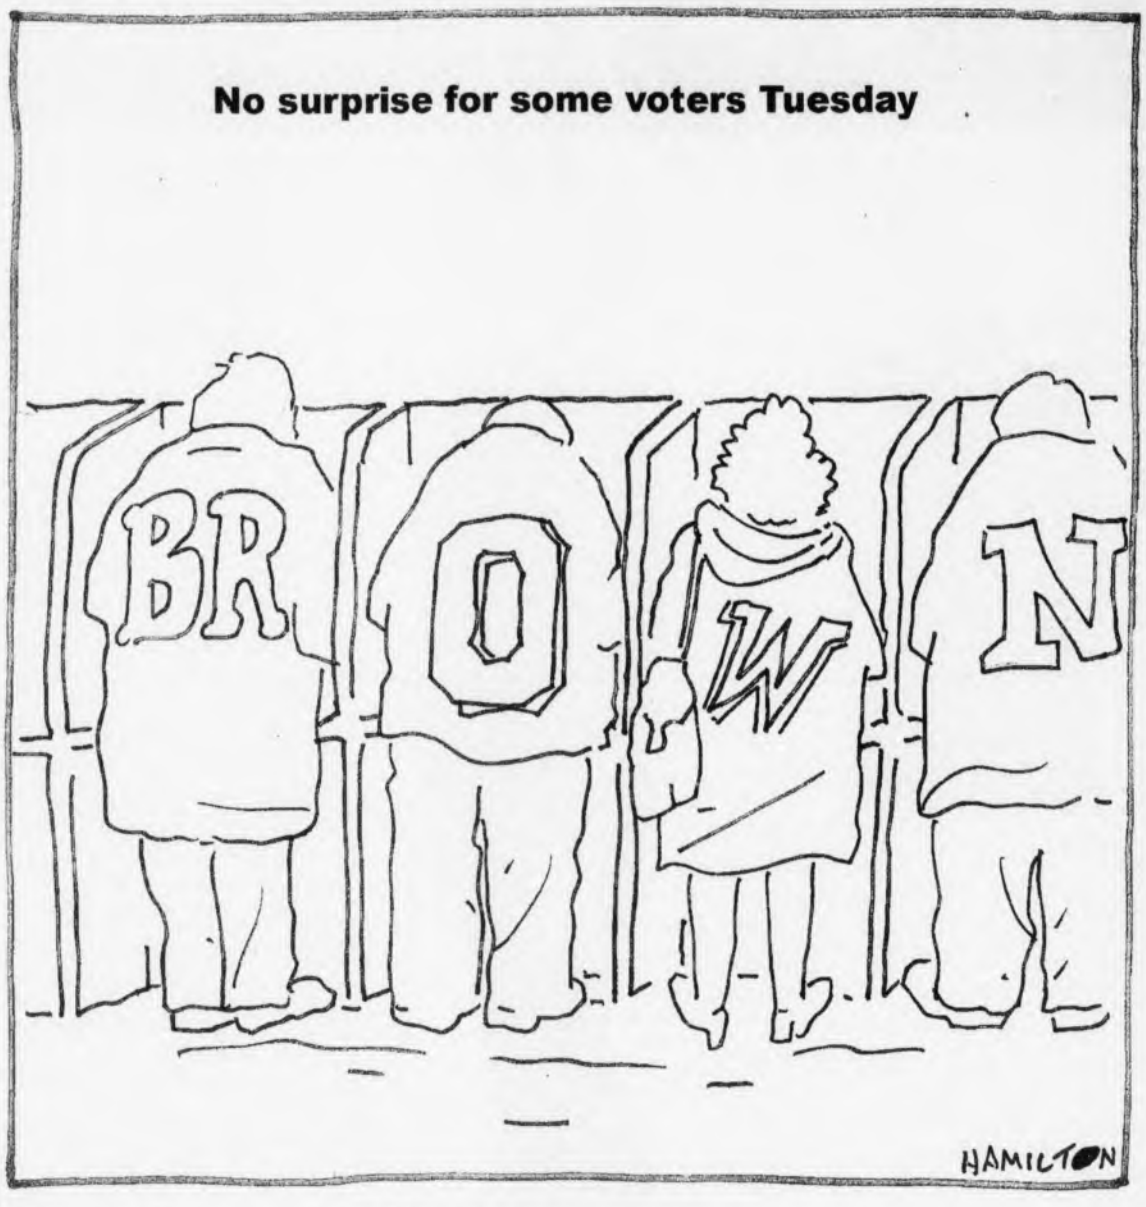
Food For The Poor, founded in 1982 to serve people in need in the United States, Latin America, and the Caribbean island nations, has been feeding Haitian people for 27 years, according to Deacon Buttrick. Ninety-seven percent of the money they receive goes directly to the people who need it, he said.

Food For The Poor reports that it has distributed 48,000 tractor-trailer loads of aid, built more than 55,000 housing units for people in need, improved sanitation in impoverished villages, and provided medical care during over the past three decades.

Cardinal Sean O'Malley authorized a separate collection in Catholic parishes throughout the Archdiocese.

Haitian hearts are broken, and the pieces are scattered all over the world.

In turn, the heart of the world is with the Haitian people.



"There is more room in a broken heart," singer Carly Simon once wrote.

We need to fill these broken hearts with hope.

We need to help as best we can.

We need to assure our sisters and brothers in Haiti, our children in Haiti, that they are not abandoned.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Stands behind view on who the new chief should be

TO THE EDITOR:

Last week you published my letter regarding the appointment of the new Police Chief. Regrettably, I discovered late Thursday that the information I had received in relation to the vote of the Selection Committee was incorrect. For including that in my letter, I was in error and apologize if that misinformation has upset anyone.

What does bother me is the message that was left on my home answering machine on Sunday. A member of the Board of Selectmen left me this message. I will say that the tone of the message was not nasty in any way, but made me feel like I was a child being reprimanded by a parent. The only person qualified to do that is my father. This letter retracting that misinformation was already being formed before the phone call. Although I can appreciate the selectman wanting to correct the information, the call was not.

This all being said, I do not apologize for my stance on the person chosen to fill this position. Although I had misinformation regarding the vote by the Selection Committee, the information I stated in my past letter in relation to this candidate was found in newspaper articles that any person can read. He must have interviewed incredibly well for the Selection Committee and the Board of Selectmen to have ignored this candidate's past controversies. What this town does not need is another controversial Police Chief. I think we have had our fill of that over the years. This man brings a lot of baggage that we do not need.

What the town needed was a person who knows what needs to be fixed in the department. Our Police Department has not had a great reputation in the past. I have had the department described to me as "Para-Military" by a resident of another town. I may not subscribe wholly to that description, but there are issues that need to be addressed. We need the department to become more involved with the members of this community other than interacting with them while responding to calls. We need the department to become more involved with the youth of this town. Right now I don't know any child, or adult for that matter, that would not feel intimidated by some members of the department. I'm not saying I want the "warm & fuzzies," but I think if we had police officers that came across as more approachable to the general public, the better the department would be. Who better to address these issues than a man who has been there for 25 years, who has seen the mistakes made in the past, who lives in this town, whose own children are growing up in this town. A man who had worked his way up through the ranks and looked forward to continuing that climb. A man who wouldn't have left under a cloud of controversy. The town has promoted from within in the past, and I and many other residents of Cohasset feel strongly the board should have done so this time. We have not had a strong Police Chief in many years. I believe that Jack Conte would have been that kind of Chief.

Appreciates support for Cradles to Crayons

TO THE EDITOR:

We would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to the Parishioners of St. Stephen's Church and to the students/families of the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools for their efforts in donating gently used and new goods for Cradles to Crayons. The December Drive was very successful in raising winter supplies for underprivileged children throughout Massachusetts. Thank you for your support!

There are over 300,000 children in need in the area and last year Cradles to Crayons was able to reach out to about 45,000. Clearly there is an ongoing need, and particularly during these cold climactic and economic times. If you have anything more that you would like to donate to Cradles to Crayons please review their drop off location and times at www.cradlestocrayons.org

Many thanks for all your support!

Federal grant needs full support

COMMENTARY

PAUL SCHUBERT

Over the past week an interesting grant option came forth through the Federal government that is a competitive grant of monies available for education reform. The descriptive term is Race to the Top. This is a multi-billion dollar program with each grant totaling $250 million per state distributed in a competitive process. The grant application requires three signatures: one, from the superintendent of the district, two, from the chairman of the district school committee, and three, from the district's local union president. Cohasset will send in the grant request and application with only two of the required three signatures, those of the school committee chair and the superintendent. The President of the Cohasset Teachers' Association has not agreed to sign the grant application.

I would like to explain my view and my support of the grant request.

The Cohasset school system has a long history of excellent performance. Whether AP tests, achievement tests, SAT, or MCAS scores are considered, or the list of superb universities or colleges that the graduates matriculate, Cohasset is consistently in the top rank of districts in the Commonwealth. This is a direct result of involved parents and administrators, motivated students, and most importantly a dedicated and professional teaching staff. The quality of the teaching staff has an enormous role in shaping the critical thought process needed for effective learning. We have in our district some of the most talented and dedicated teachers anywhere in the Commonwealth.

I will not belabor the point that Cohasset's finances are in for serious adjustment.

One clear source of funding that would not affect the town or the state financial bottom line is U.S. federal grant monies that are available. The Race to the Top grant is one of these grants that can potentially aid our town and

Haiti and more: Options for response

COMMENTARY

THE REV. DR. JAN CARLSSON-BULL

"What can we do?" Perhaps the first words to come out of our hearts after we gasped in horror at the suffering of our neighbors in Haiti. What can we do to help? Tremor follows tremor, and this morning as I write yet another shockwave has moved through this island nation, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere.

With our minds on Haiti and the life and legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., those words that Dr. King spoke to a congregation assembled at the National Cathedral in our nation's capital on the Sunday before he was murdered resound for us today: "We are tied together in the single garment of destiny, caught in an inescapable network of mutuality. And whatever affects one directly affects all indirectly." This past Sunday we sang a paraphrase of this, the words of Cecily Taylor: "Our world is one world: what touches one affects us all…"

We are affected; we are touched. We are family. What can we do? With 3.5 million people wandering amid the debris and over 100,000 dead and thousands unaccounted for, where do we begin?

This past Sunday and this coming Sunday, the full offering of First Parish is dedicated to the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee/Unitarian Universalist Association Haiti Earthquake Relief Fund. Then from February through August, our commitment to dedicate 25 percent of our non-pledge offering to a non-profit will be directed to this fund. Yes, it's a denominational channel for responding. Yes, there are many funds set up by religious bodies in this country and worldwide that will also answer well that question of what can we do. There is a multitude of aid programs launched by larger emergency response organizations. All seek to help.

Why did our Outreach Committee choose the UUSC/UUA Haiti Earthquake Relief Fund? There's the easy answer that "it's us." It's Unitarian Universalist. But our 25 percent plate offering has gone to many organizations that aren't "UU." The appeal of this fund is its focus on outreach and justice. From its beginnings during the early years of World War II, the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee (UUSC) has focused on human rights, rescuing Jewish children and families from the terror of Nazism. In recent years, working with our denominational association, they have responded to disasters on the scale of 9/11, the Indian Ocean tsunami, Hurricane Katrina, and the earthquake in Pakistan.

The appeal of this fund is its focus on outreach and justice.

As a justice organization, the operative term is partnership. The UUSC partners with grassroots organizations in the venue of the disaster. UUSC personnel are working with indigenous groupPapaye Peasant Movement (MPP) and KROS, the Regional Coordination of Southeast Organization — helping them to be effective for the most marginalized in Port-au-Prince, Haiti's capital and the site most several impacted. The Program Director is training emergency response medical teams. The intent is to work through these grassroots groups to reach folks most likely to be overlooked by mainstream emergency response organizations. As the Service Committee reminds us, when disaster happens, there are clusters of the population reached last. Using the example of how an ambulance serves a large city, "an emergency call from a wealthy neighborhood can result in an ambulance arriving twice as fast as it will arrive in a poor neighborhood." In a disaster like Haiti, UUSC funds and partnerships target "the people whom the ambulance takes twice as long to reach."

Haiti is already beyond poor. The irony is that it holds the status of the second oldest republic in the Western Hemisphere, second only to the United States. In 1804, Haiti won through violent resistance its independence from the French, who had turned the land into a slave colony. The slaves revolted and took back the indigenous name, Haiti, "land of mountains." Today this land of mountains is home to 9 million neighbors suffering fracture upon fracture. Economic disparity among nations is nowhere more acute than between Haiti and the United States. How this came about invites us all to do some homework on this land of such remarkable resilience and resistance and on the history of U.S. policy in Haiti. In the meantime, we hear the cries of people buried in rubble and crumpled in an infrastructure that exists by a breath.

Even as this coming Sunday's offering will be focused on Haiti, morning worship will focus on First Parish's response to the needs of neighbors in another desperately poor country to the south. Guatemala Sunday will happen at 10 a.m. as a worship experience in the Parish House. A team of First Parishioners — the Common Hope Vision Team — spent 10 memorable days last October in Antigua, Guatemala through Project Common Hope. For many years First Parishioners have sponsored children in Guatemala with funds, letters, visits, and a broader support to families. Some of the sponsored children are now adults with families of their own. In October, the Common Hope Vision team reconnected with sponsored children and their families, worked with villagers to build a one-room addition onto a home, led pre-school classes, taught math and computer skills and more, and learned so much from their hosts. Like the work of the UUSC, the team partnered with families in this village to make a positive difference in desperate lives.

All of us can find ways to make a positive difference in desperate lives. We can give money. We can go where we're invited and work with folks "on the ground." We can learn about the poorest of the poor in this and other nations. We can advocate for a change of policies and practices at the highest levels of international affairs.

What can we do? So much, so very much, as we remember that our world is one, that we are family with the mother of a city in shambles searching for her children, with the child of a mountain village wanting nothing more than to go to school. To learn more about the UUSC/UUA Haiti Earthquake Relief Fund, visit www.uusc.org/haiti earthquake. To learn more about Common Hope visit www.commonhope.org. Or visit the Parish House on 23 North Main St. for literature on both ventures.

Harbor forum is Thursday, Jan. 28

By Terry MacCormack
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Have you seen an increase or decrease in marine life over the past several years?

With the State of the Harbor 2010 night just a week away, Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) is finalizing a list of questions it plans to ask the panel of professionals it has assembled for the event. The event, designed to inform CSCR's research for future projects and to bring the issues facing the harbor to importance in the eyes of the public, will be held on Thursday, Jan. 28 (with a snow date of Feb. 4) at the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Residence on Government Island, at 7 p.m.

Mr. Jack Buckley, a teacher at Cohasset High School and the CSCR's president, will moderate the panel, which includes Harbormaster Lorren Gibbons, lobsterman Paul Figuierido, and David Marks, Frank Carrey and Chuck Petersen, all influential players in the day-to-day administration of the harbor. Mr. Buckley will pose various questions to these panelists, and their answers will provide valuable context to both CSCR and the public as to the current state of Cohasset Harbor.

These questions vary greatly in topic and focus, but all are designed to produce a lively discussion, in which the panelists will engage each other and the attendees. Some of the topics and a sample of questions follow:

Freshwater and Salinity:

- What have you noticed about levels of freshwater in the harbor?
- Have you seen an increase or decrease in marine life over the past several years?
- Many have argued that a fresh water outfall should have been built by the Sutton Rocks, to empty freshwater well outside of the inner harbor. What is your take on this?

Changes to the Harbor Over Time:

- To paraphrase Reagan, "Are we better off now than we were 10 years ago?" Why or why not and what needs to be done?
- In the past few years, we understand there to be an issue with the deterioration of underwater equipment, such as mooring chains. What environmental changes have you noticed that could be contributing to this problem?

Community Engagement and Solutions:

- Who are the allies of Cohasset Harbor and how can we mobilize them?
- In the past, have there been successful efforts to clean up the harbor? If so, how can these efforts be duplicated for the twenty-first century?

Drawing upon years of experience of working around the harbor, these panelists will certainly provide much-needed context to the very current problems that our harbor confronts.

Also important to the panel discussion, though, is the contribution of the attendees. Towards the end of the discussion, residents in attendance will be invited to pose their own questions to the panel. Attendees will write their environmentally focused questions on index cards. Mr. Buckley will then pose as many of these questions as possible to the panelists, thus engaging the public in the discussion.

Because of the valuable contributions they can make to the discussion, residents of Cohasset are encouraged to attend the discussion, especially if they have a particular issue they would like addressed. Open to the public, the State of the Harbor 2010 panel night will be held on Thursday, Jan. 28 at the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Residence on Government Island. The event starts at 7 p.m. and refreshments will be served. Watch for details on CSCR's website: www.ccscr.org. All concerned residents of Cohasset are cordially invited and their presence will be greatly appreciated.

College prep/honors classes should not be combined

COMMENTARY

ANDY AND BETH CORRY

We have three daughters in the Cohasset school system and are very concerned about the trend at the high school where college prep and honors classes are combined. Currently, except for isolated cases college prep and honors courses are taught in separate classrooms. Honors class is defined as: challenges students with more complex learning goals and expectations for intellectual curiosity, while fostering greater independence for learning. College Prep class is defined as: challenges and prepares students for rigorous college level work with greater direction, structure, and guidance. To differentiate the higher degree of academic difficulty, the grade value used to calculate GPA is different, with an "A" in college prep worth 4.0 versus one in honors being worth 4.33.

We talked with the school administration and do appreciate the time they took to answer our questions. In short, the broad goal of the school administration is to provide all students with adequate rigor and relevance in their courses. The administration has based its assessment for changing the current college prep/honors class structure on the core standards articulated in the 21st Century Framework. The goal of the framework is to ensure that every student is challenged and prepared for the 21st century (http://www.21stcenturyskills.org). The core standards articulated in the 21st Century Framework provide a roadmap to ensure that classrooms are adequately preparing students. Although having classes that challenge every student is a valid goal we question why the 21st Century Framework cannot be successfully applied in our existing college prep/honors structure.

Deleveling the current structure presents many practical issues, including the increased demands of differentiated instruction on teachers. High school teachers have been told to prepare to teach both college prep and honors students in the same class. The wording of this was probably different and more opaque but this does look like the bottom line. We realize the goal per se is not to combine classes but one has to be very careful about practical outcomes when one starts with a very general top down view.

Our view is simply that children (especially at the high school level) learn at different paces and have different levels of motivation. Hence, it is logical that a college prep course and an honors course be taught separately. There are no other high schools in the area that combine college prep and honors courses. We have spoken with a few teachers and our impression is the vast majority of teachers is strongly against the idea and feels this would hurt the quality of both the college prep and honors classrooms. It would also appear that a more collaborative management style from the school administration with the teachers would benefit everyone.

Our perception is that most parents are not aware of this situation. If anyone is concerned about this development please contact the school administration or school committee to share your concern.

Andy and Beth Corry live at 72 Lamberts Lane.

HEALTH NOTES

Maintaining your medical records

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Most feel we have more to say, but not enough time to tell our story.

Sources: At the risk of boring you out of your skull, today, we're going to talk about health data. Collected and used by medical personnel and the rest of us to stay healthy, some gather medical data about pollutants in our environment but for most, doctors, practitioners and the rest of us, the records help maintain personal health. Actually, medical records are an essential tool in maintaining a person's physical health.

Hypochondria: What ails you? Nothing? How sad. Perhaps there's something – even a sore muscle? There's always the Web – a useful source for information about perceived conditions one may feel he has, as are the many useful topical articles in periodicals. But be aware of the impulse to read about a condition and immediately consider that it applies to you. Hypochondria is as dangerous an ailment as many of the illnesses that can be treated with medications. Self diagnosis is sometimes fun, but remedies, health articles or advertisements, now legal, should not be used without at least consulting a pharmacist, doctor or a nurse practitioner like Mary or Judy at Cohasset Town Hall.

Medical data: Frequently, in a doctor's office, one feels the questions asked about medical history leave out much useful information. Most feel we have more to say, but not enough time to tell our story. Is your history on file in many doctor offices and other places? Most likely. Is it all current and accurate? Have any of those histories been given to you? Probably not. Physicians notes are often quite personal and it is not necessarily useful for even the patient himself to have access to their entire content. Generally, medical histories have been taken verbally during a physician-patient interview. Some doctors are now starting to use computer software to collect histories. Studies suggest, physicians using electronic health records preferentially structure interviews around data-gathering demands rather than patients' own narrated accounts.

Size of the file. The amount of health information kept in your health records depends on overall health, parent's history, forebears for a couple of generations; conditioning, physical strength, recent illnesses, etc. Generally, doctors ask patients to answer a list of questions, the results of which go to make up a file called the medical history.

Microsoft's' Health Vault: A free online service that enables people to gather, store and manage and share their families' health information. It allows you to store all of your health information in one place. It is only as good as the information entered but all in one place. Difficult to access and probably needlessly thorough for most normal individuals, but if you keep records on an entire family, for instance, it's a useful tool and considerable assistance in the doctor's consulting room.

Thirty years ago practitioners generally considered that only about six medications were in use to treat common illnesses. Some were habit forming, such as codeine (an early version of Oxycontin) and others had severe side effects. Now however, we have literally hundreds of nostrums and cures. An almost impossible task for the layman is to identify the meaning of a symptom and best cure for more than an upset stomach. If you need some help trying to find out what it is you have, stop by the Board of Health nurses station at Town Hall. Talk to the nurse on duty – they have broad experience and can be enormously helpful.

Or if you're worried about an unhealthy condition in town, report it to the BoH; chances are that we know something about it and can give you some information.

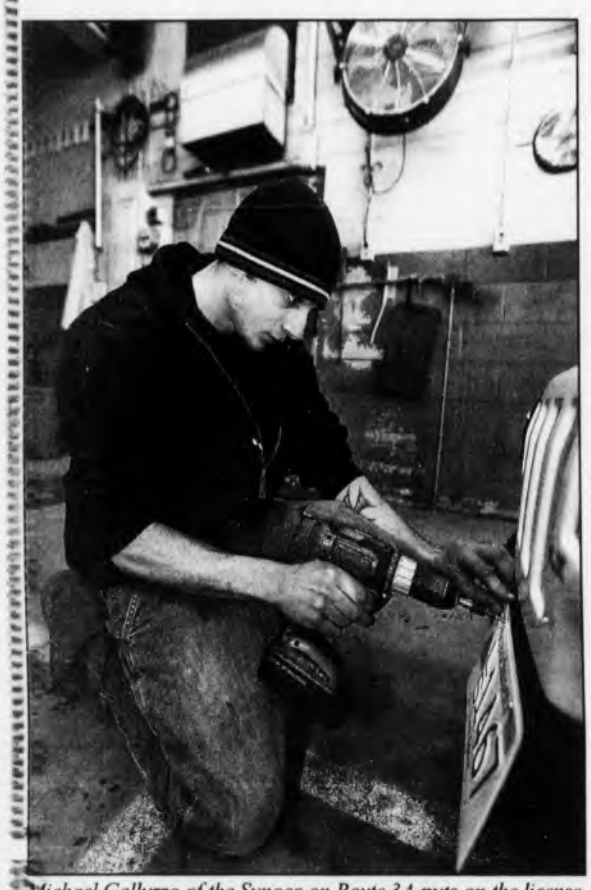
Health Notes begins a new decade

This week's Health Notes is probably the dullest, most tedious of the more than 400 written since the beginning of the column in the Mariner in April 1998. However, it gave necessary information to complete the summary data Health Notes strives to provide. The first Health Notes was to commemorate the bicentennial of the U.S. Public Health Service in 1878. For more than a decade, Health Notes has, via the Mariner, brought to citizens of Cohasset news ideas and informative facts related in some way to their personal health here in town.

The increased reach of communications technology, together with its accompanying information explosion, are bound to change the character of the reporting structure of publications like the Mariner. Health Notes intends to meet this challenge by assembling in one place all the information conveyed in HN over 11 years. Unfortunately, the author was a bit haphazard in strictly providing attribution for a variety of reasons, including laziness and uncertainty of the accuracy. However, what's there will also be available for review. It is expected that assembly, compilation, organization and review of a single document of about 250 pages will go on through the first half of 2010. When complete, we expect the book to be available at the Board of Health for those in town wishing a copy.

Meanwhile Health Notes will continue in the Mariner bringing you news, speculation and other matters that may be related to the health of the citizens of Cohasset.



For more information, call Tara Tradd at 383-4116.

No need for speed

Couple's electric vehicle is street legal

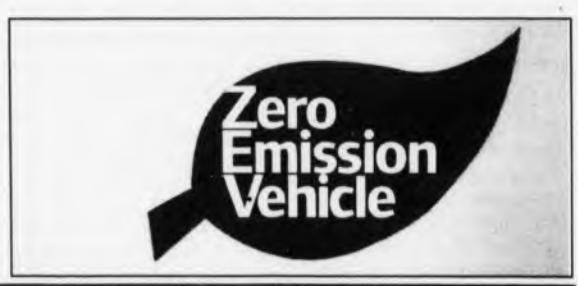
There's a new way to get around in Massachusetts. Two weeks ago Sgt. David Horte of the Hingham Police helped Michael Connelly and Judeth Van Hamm of Hull register their new street legal electric Low Speed Vehicle, a Club Car Villager 2+2, by providing an escort along Route 3A to the Hingham Harbor Sunoco inspection station.

Judeth is president of Sustainable South Shore and a consultant to Cohasset's Alternative Energy Committee.

Thanks to a bill filed by Senator Bob Hedlund that went into effect last August, Low Speed Vehicles capable of going between 20 and 25 miles per hour are now permitted on roads with speed limits up to 30 mph. They can cross higher speed roads at lights and four-way stops. In addition, Medium Speed Vehicles able to drive 45 mph may now travel on all roads except expressways and roads where they are specifically prohibited. See Chapter 523 of the Acts of 2008.

Michael Connelly has been following the international return to electric vehicles over the last 10 years. He was delighted to see Club Car, a division of Ingersoll Rand, announce on Nov. 4, that it would make a street legal version of its popular electric golf cart. The Villager 2+2 LSV differs from a golf cart in horsepower and safety standards. At the same time, it incorporates Club Car's high quality developed for country club fleets.

The couple was able to take advantage of a large federal tax credit by registering their LSV on Dec. 31. Their Villager 2+2 was manufactured in Augusta, Georgia, in December and delivered to their home by Country Club Enterprises of Wareham on December 30. A new 10 percent federal tax credit is available through December 2011.



Some specifics: The LX version of the Villager 2+2 costs just over $10,000. It has a 20 to 30 mile range, depending on temperature, hilliness, and weight carried. It seats up to four people, two looking forward and two facing rear. Passengers must be at least 8 years old (no child carriers allowed). All the wheels have shock absorbers. The underside has a 4-1/2 inch clearance. It comes with six 8-volt lead acid batteries, an on-board charger, and a cord for plugging in. The batteries have a 4-year warranty. Club Car will offer a number of accessories, including door-and-window enclosures and SolarDrive photovoltaic panel roofs, which will not only provide electricity but also lengthen the life of the batteries. You can find more information at www.clubcar.com, www.solardrive.com and www.ccegolfcars.com

Michael Connelly and Judeth Van Hamm have been living their commitment to earth-friendly, fun transportation since buying electric-assist bicycles from Ford in 2001 as their main means of transportation. In the process they have also saved money.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives and senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of January 11-15.

EDUCATION SYSTEM CHANGES (S 2247)

House 98-47, Senate 23-12, approved and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick a lengthy and complicated bill making changes to the state's education system including implementing mechanisms designed to improve underperforming schools. The House and Senate had approved different versions of the bill and a conference committee drafted this compromise plan.

The measure creates Innovation Schools that are district schools with increased autonomy and flexibility to operate. It raises the state's spending cap for charter schools from nine percent to 18 percent of new school spending in the lowest ten percent of performing districts and eliminates the cap that limits the state's total charter school population to four percent.

Other provisions require all public high schools to include a mandatory course on the correct use, display and etiquette relating to the American flag and allow the education department to designate up to 72 schools as "underperforming." These schools would be targeted for aggressive intervention including making it easier to dismiss and replace poor teachers and administrators and to reopen and amend collective bargaining agreements. According to a summary of the bill, "In the worst performing schools, the commissioner may amend collective bargaining agreements without negotiation, as necessary."

Supporters said that the bill would address a persistent and growing gap between achievement levels at schools across the state and help improve many underperforming urban schools. They noted that this legislation must be signed into law quickly in order for the state to be eligible for its portion of up to $250 million in federal education grants.

Some opponents said that this complicated bill has only been in print for a few hours and is irresponsibly being rushed through the Legislature. Others said that it is just another temporary Band-Aid solution to an ever growing list of problems with the state's school system. Some took issue with specific sections of the bill including a provision that one opponent said would weaken or even eliminate the collective bargaining rights of some teachers.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

N

MORE POWER FOR CITIES AND TOWNS TO COLLECT FINES (H 3588)

House 143-1, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would increase the power of cities and towns to collect fines for violations of local sanitary, housing and snow and ice removal laws. The measure, effective only in municipalities that adopt it, would allow communities to add unpaid fines to the offender's property tax bill. If the fine is still not paid, the community would be allowed place a lien on the property. The measure is designed with the main goal of collecting fines for improper trash disposal by absentee landlords. Another provision exempts anyone who in good faith removes snow or ice from sidewalks abutting their property, from liability for any personal injuries unless the alleged misconduct was gross negligence.

Supporters said that millions of dollars in fines go unpaid under the current system that forces cities and towns to go to Housing Court to collect unpaid fines. They argued that allowing unpaid fines to be added to property tax bills would increase collections and help struggling cities and towns. They also noted that it should not be so easy to sue property owners when they make a good faith attempt to shovel snow and ice.

The lone opponent did not offer any arguments against the bill.

The House and Senate approved a similar bill at the end of the 2008 session but Gov. Patrick pocket vetoed it. A pocket veto can occur when the Legislature approves a bill at the end of a legislative year. If the governor does not act on the measure within ten days, it is considered to be vetoed. Since the legislative year is over, the Legislature does not have the opportunity to override the veto.

Last year the governor's office explained its opposition to the bill. A statement said, "We were concerned that the legislation would for the first time create different tort standards depending on the community an event occurred in which could cause great confusion in the legal process. It also would have made it much more difficult for those legitimately harmed through negligence of a property owner to obtain redress."

SUSPEND RULES TO ALLOW IMMEDIATE CONSIDERATION OF EDUCATION BILL

Senate 29-6, suspended rules to allow the Senate to immediately consider the conference committee version of the education bill. The rule that was suspended requires that a copy of a conference committee report be in print by 8 p.m. the night before the day of the vote in order to be considered that day. The education bill missed that deadline by six hours when it was finally printed around 2 a.m.

Supporters of rule suspension said that the state is in danger of losing $250 million in federal education grants if the bill is not approved today.

Opponents said that members have not had time to read the complicated bill and should not be voting on something about which they do not know the details. The argued that the Senate could work on the bill the next day and still meet the deadline for federal grants.

(A "Yes" vote is for suspending rules to allow immediate consideration of the education bill. A "No" vote is against rule suspension).

Sailing team a natural for Cohasset

COMMENTARY

MORGAN MCCARTHY

A copy of this letter to the School Committee was provided to the Cohasset Mariner.

My name is Morgan McCarthy. I am a sophomore at Cohasset High School. Currently I play two sports, am on the student government, and participate in after school clubs; as shown I am dedicated to our school and am very active in making it more appealing and better as a whole. As an athlete and scholar, I found it very troublesome to hear that the proposed sailing team was being put down.

There are only a limited number of schools that even live by the water, and for Cohasset, who has such a strong youth program through our summer sailing classes not to be able to offer sailing as sport in High School is troubling to me. Our students are taught from age 11 and younger to sail both competitively and for leisure. Why would a town with such talent teach these young kids to sail from such young ages and then when they reach High School there are no options for these kids to pursue their passions at the school?

After talking to the athletic director, Ron Ford, he expressed a concern that creating a sailing team would take players away from other sports. However this should not be a concern, because I have talked to students who currently do not play a spring sport and said that they would want to join the team. I have also talked to a lot of students who do play a spring sport who would also want to be part of the team. The answer I gave to those who expressed concern about conflicting times with their current spring sport was, that the team's practice schedule would be flexible and since regattas (when you race against other teams) are on the weekends, the games wouldn't conflict. If they did, then another sailor could easily fill in. Also, if the majority of students would rather sail, then play the other spring sports offered, why should the sailing team be punished because it is more popular.

This team will cost the school district nothing, as said in the plan, and said in our Cohasset Middle-High School Mission Statement.

"As we enter the 21st century, the Mission of the Cohasset Middle-High School is to provide educational experiences that prepare students physically, emotionally, and academically. Our mission is to help students develop an ability to think critically and creatively while investigating the past, examining the present, and preparing for the challenging future. Students are given the opportunity to form personal goals, to practice respect and responsibility, and to view learning as a lifelong process. Our small size enables students, faculty, parents, and community members to become partners in creating a nurturing environment in which students can achieve a strong sense of self and can involve themselves in diverse experiences."

By turning down a sailing team the school is depriving its students with experiences gained by being on a team, as well as things laid out in our mission statement. Being on a team helps the student to "think critically and creatively." A team creates a sense of self; it builds your self-confidence when one knows they have a team behind them, backing you up. Especially, in the "21st century" it is important to develop adequate social skills so that one can network and communicate in the workplace. Being in a boat with someone else, really tests your relationship with your peers, for no matter where you are from or what your beliefs are, you must get along with you sailing partner or else you will not succeed. Having a sailing team would definitely make our "learning experiences more diverse," and would create a nurturing environment for the students, rather then a hostile environment, where students think that the school doesn't care for anybody who doesn't play lacrosse, track, baseball, softball, or tennis.

Sailors deserve to have the sport

COMMENTARY

DANIELLE SOOKIASIAN

A copy of this letter to the School Committee was provided to Cohasset Mariner.

My name is Danielle Sookiasian and I am writing to the School Committee on behalf of the sailing team that is trying to be established for the students of the Cohasset High School. I have heard that some of the administrators have not approved the team because of the issue of funding it, and that it may take some students away from other spring sports at the school. However, what about those who do not participate in any others sports? Would it be fair to not give them the chance because other teams might suffer? I myself play a spring sport, tennis, but when I first heard of the possibility of this team back in November, I suddenly found myself questioning which one I would choose if it came down to it. Yet, now with its flexibility, allowing racers to participate in other spring sports as well as sail, I may have the opportunity to do both.

Sailing has always been a passion of mine, ever since the first summer I started taking lessons when I was 10 years old. It is a very rare opportunity to have unless you live by the water, and I believe chances like that should be taken advantage of. The sport of sailing, even though it may just seem like a leisurely activity, is very intense in the way that one needs to be both mentally and physically prepared to compete. Also, the lifetime lessons learned from this sport are very valuable. Sailing teaches people discipline, hard work, perseverance, and how to cooperate with others. The amount of time required to learn all of the skills and tactics is strenuous, yet rewarding in that sense of accomplishment one feels after finishing the race or doing something you've never done before. In addition, the community of sailing is so small because to succeed one needs to have a certain ability and dedication in order to reach the level of competitors from other clubs and town.

Over the years though, one of the most important things I have learned is how to work with others. It is hard at first to be in a boat with only one other person, whether you are familiar with them or not, because the only way the boat moves is with the efforts of both of the sailors. Also, all of the practice is not just to learn the skills, but to learn how to sail with your partner. Success in a race results from the combined efforts of the boat, and the ability for the two people to work as one in order to reach the finish line. Yet, the relationship with your partner is not all that you need to work on, one also needs to learn how to collaborate with all of the members of his or her team and coach; lifting a 200-300 pound boat doesn't happen with just two people. The friendships I have made from sailing are some that I never would have expected, and am extremely thankful for the ones I have with my fellow sailors.

In addition, this sport teaches one the ability to be able to work with anyone, but also to have the ability to improve oneself at the same time. I have received a sense of independence from sailing, and the feeling that I can accomplish anything I desire. Knowing that you are moving through water using the force of the wind, and doing it all on your own by skills that you have learned is an incredible feeling. In addition, being able to overcome the most intense circumstances out on the open water when you feel like all you want to do is go back to shore is very rewarding. When you stick it out and don't give up, one understands the amount of perseverance this sport requires, through all of the conditions that can be thrown at you.

My third year on the Cohasset Sailing Club race team I was the only girl in the program. Most people were surprised that I stuck with it regardless of the situation, but there was no way I was going to stop doing something that I truly loved. I had the same feeling when I heard that the administrators of our school turned down the proposal for this team. Although sailing may not be regarded as important of a sport because it is not prevalent everywhere, I believe that sailing is as much of a sport as any other our school has teams for. The school should allow for students who have a passion for sailing to be able to participate on a school team. This is an extraordinary opportunity for those who are as passionate about sailing as I am, and would greatly appreciate the privilege to sail for the school.

One thing I ask to the people reading this letter is why there are high school sports? What are their purposes? Some play sports to stay active, meet new people, and just because they love the sport itself. Others plan to go further than high school with the sport, participating in college and maybe even professionally. I myself plan on sailing in college, and if this sailing team proposal is accepted it would help prepare sailors for collegiate level racing. Just as people prepare for college soccer, basketball or football through high school, this would allow sailors to have that same chance.

Federal grant needs full support

COMMENTARY

the Commonwealth. Distribution of the grant is competitive to states with projects that would be novel, innovative methods for 21st century learning. The greater the number of districts signing on to the grant the better chance the Commonwealth will win the grant. Cohasset schools have a record of innovative, creative and novel teaching that has proven to meet or exceed national standards. I have the greatest confidence that our teachers and district can and should be included in the chance to use the Race to the Top grant to demonstrate their novel and creative ideas. They are already national leaders in employing educational concepts of the 21st century.

If a state is awarded this grant between 80 to 90 percent of the $250 million will go to the school districts which chose to participate in the Race to the Top grant program. The remainder will go to the states' departments of education. The hurdle for the teachers union appears to be the potential performance evaluation that will be a means of judging the effectiveness of the money spent. I have complete confidence in the ability of the Commonwealth's teachers to use the grant money to create and implement a comprehensive 21st century educational program. I can say this with certainty because they are already doing it. They cannot fail. They should be allowed the challenge. I would find it embarrassing if a state with a poor educational history should receive a Race to the Top grant which is subsequently held up as a method the federal government promotes to set goals for our schools. Massachusetts and Cohasset should be in that role, not Arkansas. Massachusetts has superb public schools, an educated population, and local motivated leaders who have maintained these schools and their values.

The teachers and students of Massachusetts and Cohasset deserve the opportunity to provide the example of what excellence in education means. As a town and as a commonwealth we must secure funding for our schools by as many means as possible. This grant is a competitive grant, but Massachusetts is the competition to beat. I vote yes on submitting the Race to the Top grant for $250 million, and have signed on. I encourage our teachers, and particularly The President of the Cohasset Teachers' Association, to sign on to this grant for the benefit of all. We have much to be proud of and much we can share with the teachers and students of our town and our nation.

Restaurants remember Haiti

Raise funds for food, water, supplies

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

The death toll following last Tuesday's earthquake in Haiti has already been estimated at 200,000 lives.

Many more have been injured, or are now homeless as a result of the destruction.

Many have lost touch with family members, or friends.

Some have been lost for good.

Though the destruction and suffering in Haiti has reached unfathomable levels, all is not lost.

Seemingly from the moment the quake's last tremors were felt, relief workers and support in the form of food, water and prayer have been flowing into the Caribbean country.

One of the challenges relief workers are facing, though, is getting the food, supplies and care to the people and places in Haiti that need it the most.

Around the world, many have gotten involved in the cause for Haiti, donating money and supplies, or preparing to travel there to do some work on the ground.

Massachusetts residents are part of this effort.

Among many efforts underway, or soon to be launched here on the South Shore, is a fundraiser that will be held this weekend at two local restaurants.

On Sunday, Jan. 24, The Tinker's Son in Norwell and Bia Bistro in Cohasset will donate 10 percent of the proceeds they receive on the day for relief efforts in Haiti.

"We wanted to do something that was best going to benefit the relief effort," said Erica White, a manager at The Tinker's Son. "It seemed like the most urgent need was to get money to the area."

White said the staff had considered conducting a clothing drive at first, but eventually decided to raise money instead, so there would be no overhead costs lost in the process.

"It's very devastating and my heart goes out to all those families," said Cara Williams, a manager at Bia Bistro. Williams said the goal is to raise money to be able to buy water and other goods for the people of Haiti.

"We hope to get a good crowd in here on Sunday," she added.

The Tinker's Son will be open on Sunday from 10 a.m. until 1 a.m. (early Monday morning), serving breakfast, brunch and dinner. Brunch is on until 2 p.m., and dinner is served until 10 p.m.

A local resident points out the area in Haiti that was most effected by last week's earthquake.

On Sunday, Jan. 24, The Tinker's Son in Norwell and Bia Bistro in Cohasset will donate 10 percent of the proceeds they receive on the day for relief efforts in Haiti.

Per usual, the Tinker's Son will host an open music session from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. on Sunday, where any musician interested can join in. The session usually involves 5-10 people, White said, and they play a host of Irish instruments including the flute, guitar, or the Bodhran drum.

In Cohasset, Bia Bistro will be open on Sunday from 4-9 p.m.

The restaurants, both of which are owned by Brian Houlihan, plan to donate the funds they raise to Mir Pace, a philanthropic organization founded by Eileen Weisslinger of Hull.

Annette Quinn, an employee at The Tinker's Son, also serves on the board of Mir Pace, and through her the restaurants became aware of Weisslinger and her organization.

The mission of Mir Pace

In an interview on Tuesday, Weisslinger spoke of the mission of Mir Pace (which means 'world peace' in Russian/Italian), and what the organization's efforts will be in Haiti.

The goal of the organization, which she founded in 2001, is dual in nature.

The first is to help out those nations that have been affected by a natural disaster, after the emergency responders and initial care workers such as The Red Cross depart.

"When you have an infrastructure that's destroyed, people don't have any way of rebuilding their lives without assistance," said Weisslinger. Generally, her team will go to an affected area several months or a year after a disaster has occurred, to provide the kind of assistance that's needed at that time.

The second goal of the organization, Weisslinger said, is to get young people involved in the work as a means of showing them a world outside of what they've known in the United States.

"We want to expose them to the way the majority of the world lives," she said. "Most of the world lives in abject poverty."

In the past few years, Weisslinger said she's brought students in grades 8 through 12 from Norwell, Cohasset, Hingham, Sharon, Barnstable and even Montpelier, Vt., on the trips. The groups have traveled to Tanzania, Africa and Guatemala, where they worked with the Mayan people.

The kids come back changed, she said, adding that many of the young people who've taken part on the trips have remained involved in humanitarian efforts.

"We've been able to ignite a real spirit of volunteerism," she said.

This week, Weisslinger said she's planning to travel to Haiti in the coming weeks.

"I can't get there fast enough," she said. "I am going down there as soon as they clear the way and allow airliners to get down there." If need be, she said she may fly to the Dominican Republic, and continue the journey by land, from there (Haiti and The Dominican Republic together comprise the island of Hispaniola).

"Because of the enormity of the destruction, we're really stepping outside of our mandate," she said. "We've decided to go now."

A former elementary school teacher who's currently working on her master's degree in education, Weisslinger said many of the students she taught in Mattapan are Haitian.

In country, she will attempt to contact or locate the people she knows there, or the family members of her students.

"Our biggest thing has been trying to locate people who we do know there," she said. "Everyone I know down there is safe."

"It's really until we get there when we'll understand what the greatest needs are," she said, "whether it's medical care, or food or temporary housing."

Weisslinger said she may also organize a student trip to Haiti in the summer, an effort which may be good for her students who do have immediate family members in Haiti, but may feel helpless at the moment with no way to help them.

For more information about Mir Pace, call Weisslinger at 781-925-0090, send an email to info@mirpace.org or check out the website: www.mirpace.org.

Elise Warhaftig of Hingham, who is part of the Conservatory's Woman Song group. Elise has found her inner singing voice.

With Hingham's Cabaret 2010 right around the corner, we thought it was a good time to offer a free preview class of our new Come to the Cabaret! class for adults. We imagine that in the hearts of many Hingham Cabaret audience members are vocalists just itching to get up on stage and belt out a tune. To make this dream a reality, they just need a little instruction and lot of encouragement, and vocal instructor Randy McGee is ready to comply!

McGee's Come to the Cabaret! is designed to help singers improve their vocal technique, expand their repertoire and polish their performance skills in a supportive environment. Known for inspiring his students to achieve beyond their wildest dreams, McGee says "For a diverse Cabaret-type show, the challenge is often finding a good song for all the life experiences found in the singer. The world is big enough for all of us in all our many forms and a casual-style variety show is a great place for us to find a place to belong."

In a culture that often treats music as a "spectator sport" we can lose sight of the fact that we are all hard-wired for music. All cultures that have been observed incorporate music. The language of music spans all cultures and is a unifying element that connects us all. Perhaps it is the development of recording techniques that has opened our eyes to the possibilities of what the masters can achieve while at the same time, give us something to compare ourselves to. We are hesitant to add our voices to the choir of professionals even though our inner voices are begging us to sing out! Our hope is that by providing opportunities for adults to come together and make music in a nurturing environment they will gain the confidence to reach their potential as singers and experience the full joy that making music can bring.

The language of music spans all cultures and is a unifying element that connects us all.

The free Come to the Cabaret! class is Saturday, Jan. 23, from 6 to 7:30 p.m., at our Hingham campus at One Conservatory Drive. The public is invited to try it out to decide if they would like to take the full eight-week course that runs on Mondays, 7 to 8 p.m., starting Feb. 1. If that does not fit your schedule, we are also offering a companion class at our Duxbury campus, B.Y.O.V! A singing class for the "over 21" crowd on Tuesdays, from 7 to 8 p.m., starting March 22. Singers interested in taking the free class may call me at 781-749-7565, ext. 15, or e-mail me at s.dambrosio@sscmusic.org to reserve their spot.

Citizens step up to plate on Stormwater Committee

The charge of the committee, in short, is to serve as an advisory committee devoted to stormwater issues from public education to working with affected residents...

At long last, the Stormwater Advisory Committee stands ready to begin tackling the myriad stormwater related issues plaguing our seaside town. At their last meeting, after searching for volunteers for close to a year, Selectmen appointed three willing citizens to the Stormwater Advisory Committee.

Noel Collins of North Main and Jim Fitzgerald and Ross Rosano of Rocky Lane were appointed to the committee.

Collins works in real estate development and brings knowledge of land use and its possible impact on surrounding properties to the table, he said. Having served on the Harbor Committee previously he is aware of how much stormwater runoff influences the harbor's health.

Fitzgerald is a professional engineer and a practicing environmental consultant for over 25 years. He has lived in Cohasset for 17 years.

Rosano has been in the excavation and septic business in Cohasset and its surrounding communities since 1981. His local experience, he said, has afforded him the opportunity to know what the soils are like in town and have familiarity with local engineers.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer told the new members of the committee about the amount of work that went into development of the Stormwater Advisory Committee's charge.

The charge of the committee, in short, is to serve as an advisory committee devoted to stormwater issues from public education to working with affected residents to recommending capital expenditures for stormwater remediation to reviewing reports for the EPA.

"This is pretty tight...I'd caution you against modifying this thing," Dormitzer said.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said she saw the role of the stormwater advisory committee as a "clearinghouse" for stormwater issues.

"You have the initiative, you have the bones, now you have to flesh it out and take it down the road," Quigley said.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson thanked the trio for stepping forward.

"This town would grind to a halt if not for volunteers like you," said Carlson.

Giving back to soldiers

Six-year-old collects donations in lieu of presents

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A Cohasset six-year-old spent his birthday bowling with his friends, eating cupcakes — and giving back to soldiers overseas.

Samuel Rogers, an Osgood School kindergartener, asked his friends to bring basic items for servicemen and women in Iraq and Afghanistan in lieu of presents.

"If we can make their daily grind a smidge easier then that's better than any Star Wars Lego," Sam's mother Maurajane Rogers said. "It's a lesson in the gift of friendship, a lesson in humility and a lesson in awareness."

The Rogers family has a strong connection and respect for the military and those who serve. One of Sam's grandfather served in the Marines, is a Korean War veteran and one of the Frozen Chosin. His great-grandfather served in the Army and a World War II veteran who was involved in the second day at Normandy.

"We have much, much respect for the soldiers who sacrifice their lives for us to have a good one," Rogers said.

Rogers proposed the idea of asking his friends to bring donations for troops instead of presents, and Sam quickly agreed, she said. Five friends participated in celebrating Sam's birthday and helping the troops: Austin Ryan, Peter Vitello, Caroline Santacroce, Christian Lewis, and Joey Kupperstein.

Rogers connected with the George H. Mealy American Legion Post, which regularly sends packages to local soldiers serving far away from home. Samuel and his mother brought the three large boxes to the American Legion on Sunday afternoon.

The Legion gratefully accepted the donations for the troops. Each year the Legion collects items to send care packages to local soldiers overseas. The women's auxiliary gathers names of local soldiers, or soldiers with Cohasset connections and sends more than 60 packages each year.

Sons Of The American Legion Commander Tom Wigmore met Sam and his mother at the Legion on Sunday afternoon to accept the donations.

The packages were chock full of items many of us use everyday: hand sanitizer, q-tips, toothbrushes, toothpastes, toiletries, magazines, dry food items, gum, coffee, games and other basic items.

"I think it's unbelievable a child at six-years-old has taken the time to think of troops overseas," Wigmore said.

In addition to the basic items, Rogers said each of the children wrote a heartfelt note and drawing to a current Marine recruit at Parris Island to boost his spirits as he goes through training.

Rogers said the experience was both humbling and uplifting — and a way for her son to do something for someone else and still get something back.

"He had a great time with his friends," Rogers said. "Anything we can do to help people secure our freedom is outstanding."

February Veterans' Agent visiting hours

The Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services will be at the Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset, Room 2B, as follows: Monday, Feb. 1, 6 to 7:45 p.m.; Wednesday, Feb. 3, 10 a.m. to noon; and Saturday, Feb. 6, 10 a.m. to noon.

People can drop in or call ahead. Visiting hours are not only for veterans, but also for spouses/surviving spouses and those concerned with aging parents – both veterans/spouses, as well as for general advice.

If the aforementioned scheduled does not meet one's needs, the veterans agent will welcome people to meet at a convenient location and time, such as the library, one's home or the agent's home. For more information, call Veterans Agent Joe McElroy at 781-383-0505 or email cohjoe@aol.com.

BEFORE

I truly believe that joining Get in Shape for Women is the single best thing I have done for myself in decades. I haven't just lost weight but gained more of a sense of ME.

My journey these past five months has led to losing over 30 lbs., countless inches in all areas of my body, 11% body fat and three pants sizes, and I am not done yet. I love the extra energy I have after working out and am still amazed how the tension leaves my body as each workout progresses.

Following the plan has made this a successful journey and is changing my life for the better.

Girls roll by Hanover, East Bridgewater

WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset girls basketball team passed what may have been their biggest test of the year with flying colors on Monday night with a convincing 60-36 win over Hanover, followed by a 64-25 win over East Bridgewater on Tuesday.

Girls' Basketball

In the East Bridgewater game, Tori Lehr scored 16 points and added 8 boards, while Samantha Crough had 11 points and 9 rebounds.

Meredith Kelly had 14 points and 7 rebounds for the Skippers.

The win improved the Skippers to 12-0, 10-0 in the South Shore League.

Monday night's game was the one everyone was watching.

Hanover, a Div. 3 team, came into Cohasset sporting a 9-0 record and first place in the Patriot League Fisher Division.

The Skippers were ready for the challenge, jumping to leads of 5-0 and 17-6 with 6:58 left in the second quarter.

"The coaches had scouted them," said Lehr after the Hanover game. "We knew they were really good. We knew we had to work hard and never give up. We've been flat early in games recently. Tonight we knew we had to come out quick."

For Cohasset, the game, which will have a rematch on Sunday

Mahoney shines as Skippers complete sweep

The Skippers traveled to East Bridgewater Tuesday for a South Shore League contest.

The boys in blue were victorious, completing their second sweep of EB in as many years with a 68-48 victory.

Boys' Basketball

The first quarter was almost a stalemate with the Vikings leading 23- 22.

But it was the second quarter and the efforts of 6'2" sophomore Robbie Mahoney that quieted the EB crowd. Mahoney led the way for the Skippers scoring 20 points and hauling in 10 rebounds. Cohasset led at the half 40-33 and never looked back.

Seven Skippers were in the scoring column in the first half.

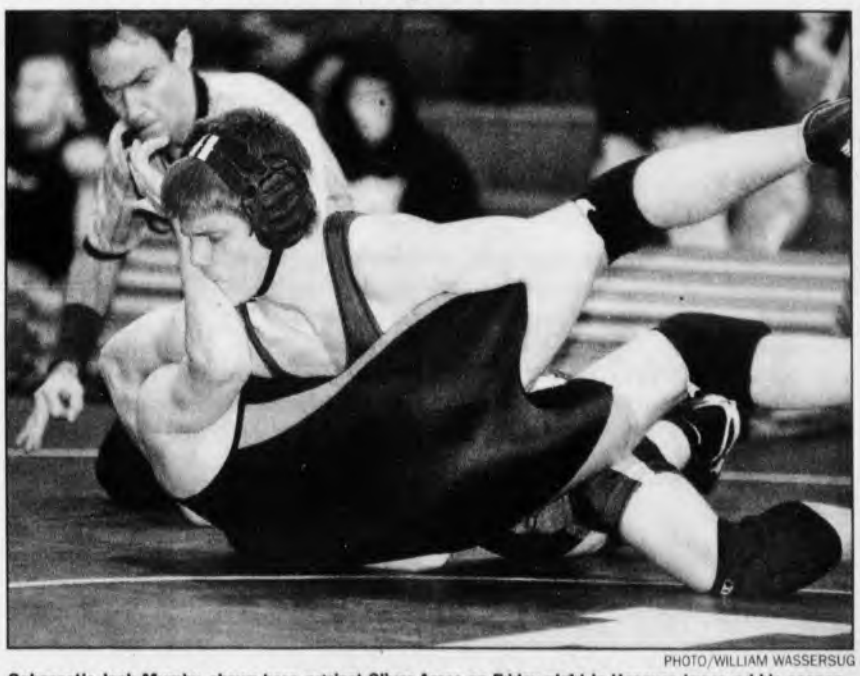
Skippers take Mayshore League showdown

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Wednesday was a good night for the Cohasset wrestling team.

The Skippers hosted a strong Southeastern Regional team that came in with a 10-4 record and a 3-1 mark in the Mayshore League and came out with a 46-23 victory, sparked by big wins in the middle and upper weight classes and a few close calls.



Wrestling

"This was a great win," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "We figured this would come down to the last match of the meet, but we won every match that could have gone either way."

game, Senior Kevin O'Connell (8 points) and Junior Sam Richardson (11 points) owned the outside game.

Cohasset's ability to play in and out stymied the EB defense. Junior co-captain and point guard Robert Jones directed the offense.

Whether initiating a fast break, driving the lane and dishing off the ball (8 assists, 13 points) or slowing the game and using the clock, Jones kept the game in control. Jones was also perfect at the charity stripe going 5-for-5.

Defensively, the Skippers clamped down whether in the zone or man to man defense, keeping EB to 15 total points in the second half (and only six in the fourth quarter).

The Skippers did a good job in altering shots and causing EB to turn the ball over. Freshman forward Shane Haggerty (8 points) worked hard, coming up with two steals.

Sophomore forward Chris Murphy delivered some solid minutes on the floor for the Skippers with six points and five rebounds. Murphy played big down low coming up with the ball defensively.

The Skippers are in Carver tonight, tip off at 6:30 and host Provincetown on Sunday at 5 p.m.

Olympic hero flips into area

Nastia Liukin visits Head Over Heels

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

It's not every day that an Olympic gold medalist walks into a local gymnastics facility just to say hello. But that's exactly what happened Tuesday at Head Over Heels in Norwell.

The 2008 Olympic All-Around gold medalist Nastia Liukin, who played a key role in helping the U.S. gymnastics team secure the team silver medal in Beijing, visited the Washington St., gym for a question-and-answer session and to sign autographs for more than 100 local gymnasts, who were star struck and had their cameras flashing when Liukin walked in to talk about her Olympic and international success.

"I'm the biggest gymnastics fan there is," Head Over Heels President/Director/Coach Patty Anderson said. "I think I'm more excited than the kids."

Liukin came to Massachusetts to promote the USA Gymnastics 2010 Tyson American Cup, which takes place March 6 at the DCU Center in Worcester. Liukin will be joined March 6 by legendary Olympic heroes Bart Conner, Paul Hamm, Shawn Johnson, Shannon Miller, Carly Patterson, Mary Lou Retton, and Peter Vidmar. Liukin, who designs her own line of leotards, announced Tuesday that an event the day before the American Cup was just named the Nastia Liukin Cup sponsored by Supergirl, the brand that is based on the DC Comics character. The Nastia Liukin Cup is a meet for 36 up-and-coming level 9 and 10 gymnasts. The American Up on March 6 will be televised on Universal Sports.

For the first 10 to 15 minutes of the nearly one hour that Liukin spent at Head Over Heels, she answered questions that ranged from "What is your favorite color?" (pink if you're counting at home) to "What did it feel like when you won the gold medal," to which Liukin replied, "There was so much hard work that paid off. Something that's most important to me is that the team won the silver medal. Even though we didn't win gold, we stuck together as a team."

Liukin, who after winning five medals at the Beijing Olympics, became a household name and earned national praise, appearing on shows such as Jay Leno, Conan O'Brian, The View, Oprah, and even on an episode of her favorite TV show, Gossip Girl. But of all the appearances Liukin has made since her epic victory in Beijing, the ones she enjoys most are the ones that bring her to local gymnastics facilities such as Head Over Heels.

Olympic gold medalist Nastia Liukin smiles while talking with approximately 200 students at Head over Heels in Norwell on Tuesday.

"This is what I've been in my entire life, so it's kind of like my comfort zone," Liukin said prior to visiting with the local gymnasts. "It just feels like home at every gym I go to, and even though I've never been here before, I grew up in a gymnastics gym ever since I was three years old. These are the kids that I can reach out to them and share my story and share what I have a passion for, even though I've never met the kids, you share a common love for something."

The Plano, Texas, native said she enjoys every appearance she makes at gymnastics facilities around the country.

"I love coming out to this, being able to just be around the kids and get to know them," she said. "It's a lot of fun. It's more nerve-wracking talking to a huge group of corporate adults than doing something like this. I think it's great because with gymnastics, a lot of people before Beijing considered it a once in every four years type of sport, but we train every single day, seven hours a day, every single year. It's not just the year of the Olympics. So now that it's getting a little more recognized, it's really great."

Men's South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The Grizzlies and the Thunder had an old fashion shootout in their Master Div. South Coastal Hockey League game at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

Mike Maguire of Hanover scored three goals and assisted on two others for the Thunder. Tom Maguire added two goals and Mike Joy of Hanover had a goal for the Thunder.

Marshfield's Brian Kennedy and Bob Ward scored for the Roadrunners.

Pembroke's Joe McLeod scored three goals, Drew Fitzgerald and Chris Devin had one apiece in the Aeros' 5-4 Masters Div. win over the Vipers.

Peter Racicot, Dan White, Bob Sideropoulos and Steve DiMaio of Pembroke scored the goals for the Vipers.

Maple Leafs goalie Andy Pelly of Hanover had shutouts in the Fall season and recorded his first one of the Winter season as they defeated the Black Hawks, 4-0 in a Classics Div. game. Jeff Gauthier, Jim Smith of Pembroke, Marshfield's Dave Evans and Steve Mudge also of Pembroke scored the Leafs goals.

Joe Derrane scored two goals, Steve Figioli and Ken Wingate of Pembroke added a goal each in the Red Wings' 4-1 Classics Div. win over the Bruins.

Steve Concannon of Scitaute scored for the Whalers and Ray Degaust scored for the Toros as the two teams battled to a 1-1 Legends Div. tie.

Tom Murphy scored two goals and assisted on antoher in the Fighting Saints' 6-2 Legends Div. win over the Sharks. James McNeill also scored two goals, Paul Murphy and Mike Ryan added a goal each for the Saints.

Tim Cruz of Marshfield and Dana Dolabany of Norwell scored the Sharks goals.

Jay Kavanah of Hanover scored two goals, Paul Smyth, Alan Smith of Marshfield, Norwell's Joe Murray and Kevin Coyne also of Marshfield had a goal each in the Stingers 6-3 win over the Crusaders in a Legends Div. game.

Home team wins battle of unbeatens

FROM WINS, PAGE 19

in Hanover, was a small guage of where the team is, and more importantly, gave the team a strong opponent before tournament time rolls around.

Cohasset is already qualified for the Div. 4 South Sectionals.

"They were the only undefeated team we play," Lehr said, adding that as soon as the game was done, Hanover would be an afterthought until at least late Friday when games against East Bridgewater and Carver were done. "This was a good game. Now we're looking at our next game. That's our biggest game. Our next game is always our biggest game. We try not to look ahead."

The individual focus has worked well for the Skippers for a long time, getting them a state championship two years ago and within seconds of a championship game last year when the Skippers lost a buzzer-beater to Millis in the Div. 4 South Sectional final.

Lehr said that game wasn't the end-all, but has added a tiny bit of motivation this season.

More than one person has said this group is one of the hardest working teams they've seen, and considering Cohasset's work ethic, that says a lot.

"None of us felt we should have lost that game," Lehr said. "We knew we'd come back with a vengeance."

Of course, the vengeance has been focused.

"Teamwork is a focus," Lehr said. "We try to make things as even as possible. Some teams have one or two people you have to stop. We have a whole team. It's working out for us."

Cohasset coach John LeVangie liked what he saw against Hanover.

"They're a good team," he said. "They made us work for every basket. Their press was tough. They're physical underneath. It just happened to go our way tonight. I'm happy with the way it turned out."

LeVangie said his team has been winning by playing the way they practice.

"The kids work hard in practice," he said. "They focus for two hours in practice and that makes us able to do a lot. The kids pay attention and work hard. We don't have wasted time. They outwork anybody. I give credit to the girls. They motivate themselves to work."

LeVangie wasn't saying if last year's finish has been a factor, but said it is a possibility, and is pleased with the way they work together.

"We have enough back from last year," he said. "Whatever their motivation is, they're all very unselfish. We don't usually have league-leading scorers. We credit kids who make the passes."

Against Hanover, Lehr led the Skippers with 13 points and 15 rebounds, and Cohasset pretty much took Hanover star Kelly DuVal out of the equation.

Carli Haggerty added 11 points and 8 boards, Samantha Crough chipped in 10 points and 12 rebounds, Anna Serakis dropped in 10 points, and Kelly had 6 points and 9 rebounds.

LeVangie said one key in the win was the play off the bench.

"The bench surprised people tonight," he said. "Allie Farren and Anna Serakis played very well. The guards ran the club well. Lindsey (Davis) and Rachel (Fredey) gave a good team effort tonight."

Hanover coach Brian Fisher was quick to credit the home team.

"We could have played better," he said. "But I have to give all the credit to Cohasset. They're a very talented team. I know they can play with a lot of teams in our league. They'd be tops in our league. They could beat Division 2 teams. There's a reason they're 11-0. To lose to them is nothing to be ashamed of."

Fisher said he hopes his team can get a bit of payback on Sunday.

"It will be fun to have them at our place," he said. "Now that we've seen them we can gameplan a little differently. We had a good plan. We made a lot of mistakes. A lot of their points came from our mistakes. Hopefully in our place we'll be a little more competitive."

Pinning a win

at 135, which is rare, so we made a coaching decision to bump up Derek to wrestle Steven Ellis. Derek is a little stronger of the two. Derek won 9-8 with a last-second escape. It was really exciting. Everyone was real fired up. The kids on both sides were going crazy becuase it was so close."

To add to the excitement, Tangerlini also won, with a second period pin.

"It was a big win for him," Sweeney said of Tangerlini. "He has six wins at the varsity level now. I'd say he's been our most productive freshman."

With the meet starting at 171, Cohasset was able to jump to an early 21-0 lead with three quick pins.

Junior Matt Brooks (171) got it rolling with a pin in 45 seconds to open the meet, and Thomas Flibotte followed with a pin just 34 seconds in to win at 189.

Flibotte was also wrestling up, moving up from 171 for the night.

At 215, Cam Washak scored a pin in 44 seconds against one of the league's better wrestlers.

"Cam's could have gone either way," Sweeney said. "Their kid was pretty good. Getting those first two wins was a good way to start. We hoped those two guys (Brooks and Flibotte) could win."

Cohasset went ahead 21-0 with a 5-0 decision from Alex Kinnealey, who had a big challenge in the heavyweight bout.

"Alex is 215," Sweeney said. "He wrestled a 280-pounder. He was giving away 70 pounds. It was a very exciting match."

The quick start proved to be important.

Sophomore Gus Helboch picked up a 4-1 win at 112, but Southeastern came back to cut the deficit to 24-23 before Tangerlini and Froio gave the Skippers some breathing room.

Senior Jack Murphy followed with a big win at 145, beating Brandon Conrad 2-0, upping his record to 23-1 for the season.

Cohasset's Andrew Littauer wrestles Friday night against Oliver Ames. Littauer also won his match on Wednesday.

"Jack won with a second-period reversal," Sweeney said. "That was a great match. When you're watching you grit your teeth a lot. We knew this was a state level match, that it would be tight and whoever makes a mistake probably loses."

Murphy's only loss of the season was to Pembroke star Pat Claflin at the Marshfield Tournament, and it was a close one.

"He'll give Claflin a good go," Sweeney said of a potential rematch, possibly at the sectional or state level. "He's on fire right now."

In 152-pound action, senior captain Andrew Littauer was a 12-2 victor and junior Justin Yeager followed with a 36-second pin at 160.

Sweeney said if there have been any surprises so far, it would have to be his freshman class.

"Nick Tangerlini has been a big surprise for us," he said, adding that his freshmen have been a big part of the lower weight classes. "The freshmen I general have been in and out of the lineup. They've been doing a great job. A lot of them have gone without being pinned. They're learning the hard way and getting tougher. They have a great attitude. That's been a real positive for us. The leadership in the upper classes has been good as well."

Murphy won the 145-pound division in the tournament with three dominating wins.

Littauer finished third at 152, winning three matches along the way.

Helboch finished second at 112 and Froio was third at 135.

Justin Yeager finished fifth at 160 and Kinnealey was also fifth at 215.

"It was a good showing for us," Sweeney said about the tournament. "We have had a lot of nagging injuries that has not allowed us to yet put are full starting line on the mat. Every time we get someone back, someone gets sick."

For Sweeney, his goal is a Mayshore league title, and a run at a .500 record overall.

Cohasset improved to 7-11 overall with a 4-0 league record with the Southeastern win.

"We will focus on winning the league first," he said. "And if we can crack .500 that will be an accomplishment."

Gymnastics balancing act

Team continues to see improvements

By Ryan Wood

Psychologist seeks questions from parents

All are welcome to "A Conversation with Psychologist Barbara Green," sponsored by Cohasset PSO/Parent Advisory Council, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., on Tuesday, Feb. 2 at Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road. Green has asked that parents email their question to her ahead of time at: bjgreenphd@aol.com and she will do her best to base the evenings conversation on answering those questions.

Here are some examples of the type of questions the Parent Advisory Council have put together:

- What is considered typical behavior in adolescents vs. at-risk?
- Do you have tips for parents to help our children deal with stress and anxiety?
- How do parents breach the barriers of adolescence?
- As a community, are there examples of proactive steps or models we could learn from?
- What are some of the available resources on the South Shore?

Green is a psychologist working with adolescent in Cohasset and the South Shore area. As a professional with an interest in the mental health and well being of children, adolescents and families — her doctoral dissertation was on adolescent depression — Green helped create Youth Health Connection, a Community Benefits Program of South Shore Hospital. The Youth Health Connection is a partnership among health professionals, educators, religious leaders, law enforcement, parents and teens. The core values of Youth Health Connection are health knowledge and risk prevention through collaboration, respect, connectedness and coalition building.

All workshops and presentations are free and sponsored by the PSO/Cohasset PAC.

Kindergarten registration

Kindergarten registration for the 2010-2011 school year will begin Monday, Jan. 25. Registration will be at the Osgood School, daily, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Parents registering children for kindergarten will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration, but do not have to commit at this time. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for programs. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required for kindergarteners in order to register. Call the school office at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Preschool registration

Preschool registration for the 2010-2011 year began Tuesday, Jan. 19. Children who turn 3 or 4 by Sept. 1, 2010, are eligible to register for the Osgood Preschool Program, which takes place four days per week, Monday through Thursday, for 2-1/2 hours. Entrance to the preschool program is based on a lottery system. Registration applications should be returned to the Osgood School no later than Friday, Feb. 5. The lottery will take place on Wednesday, Feb. 10, and parents will be notified immediately following. A deposit of $150 will be required to hold a space for those selected. A birth certificate and proof of residency must accompany applications.

Preschool open house

A preschool open house for parents will take place at Osgood School from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m., on Friday, Jan. 29. Parents will have an opportunity to meet preschool teachers and support staff and view the classrooms and facilities. Call the school office at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Pre & Post Prom Committee meeting

There will be a general meeting for all parents of CHS Seniors and/or Junior parents interested in working on the Pre and Post Prom 2010 festivities.

The meeting will be Thursday Jan. 28 at 7pm at the CMHS Library. Lots of help is needed, so if you are a parent of a senior, please come!

If you cannot attend, but would like to help please contact ellenmaher63@comcast.net

School pitches in to help Haiti

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

Hello, my name is Sean MacCarthy. Welcome to the "Life at CHS". I will be your waiter today. Today's specials include a recollection of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday at Cohasset High School...and that's what the "Life at CHS" would be like every week if I were a waiter. Glad that's not the case...

Remember that time we had a 4-day weekend? Amazing. I love 4-day weekends. It's like you have a weekend, and then another weekend right after it. It's almost like a weekend Oreo, except there is nothing in between. So I guess, it's not actually a weekend Oreo then...hmmm...awkward.

So Monday, everyone celebrated Martin Luther King Jr. Day (MLK Day for all you cool kids out there). This was celebrated by everyone after 10 o'clock because we got to sleep in baby! WOO HOO!

Tuesday was a bit of a slow day compared to the fast, action packed 4-day weekend. Regardless, it was still a good day. There were quite a few people missing as Ms. Higgins' classes boarded the buses early in the day and went to the Aquarium in Boston. (For the record, I love penguins.) Looking at everything from sea lions to sea turtles, I heard it was a great, educational experience. I'd love to go to the Aquarium but I guess that hasn't been cool since like 7th grade. Stupid social expectations...

Probably the most monumental day of the week was Wednesday. Why? Well because the Junior-Senior Semi Formal location has been decided. After some back-and-forth debates between Student Council members and Administrators, it was decided that the Black and White ball will be at the Town Hall (rhyme is unintended but is cool anyway). But hold on, that isn't even the most important news...you'll see later in the article...be patient or just skip to the ending like I do when I read things.

Thursday was more of a quiet day in the school. Outside the school, in Atlantica to be precise, it was quite loud because of the annual Cohasset Cabaret. Both the band and the chorus delivered some 5-star performances. Mr. Marks and Mrs. Moriarty continue to impress. This also raised a good amount of money for the Philadelphia trip that the band and chorus will go on in May. Quote of the night for these certain events is always "Tenors, I want you up here tenors!" courtesy of Mr. Marks. Great stuff.

Friday was the due date for all Spinnaker articles. The Spinnaker, which is an award-winning newspaper (really...I'm not lying this time), will come out next week. It really is great to see the newspaper be put out due to the extra, after schoolwork having to be put into it by all the editors. Kudos to all editors who spent hours outside of school writing and assigning articles. Well done.

Best news ever? I think so. This is what you have been waiting for since the 5th paragraph. This isn't my usual goofy/disillusioned shtick, this is serious. Hopefully, you are all aware of the devastating earthquake that has ravaged the country of Haiti. While this is horrible news, the news of Cohasset High School joining together to help Haiti is astounding. Over the last few weeks, ideas have been tossed around to try and raise money for Haitian restoration. Now, many of them are being implemented. A bake sale is being held on Thursday and Friday and all profits are going to Haiti relief funds. The arts department is holding a raffle where much of the proceeds will be going to Haiti. The English department is creating a scrapbook of creative writing, written by the students themselves, and all the money made will go to Haiti. The Spinnaker is going to be sold for $2, as opposed to $1, so half of the profits made off of the Spinnaker will also go to Haiti. Finally, the Student Council decided it would be the right thing to do to take half of what money is made from the Junior-Senior Semi Formal and donate it to Haitian relief efforts. It truly is outstanding to see the students of Cohasset High School join together for such an important cause.

I will leave you on that high note. Have a good week and join in on the Haitian restoration!

Sean MacCarthy can start driving again! Look out!

St. Paul students record earthquake, help Haiti

School seismograph records tremors

Did you know that Cohasset residents have been recording earthquakes at St. Paul School in Hingham? St. Paul School middle school students from Cohasset: Dylan Piasecki, Carol Demick, Abigail Revoir, Colleen McGowan, and Timothy Chase all agree that there is more to earthquakes than just shaking.

During the recent earthquakes in Haiti the seismograph at St. Paul's recorded all of the relevant data including, magnitude, location, and depth. Since faith is an important part of the school mission, many prayers have been offered for the people of Haiti. The student government held a fundraiser for Haiti relief and raised $2,500.

Did you know that St. Paul School offers an educational opportunity for students, teachers, and their community to be directly involved with scientific research? Since September grades 5-8 at St. Paul's School in Hingham have been monitoring earthquakes and related phenomenon from around the world from their own science lab this has been done in partnership with leading scientists in the field as part of the Boston College Educational Seismology Project (BC-ESP). The project allows students to study, record and analyze natural phenomenon around the world through a hands on interdisciplinary approach that encourages scientific inquiry and a greater understanding of how the natural environment impacts everyday life.

The seismic data collected at St. Paul's is sent to the Incorporated Research Institutions for Seismology, making the school's laboratory part of a global monitoring system.

Did you know that St. Paul School is the only school on the South Shore to participate in the BC-ESP? While approximately 23 schools are participating in the project across the Commonwealth, St. Paul's is one of only three schools in the country designated as a 'flagship" school. This has created an opportunity to partner with a middle school in California, through Quake Catcher Network, to provide St. Paul students with newly developed tools to record earthquakes and explore earthquake data in near-real time.

Did you know that weekly classes at St. Paul School are taught by seismologist, Ms. Leslie Campbell from the Weston Observatory and Boston College as part of their school experience?

In addition, the St. Paul's Seismology Center is on the grid of official Earthquake Recording Centers attached to the U.S. Geological Survey. The seismic data collected at St. Paul's is sent to the Incorporated Research Institutions for Seismology, making the school's laboratory part of a global monitoring system.

Having the seismograph in the classroom gives St. Paul students the ability to collect real-world data and make measurements that provide an understanding of the internal structure of the Earth and the processes by which the Earth changes. "This project brings science to life," said St. Paul's Science Curriculum Coordinator Jonathan Mihal.

St. Paul School will be hosting an Open House on Sunday Jan. 31 from 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m. this begins with Mass at 11:30 a.m. in the church and is followed by refreshments and tours of the school. Please contact Mrs. Field in the school office for more information 781-749-2407.

Open house Jan. 31 at St. Paul School

An open house for all prospective and current families will take place from 12:30 to 3 p.m., on Sunday, Jan. 31, at St. Paul School in Hingham. From 12:30 to 3 p.m., refreshments will be served followed by a guided tour of the school; and at 1 p.m. and 2 p.m., there will be a brief presentation about the school.

Open enrollment for September: Pre-kindergarten through grade eight; full-day kindergarten.

For more information, call the school office at 781-749-2407 or visit www.stpaulschoolhingham.com.

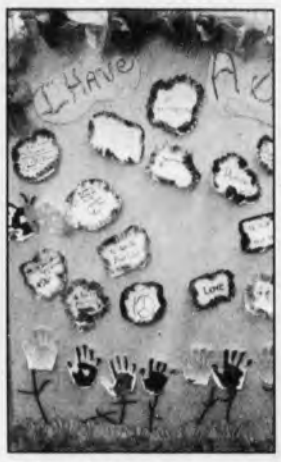
Clementina Chery, President and CEO of the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute of Dorchester, applauds those who came to listen to her message "God's Peace within Us All" Monday morning during Cohasset's Second Congregational Church's Martin Luther King Day Breakfast.

Photos by Laura Sinclair



There were many children in the audience like John Carrillo who were impressed with the youngsters performing in the play. The event was held on Martin Luther King Day on Monday.

Sara and Henry Greentree of Cohasset attended the play Raising Peacemakers performed by the Children's Theatre Company at the Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham on Martin Luther King Day.

Alexandera Chery of Dorchester and sister of the late Louis Brown, who died in 1993 after being shot while on his way to a Christmas party for Teens Against Gang Violence, a local anti violence organization he had joined, spoke Monday morning during Cohasset's Martin Luther King Jr. Breakfast Celebration. Chery's mom, Clementina Chery, was guest speaker for the event.

Children left their peace messages for those who attended Second Congregational Church's Martin Luther King Jr. Breakfast.

Bette Budlong of Quincy beams with joy as she watches the young people from the Children's Theatre Company of Boston perform the play Raising Peacemakers in honor of Martin Luther King.

The Second Congregational Church Choir sang during the town-wide Martin Luther King Jr. Breakfast on Monday.

Rick and Karen Kirkendall sing, "He's the got Whole World in His Hands" at the Cohasset breakfast.

Peace ribbons were available for those who attended the Martin Luther King Jr. Breakfast at Cohasset's Second Congregational Church on Monday morning..

CPD: Monthly Report December 2009

SPECIAL PROJECTS/ ACHIEVEMENTS/INNOVATIONS: During December the Cohasset Police Department received an award from AAA of Southern New England for our commitment to traffic enforcement. The award was presented at a special luncheon in Swansea, Massachusetts by AAA. Cohasset is one of a handful of communities that have had no fatal pedestrian accidents in over 22 years, something that they are very proud of.

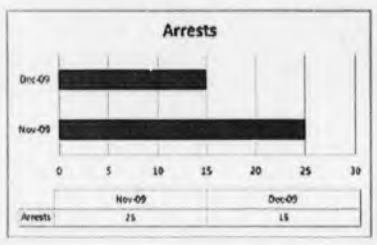
Cohasset is one of a handful of communities that have had no fatal pedestrian accidents in over 22 years, something that they are very proud of.

Police Officer John Small continued with his annual toy collection drive to benefit the United States Marine Corps "Toys for Tots" program. During December the police station lobby was converted into a "drop off center" for toys. Officer Small delivered "truck loads" of toys the USMC throughout the month. Every year Officer Small takes the entire month of December off, using his vacation days to assist with this program.

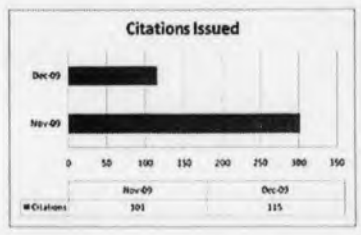
The CPD participated in the Massachusetts Governor's Highway Safety Bureau's "Over the Limit – Under Arrest" anti drunk-driving campaign during December. Extra patrols, funded with grant money, were deployed on weekend nights to specifically target impaired drivers.

Sergeant Jeffrey Treanor applied for a grant from the Massachusetts State Emergency Telecommunications Board (SETB). The SETB has made thousands of dollars in grant money available for police department's to defray costs associated with running an emergency dispatch center. The grants should be awarded in January 2010.

Patrol Division: Cases of Interest:



- A 50-year-old male from Milton who is developing property off of Beechwood Street reported that his 1988 GMC dump truck, which is color blue, was stolen from his work site. The truck has been entered as a stolen vehicle into the police department's NCIC (National Crime Information Center) computer and it has not been recovered yet.
- A Cohasset businessman reported to the CPD that a 2001 Jeep Grand Cherokee mysteriously showed up in his auto body repair shop parking lot on a weekend night. The merchant reported that he thought that a customer may have dropped the Jeep off for repair. When he did not hear from the customer for several days, the merchant checked the vehicle registration, which he found in the glove box. The merchant then called the owner of the Jeep, a 39-year-old male from Pembroke, and was informed that the Jeep had been stolen from Pembroke days ago. The Jeep was recovered by the CPD and brought to headquarters. The vehicle was processed for fingerprints and physical evidence. The case remains under investigation.
- A 29-year-old male from Scituate is under investigation regarding a possible "flim-flam" scheme at a local business. The Scituate male allegedly purchased items from the store and then returned the empty cartons for cash several days later.
- A 64-year-old Cohasset resident reported that approximately $3000 in damage occurred to his property as a result of a hit–and-run motor vehicle crash. Investigation at the scene of the crash showed that the operator of a Grey Jeep Grand Cherokee, model year between 1996 and 1998, drove off of the road and hit a granite post and fence. Officers are checking Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicle listings for similar cars registered to people in the area. The Jeep should have substantial front-end damage.



Training:

- Police Officer's McLean, StIves, and Peebles, all were certified in the use of the Breathalyzer at the Reading Police Academy during December.
- Annual in-service training, which includes updates in criminal and motor vehicle law, as well as recertification in CPR and First Responder training is being completed throughout the Winter for all sworn personnel.
- On-going training is being conducted at roll call regarding the department's revised evidence policies.
- Sgt. Jeffrey Treanor attended a one-day seminar on establishing a field training officer (FTO) program for the department. FTO's are generally veteran officers who are partnered with rookie officers for a "break-in" period.

Lincoln Day celebration is Feb. 6

The Hingham Historical Society invites South Shore families to attend the Annual Lincoln Day celebration on Saturday, Feb. 6 at 11 a.m. at The Old Ship Church, 90 Main St., Hingham.

Lincoln Day celebrates the lives and deeds of General Benjamin Lincoln, Hingham's most notable Revolutionary War hero, and Abraham Lincoln, our 16th president, whose ancestors first settled in Hingham in 1637. At that time, Cohasset was part of Hingham.

This year's Lincoln Day celebration will take special note of General Lincoln's contributions to our community and our nation with a keynote address by Prof. David Mattern, author of Benjamin Lincoln and the Revolutionary War, and professor of history at the University of Virginia.

The principal ceremony begins at 11 a.m. at Old Ship Church, but traditionally several military groups muster briefly at 10:15 a.m. at the nearby Bell Tower to fire a salute toward Benjamin Lincoln tomb in the Hingham Cemetery. Inside the church, the official ceremony features familiar patriotic songs accompanied by organist Joan Nahigian, and a selection of historic American music provided by Hingham High School's Choral Spectrum under the direction of Mr. Joe Young.

After the service, all guests are invited to join a short parade to Fountain Square to lay commemorative wreaths at the foot of the bronze statue of Abraham Lincoln. This part of the ceremony takes place just across the street from Benjamin Lincoln's home, built by his ancestors and still occupied by his descendants. After a display of proper military salutes, all are invited to warm up at a reception at Old Derby Academy, 34 Main St., where warm beverages and light refreshments will be provided courtesy of the Hingham 375th Anniversary Committee.

This event is free and open to the public. For more information, contact the Hingham Historical Society at 781-749-7721.

The parade and ceremony now regularly feature notable keynote speakers and a colorful military presence from a number of organizations.

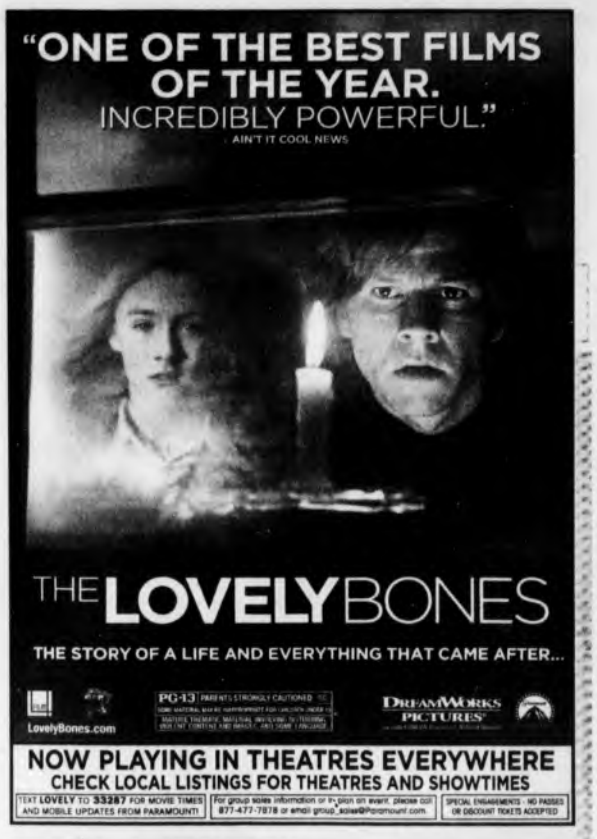
Civil War Camp meets Feb. 10

Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War Satuit Camp 3188 will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 10, at Grand Army Hall, 353 Country Way in Scituate.

The Sons of Unions Veterans of the Civil War (SUVCW) is a patriotic and educational organization.

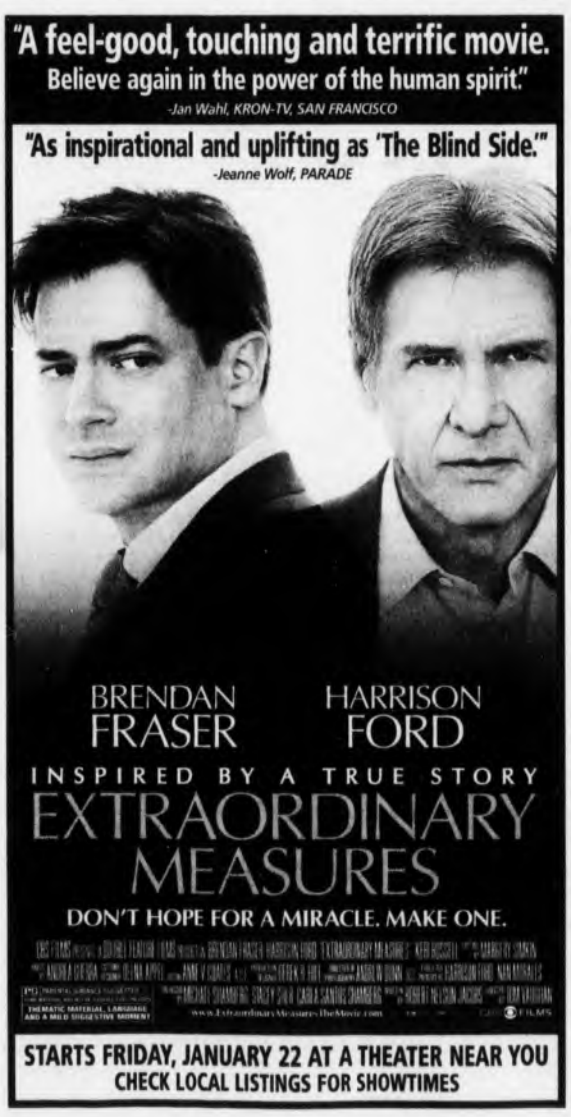
Membership is open to males, ages 14 and older, who are direct descendants of a solider, sailor, or Marine who served during the Civil War. Junior and associate memberships are also available.

The camp will help prospective members with the paperwork to determine eligibility. Members do not have to be Scituate residents.

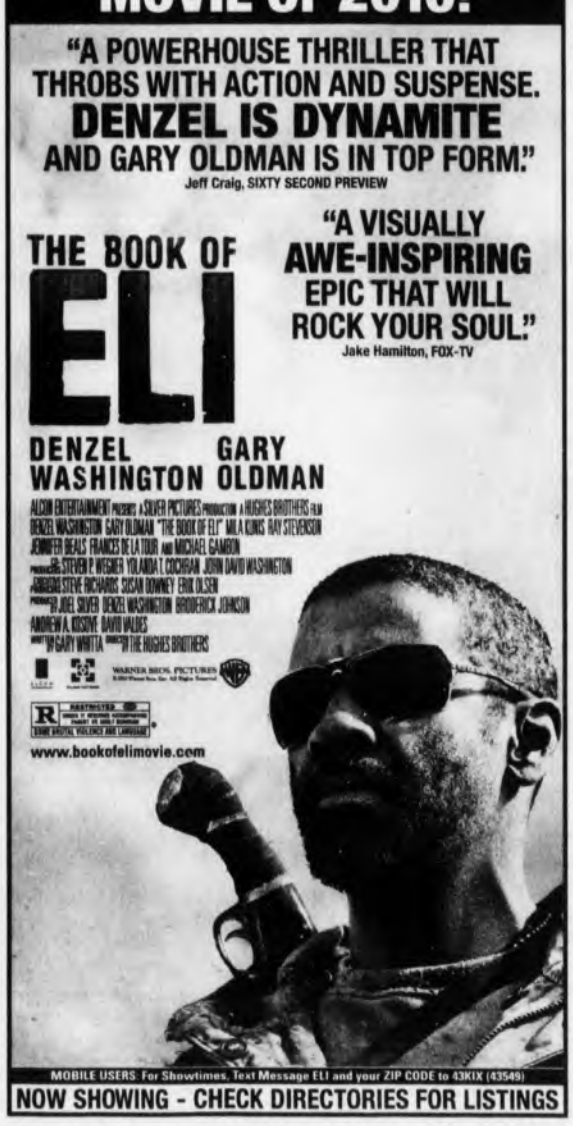


A women's auxiliary is also forming. For information contact Conley Ford at cfordcon@comcast.net or call 781-545-0054.

Labyrinth walk on first Sunday



Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., hosts a labyrinth walk, which is open to the public, on the first Sunday of every month. The next walk will take place from 7 to 9 p.m., on Sunday, Feb. 7.



The labyrinth is a meditative experience in a candlelight environment with soothing musical accompaniment. Since the labyrinth is made of canvas, it is required that it be walked without shoes.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
Feb. 1, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You need to be certain that all the right conditions are in place before you take that first step. It can't hurt to listen to good advice from those who have your best interests at heart.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Be careful not to get involved in other people's disputes unless you know the facts behind the disagreements. That's the best way to be assured of making wise and honest decisions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You still need to be careful about how you're going to spend those energy reserves you finally got around to restoring. Best advice: Avoid overdoing it. Let things take their course.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspect continues to favor travel — alone or with that special person. So if you've been putting off making those getaway plans, it's still a good time to get started on them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Those so-called golden opportunities that continue to dazzle the Lion still need to be carefully checked out. Be suspicious about anything that looks like the "perfect" prospect.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Changes at the workplace could make it more difficult to do things the way you prefer. But the wise Virgo who shows some flexibility could find it paying off in a big way.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might want to check out the explanation you were given for a sudden shift in your duties. There's a possibility that you haven't been told all the facts that you deserve to know.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Having confidence in your abilities is important, especially when you could be facing a new challenge, whether it's in the workplace or in a personal relationship. Good luck.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A new work-related opportunity might not be all that it seems. Before making any decisions, you might want to check with others who have had some experience in that area.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A situation involving someone close could benefit from your timely intervention. Avoid being judgmental. There'll be plenty of time later for those "little talks" you like to have.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Travel could be a surprise element in that new project. Be prepared for other previously undisclosed aspects that also might come to light as you proceed with the work.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Try to balance your work-related responsibilities with the time you're spending on your recently revived social life. An old friend might be planning to return after a long absence.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Learn what to expect during the divorce process and how to prepare for this challenge with greater confidence and understanding.

Hingham certified financial planner Tricia Welsh and family law attorney Susannah L. Brown announce the second of a series of free seminars "Strategies for Surviving Divorce." The seminar will take place at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, Feb. 2, at Papa Razzi Restaurant, 2087 Washington Ave., Hanover. The presenters will provide information for anyone considering a divorce, those in the middle of the process and individuals who require legal or financial assistance post divorce.

A variety of legal and financial topics will be discussed and questions are welcome. Learn what to expect during the divorce process and how to prepare for this challenge with greater confidence and understanding. Individuals already divorced can learn about changes in family law over the past year. Also, the importance of a financial plan and strategies to ensure future financial security will be discussed.

The seminars are free to the public but registration is required. To register for this event, call the Law Offices of Susannah L. Brown at 781-829-6870 or email sb@attorneysbrown.com.

Hospice volunteers needed

Are you looking for a rewarding, unique volunteer experience? Perhaps you have musical, artistic or creative gifts that can be shared with individuals that would enhance their quality of life as they journey to end of life. Or perhaps you would simply like to be a quiet presence and companion to a hospice patient. Allegiance Hospice is looking for volunteers to visit patients under hospice care in nursing homes in the South Shore area. Volunteers are formally trained and are a valued part of the interdisciplinary team in serving patients at end of life. If you are interested call Karen Spangler 1-800-792-5808 ext 2608 or email kspangler@allegiancehospice.com

WORSHIP SERVICES

8:00 AM Circle Ministry - Parish House

9:45 AM – Childcare for our youngest begins at 9:45 AM in the Parish House. All other children will gather with their parents in Trueblood Hall in the Parish house for Guatemala Sunday!

10:00 AM – Worship in the PARISH HOUSE– Led by our Common Hope Vision Team

Come hear the stories and experiences of several First Parishioners and a fellow UU from Michigan who spent memorable time this past October in Antigua, Guatemala. They built, they taught, they led worship and singing. Many have been sponsors of children through Common Hope for long enough to see them all grown up. Come and worship in a new way, and bring your children! Please bring also some toothbrushes and toothpaste to share with our Guatemalan neighbors!

The morning offering will be dedicated to the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee/Unitarian Universalist Association (UUSC/UUA) Haiti Earthquake Relief Fund. To learn more, visit www.uusc.org.

All are invited for refreshments and fellowship right after worship and RE classes.

To learn more about First Parish Unitarian Universalist, please come by the Parish House and pick up or sign up for the current monthly newsletter, The Common, or visit our website at www.firstparishcohasset.org. All are welcome as we worship and learn and live our faith together!

WORSHIP NOTES

Temple news

• The Writings of St. Paul through a Jewish Lens with Rick Small – This is a six-week course on Tuesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. will be held on Jan. 19, 26, Feb. 2, 9, 23 and March 2. It is free for members and $54 for non-members. For more information, call 781-749-8103.

The teachings of Christianity's putative founder will be explored through careful reading of Saul of Tarsus's (later called Paul) letters in the New Testament. His writings often melded Jewish scripture with Greek philosophy and this study, in seminar format, will allow a thorough discussion and better understanding of Paul's thinking within the culture of the era.

• Congregation Sha'aray Shalom Israeli Film Festival – Four Sundays at four.

Amy Kronish, established Israeli film critic will speak on Contemporary Issues in Israeli Film on Sunday, Jan. 31. Following dinner that night, the award-winning film, "Noodle," directed by Ayelet Menahemi, will be shown.

The film series will run on Sundays at 4 pm. Movies only are free to members and $6/non-member/movie. Dinner option - $12/movie/member and $18/movie/non-member; Series of four movies with dinner - $44/members and $54/non-members.

• Other movies include:

Sunday, Feb. 21 – "Broken Wings" directed by Nir Bergman.

Sunday, March. 21 – "Beaufort,", directed by Joseph Cedar

Sunday, April 25 – "Walk on Water," directed by Eitan Fox

Effects of sexual abuse by clergy

Glastonbury Abbey, in conjunction with the Scituate Affiliate of Voice of the Faithful, is hosting a talk, "The Enduring Psychological and Spiritual Effects of Clergy-Perpetrated Sexual Abuse". The event will take place at the Abbey Center at the Glastonbury Abbey on Tuesday, January 26th at 7:15 pm.

The presenters of the talk are Barbara Thorp, LICSW, Robert McMackin, EdD, and David Nolan. Barbara Thorp is the Director of the Boston Archdiocesan Office for Pastoral Support and Outreach (OPSO). Robert McMackin is a Psychologist Consultant for OPSO and co-editor of the book Understanding the Impact of Clergy Sexual Abuse, Routledge Press, 2009. David Nolan is a survivor of clergy sexual abuse.

OPSO, established in 2002, assists those who have been sexually abused by a priest, deacon, or other church personnel of the Archdiocese of Boston. OPSO's mission is to provide assistance, pastoral/spiritual care, support, counseling referrals, and other resources to survivors, family members of survivors, and parishes. Barbara, Cardinal Séan O'Malley, and survivors of clergy sexual abuse met with Pope Benedict in Washington DC in April 2008.

On Jan. 26th, Barbara, Bob, and David will discuss the long-term effects of sexual abuse by clergy. Admission is free. Donations are appreciated to help defray costs. All are welcome.

Theater review

Reaching new 'Heights'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

"In the Heights" will be at the Boston Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, through Jan. 24.

Since it first opened off-Broadway three years ago, "In the Heights" – a vibrant new musical about the impact of gentrification on a Hispanic New York neighborhood – has often been compared to "Fiddler on the Roof," the Sholem Aleichem tale of a community of Jews being driven from their village by the Tsar.

The comparisons are natural. Composer and lyricist Lin-Manuel Miranda conceived "In the Heights" as a musical pean to the upper Manhattan neighborhood where he grew up, complete with a bodega owner, Usnavi, who, like a modern-day Tevye the milkman, stands at the center of his close-knit community.

With Miranda playing the lead role, the show transferred to Broadway in 2008, winning four Tony Awards that year including Best Musical. With the Broadway production still going strong, the show's first-rate national tour is now in the middle of a two-week run at the Boston Opera House.

The exuberantly performed title number provides an opener that immediately makes the passion of this community palpable and enormously appealing. Indeed, Miranda's fresh score incorporates everything from spoken word raps to salsa, merengue and Latin pop, performed by a lively cast of characters including Usnavi (the wiry, clear-voiced Kyle Beltran), his girlfriend Vanessa (power vocalist Yvette Gonzalez Nacer), taxi-stand owner Kevin (Daniel Bolero), his wife Camila (Natalie Toro), their college-aged daughter Nina (Arielle Jacobs) and her beau Benny (the talented Rogelio Douglas, Jr.), beauty parlor proprietor Daniela (an impressive Isabel Santiago), spirited teenage bodega employee Sonny (the winningly mischievous Shaun Taylor-Corbett), and the spiritual grandmother to them all, Abuela Claudia (Elise Santora).

Minus a central plot-line, "In the Heights," with a book by Quiara Alegria Hudes, cleverly strings together several vignettes – involving everything from a who-has-the-winning-lottery-ticket mini-mystery to forbidden love, a heatwave, and a blackout – to capture the struggles and spirit of the inhabitants of this particular urban enclave. While much of the plot offers only a surface exploration of these characters, songs like "Hundreds of Stories," "Everything I Know" and the thrilling "Carnival del Barrio" give the proceedings meaning as well as irresistible vivacity.

Director Thomas Kail keeps things moving, allowing for a naturalistic flow that blends well with Andy Blankenbuehler's spirited choreography. Anna Louizo's set design perfectly captures the street's congested landscape of overlapping businesses, all in the looming shadow of the George Washington Bridge.

"In the Heights" will be at the Boston Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, through Jan. 24. For tickets and information, call 1-800-982-2787 or go online at BroadwayAcross America.com.

Movie review

Heath Ledger wins you over with his trademark charm and charisma. He also reminds you how much he'll be missed.

'DOCTOR,' HEAL THYSELF

Film Review
AL ALEXANDER

The Imaginarium of Doctor Parnassus (B-)

Before "The Imaginarium of Doctor Parnassus," Terry Gilliam and Charles McKeown were batting a thousand, scoring critical and commercial hits with their scripts for "Brazil" and "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen." But their luck has run out.

And it's not just because Heath Ledger died halfway through filming. No, what kills them is the raggedness of their Faustian tale about a traveling magic show proprietor who uses his 15-year-old daughter as chattel in a convoluted scheme to achieve eternal life.

It lacks the wonder and awe of "Munchausen" and the absorbing social satire of "Brazil." But it does have Ledger, who hauntingly reminds how much he'll be missed in a farewell performance that, while incomplete, showcases all his strengths.

Still, what happens onscreen in this phantasmagoric adventure is never as interesting as what went on behind the scenes after Ledger died in January 2008.

Forced to decide whether to scrap the project or find a way to complete the movie without resorting to technological tricks, Gilliam came up with the ingenious idea of having Johnny Depp, Jude Law and Colin Farrell take turns playing Ledger's Tony in a series of fantasy sequences that explore the various facets of the character's subconscious.

Surprisingly, it works, as do the hallucinatory environments they inhabit when they step through Doctor Parnassus' magic portal and take up residence inside their imaginations.

The only problem is that these flights of LSD-inspired fancy are so beautiful and creative they dwarf the rest of the picture, which is trite, dull and discombobulated.

It's also a bit sordid, given that the plot revolves around Doctor Parnassus (Christopher Plummer) preparing to surrender his soon-to-be 16-year-old daughter, Valentina (Lily Cole), to the devil, aka Mr. Nick (Tom Waits), to settle an old debt.

The fatal flaw, though, is the lack of interest it generates for its title character, a man, who thanks to an assist from Mr. Nick, has been around for centuries exploiting his gift to control the imaginations of others.

Plummer plays Parnassus well, but he never offers a reason to invest in the character or his plight, as he agonizes over finding a way to avoid handing Valentina over to Mr. Nick. It's almost as big a liability as the cockeyed plan Parnassus comes up with to save the day.

It just doesn't work. Ditto for Parnassus' relationships with his daughter and his two employees, the cynical Percy (Verne Troyer), and the still wet-behind-the-ears Anton (Andrew Garfield).

As both the co-writer and director, Gilliam consistently sells his characters short by valuing his stunning visuals more than his actors. That includes Ledger, who eerily plays a suicidal amnesiac who joins the traveling show after Valentina and Anton prevent him from hanging himself.

The sight of Ledger dangling from the side of a bridge with a rope around his neck is disturbing to say the least, especially in the wake of his needless death. But such morbid thoughts are quickly erased, as Ledger wins you over with his trademark charm and charisma.

Unlike the rest of the cast, he makes the most of his every moment onscreen, reminding us how much was lost and how sad it is that we'll never see him again.

You wish he could have made his exit in a better flick, but you're glad to have had the opportunity to see him one last time before he, and the movie, slip off into the great beyond.

Rated PG-13. "The Imaginarium of Doctor Parnassus" contains violent images, some sensuality, adult language and smoking.

HINGHAM TOWN CHOIR In addition to the plans in place for a non-auditioned chorus of 375 voices for the performance celebrating Hingham's 375th Anniversary on July 4, 2010, Music Director Dr. Paul Cappers is also putting together a smaller ensemble, the Hingham Town Choir. This select group will consist of a balanced SATB choir of about 20 members. Singers interested in this smaller ensemble should contact Dr. Cappers by phone at 781-740-2436, or by email pcappers@gmail.com, to schedule an audition. The group will rehearse Tuesday evenings, beginning Jan. 26, 2010. Repertoire for the group will be drawn from American Music of the past 375 years, mostly a cappella. The Hingham Town Chorus will perform at venues throughout Hingham over the next year to celebrate Hingham's history and showcase the talent that abounds in the town, as well as serve as a core group of well-prepared singers to lead the program on July 4. For more information on the unauditioned 375th Anniversary Chorus, contact Ann Burnaby, at annburnaby@earthlink.net.

APPRECIATION

On Tuesday, the staff at the South Shore Community Center dedicated the center's computer room to Peter Tolman in recognition and appreciation of his work to make the room a reality and the impact he has made on the Community Center as a whole. Here, Tolman is surrounded by children who use the computer room.

SSCC dedicates computer room to Peter Tolman

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Fifteen years ago Peter Tolman was looking for something to keep him busy in retirement.

What he found was an outlet for the skills he accumulated over a lifetime and a second family.

Since 1994, Tolman has been the South Shore Community Center's resident handy man – and a vital part of its operation.

On Tuesday morning, the staff at the South Shore Community Center dedicated the center's computer room to Tolman in recognition and appreciation of his work to make the room a reality and the impact he has made on the Community Center as a whole.

Dressed in a bowtie and corduroys, Tolman greeted the pre-schoolers who were using the room with a smile. When he was presented the plaque naming the computer room in his honor, he was both surprised and humbled.

"Well, thank you, I don't know quite what to make of it," Tolman said, covering his mouth with his hand in surprise.

For more than 15 years, Tolman, now 84, has been the South Shore Community Center's go-to man for routine maintenance around the building. He maintains the bowling alley lanes, fixes doors, unclogs sinks, and build cabinets, to name just a few of his

Wanted: Balanced budget

Town, schools grapple with FY11 figures

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

As Annual Town Meeting (March 27) inches closer, the town is working toward presenting a balanced budget. While state numbers are still being talked about at the State House, it is clear Cohasset is going to struggle to make ends meet.

The current draft of the school budget is approximately $15.38-million, which is a level services budget. According to current estimates of expected new revenue from the Town Manager's office, which assume a year-over-year cut in state aid, the school should be at a budget number closer to $14.84-million. That leaves a gap of more than $500,000.

"If we are going to make any case for an override we're going to need to set out the options."
— Sam Wakeman, Budget Planning Group

Much of the discussion at the Budget Planning Group meeting Tuesday night was determining how to bring the schools' budget closer to the estimate.

The Budget Planning Group was an advisory group created last year to consider long- and short-term budget issues. The committee is comprised of members of the Board of Selectmen, School Committee, Advisory Committee, and Capital Budget Committee.

State aid numbers will become clearer over the next few weeks, but the Governor's budget came out this week. The Governor's budget message released on Wednesday indicates his commitment to keeping local aid numbers at last year's level. However, the budget still has months of review left in the legislature. Town officials are expecting a visit from Cohasset legislative representatives, which should give town officials a better idea of what to expect for local aid.

The school department and School Committee are looking at several

Tax options to consider

Meals and hotel tax could make it on warrant

By Nancy White

With the town facing a tough budget year in fiscal 2011 all options are being looked at to cut expenses and increase revenue.

One of the options discussed at the Budget Planning Group meeting Tuesday night is the establishing a local hotel and/or meals tax.

Home Instead SENIOR CARE

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison
SELECTING A CARE PROVIDER
When selecting a home healthcare provider, it is important to consider a number of factors. Is the agency accredited and licensed by the state? Your state's Department of Health can provide you with a list of licensed agencies. Consider how established the agency is and what services it offers, as well as the number of clients it serves. It is also important to find out what procedures the provider has established to handle emergencies. Another key issue would be whether the agency serds the same individual each time, or if it varies. Also, learn what hours and days services are available. Finally, get references, including some of the agency's current clients, and call them.
Our companions are bonded, insured, and thoroughly screened. Our agency has years of experience choosing and placing compassionate caregivers. If you have any questions, please call 781-878-2994 to learn more about our wide range of services. We are available 24 hours a day and will be happy to address any concerns you might have. Our services are flexible, from full-time care to occasional respite care, so we can help, no matter what the situation. Our address is 145 Washington St., Suite 11. Call today because you never know what tomorrow may bring. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.
P.S. The AARP (formerly known as the American Association of Retired People) provides a brochure on selecting a caregiver.

Off-duty officer sees crime-in-progress in Weymouth

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At 8:37 p.m. on Thursday (Jan. 21), an off-duty Cohasset police officer observed suspicious activity near his residence in Weymouth. Four males, all wearing hooded sweatshirts, appeared to be stalking a pizza delivery person in a condominium complex parking lot. The officer believed that because of their behavior, hiding behind parked vehicles and concealing their faces, a robbery was imminent.

The foursome lost their interest in the pizza delivery person, who left the area, and turned their attention toward a 2006 BMW SUV, owned by a 37-year-old Weymouth woman, that was parked in the condominium lot.

One of the subjects picked up a large rock and threw it through the passenger side window, shattering the glass, the officer said. This same teen then reached inside the vehicle and removed a purse that was left on the passenger compartment.

The Cohasset officer maintained visual contact of the foursome as they exited the parking lot and he contacted Weymouth police. Weymouth officers responded to the area and were given descriptions of the suspects and the crime the Cohasset officer had just witnessed.

A suspect matching the description given was observed by this Cohasset officer a short time later exiting nearby woods, out of breath and bleeding from his left hand. The Cohasset officer positively identified the suspect as the one who had thrown the rock and taken the purse.

Weymouth police arrested this teen, a 13-year-old from Weymouth, for felony vandalism and breaking and entering a vehicle. (Cohasset police officers are "cross-sworn" as Norfolk County Deputy Sheriffs, allowing them to assist and make arrests within Norfolk County.) The other three males fled the area and were not apprehended by police. Anyone with information is urged to call Weymouth police, 781-335-1212.

Arrest

Cohasset Police arrested a 57-year-old Hingham man for operating after license suspension at 12:12 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 19). Police said the man, who was operating a blue 1997 Volvo, had just left the Scituate police station. The operator had been arrested the previous evening in Scituate for operating under the influence and his license was suspended due to his arrest.

Scituate police notified Cohasset and the car was spotted traveling northbound on Route 3A in Cohasset.

Police said the operator initially gave the officer a false name in an apparent attempt to conceal his true identity. A computer check through the Registry of Motor Vehicles revealed a photograph of the actual operator and checks through the cruiser's onboard computer revealed a Registry picture of the actual operator, and his license suspension was confirmed. His vehicle was towed and he was arrested.

Summons

• On Friday (Jan. 22) at 3:16 p.m., police stopped a 55-year-old Weymouth woman, who was operating a red 2002 Chevy Trailblazer, for speeding on Hull Street.

A computer check of her New Hampshire driver's license revealed that it was suspended. Her right to operate in Massachusetts was also suspended, police said.

Her vehicle was towed and she will be summonsed to court for speeding and operating after suspension of license. Police have reciprocity in most states regarding license suspensions, whereas if an operator's right to operate is suspended in one state, the Mass. R.M.V. will suspend his or her right to operate in this state, police said.

• At 6:15 p.m. on Saturday (Jan. 23) a 51-year-old Sandwich man was stopped while operating a brown, 2001 Mazda for speeding on Hull Street. Subsequent checks of the operator's license indicated that it had expired.

The Mazda was towed and the Sandwich man was summonsed into court for speeding and unlicensed operation. Police also have the option of either arrest or summons if the officer observes operation.

Police say it is important to check your driver's license expiration date, (usually your birthday), as the R.M.V. will not alert you.

• At 3:04 p.m. on Sunday (Jan. 24), an police officer observed a green sedan operating in the southbound breakdown lane on Route 3A; the sedan stopped in front of the Village Greenery. The officer parked behind the disabled vehicle (as part of police's community caretaking function.).

It was determined that the vehicle was having mechanical problems, and a tow was called through AAA. Subsequent checks of the operator, a 16-year-old Scituate girl, indicated that she was only operating on a learner's permit. Her vehicle was towed and she will be summonsed into court for operating without a driver's license.

MV crashes

• At 9:57 a.m. on Friday (Jan. 22), Cohasset police responded to a motor vehicle crash on Ripley Road.

A vehicle operated by a 17-year-old Cohasset boy, struck a vehicle, operated by a 40-year-old Cohasset woman, while she was turning into100 Ripley Road. No injuries were reported, the damage appeared to be minor, and no citations were issued. Cause of the accident appears to be following too closely.

• At 3:16 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 19), police responded to a motor vehicle accident in the area of Route 3A and Brewster Road. A vehicle, operated by a 16-year-old Cohasset boy, had stopped and was attempting to turn left into Brewster Road. A vehicle, operated by an 82-year-old Scituate man, attempted to pass on the right of the stopped vehicle and clipped its bumper. No injuries were reported, neither vehicle was towed as damage was minor, and no citations were issued. Cause of the accident appears to be failure to use care in passing, police said.

Solicitor

On Tuesday (Jan 19) at 7:12 p.m., Cohasset dispatch received a call from a resident on Fair Oaks Lane about a man going door-to- door in the neighborhood. Responding officers were unable to locate anyone matching this description.

Verizon has permits to solicit door-to-door during daylight hours only and has been advised of the time constraints. Police were unable to determine if the man was in fact a Verizon solicitor.

No one there

At 7:27 p.m. on Wednesday (Jan. 20), Cohasset dispatch received a call from a resident of Short Street (connects Norfolk and Ash streets), reporting a strange truck parked on the street and that an unknown person had knocked on her front door three times. No one was there when she opened the door. Responding officers were unable to locate either truck or anyone in the surrounding streets. Police were unable to confirm if the incident may have involved Verizon solicitors.

Warrant

At 6:33 a.m. on Thursday (Jan. 21), Cohasset dispatch received a call from a constable asking for Cohasset police to assist in a warrant arrest. A 52-year-old Cohasset man was placed in custody on a capias warrant for non-payment of child support. Cohasset police serve as peacekeepers on these arrests, as constables operate independently through the trial courts on civil warrants.

Sweep

On Thursday (Jan. 21) during the early morning hours, several Cohasset police officers went out on a warrant sweep. Several times a year, local warrants (originating from Cohasset police cases) are served by these officers in an attempt to clear the backlog and to ensure that the accused show up for their court dates or make restitution to their victims.

Police have statewide jurisdiction to serve these warrants, and can go into surrounding towns and cities to serve these. Warrants are accessed through the warrant management system, accessible online statewide by any police officer with access to the system.

Vandalized

At 2:14 p.m. on Thursday (Jan. 21), a 45-year-old Cohasset woman entered police headquarters to report that her vehicle, parked at 605a Jerusalem Road, had been vandalized sometime overnight. A BB projectile had been fired through the driver's side, rear window, shattering the glass. Nothing was reported taken from the vehicle, and no other reports of vandalism have been reported in the area. Pictures of the damage were taken, police said.

Dog struck

At 3:37 p.m. on Thursday (Jan. 21), Cohasset dispatch received a call from a resident of Cushing Road reporting that a green Volvo with a grey bottom had just struck his dog at the end of his driveway. Caller was unable to get a license plate. Responding officers were unable to locate a vehicle matching the caller's description. The caller took the dog to a local vet with minor injuries, and he and his dog were back home the same day. The hit and run is under investigation by Cohasset police, and anyone with information is urged to call police at 781-383-1212.

Geese

At 7:38 a.m. on Friday (Jan. 22), Cohasset dispatch received a call from a resident of Lamberts Lane, reporting gunshots in the area. The manager of the Cohasset Golf Club had called earlier and informed dispatch that hunters would be on their property using shotgun blanks to scare the geese off the course. The caller was advised of this.

Hummel

At 11:47 a.m. on Saturday (Jan. 23), a 52-year-old Cohasset resident entered police headquarters to turn over property found in her 21-year-old son's vehicle, which had been parked on Hatherly Road in Scituate.

She went to recover the car from the address in Scituate and discovered a Hummel figurine in her son's vehicle. She could not identify the figurine, and wanted to turn it over to police. The item was placed in safekeeping and detectives are trying to locate the owner. Anyone missing a Hummel figurine or has information can call Det. Hunt, 781-383-1212.

School addresses leveling issue

Open forum on subject Feb. 2

"At CMHS, our courses are leveled, students are not."
— Principal Joel Antolini

Information has been circulated about the possibility of classes at the middle-high school being "de-leveled," meaning combining college prep level with honors level in one classroom. The issue came up during the communications portion of the Jan. 20 School Committee meeting.

Last week, the Mariner had a commentary "College prep/honors classes should not be combined" from two parents citing their concerns over the possibility of de-leveling classes at the high school.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini has written a letter to set the record straight on what is going on with scheduling and leveling at the high school level. The letter was mailed to all parents of Middle-High School students this week and is currently posted on the high school's website.

To view the complete text of Antolini's letter, go to www.cohassetk12.org, click on "Cohasset High School" from the school drop down menu and scroll down to view the letter under "School Announcements."

"At CMHS, our courses are leveled, students are not," Antolini writes. "It is customary for individual students to choose courses from various curriculum areas at different levels."

Many courses, due to student interest, enrollment, and staff availability, are offered at different levels but at the same time, with the same teacher, in the same classroom, Antolini said. In these instances, teachers differentiate instruction to ensure all students are appropriately challenged by the curriculum and reach their full potential.

Next year, the high school will begin to make every effort to ensure students take at least one heterogeneous class in each curriculum area over the course of four years, Antolini said. This effort is an indicator for one of the seven standards of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC). The high school will undergo re-accreditation by NEASC in the 2011-2012 school year.

In a phone interview, School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy said ensuring each student is challenged and has the opportunity and access to be challenged is a key part of the district's mission and vision statement.

"The promotion of equity in all students is a goal," MacCarthy said.

To further address parent questions, an open forum will be held at the Middle-High School library on Tuesday, Feb. 2 at 7p.m. The topics include scheduling courses for 2010-2011, requirements for certain academic levels, heterogeneous groupings, NEASC Accreditation Standards, and school and district goals and initiatives.

Town-wide H1N1 flu clinic Feb. 2

A second town-wide H1N1 flu vaccination clinic will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 2 from 6 to 8p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium. Anybody over age 9 is eligible and ample vaccine is available.

If residents have yet to receive the seasonal flu vaccination that will be available as well. Both vaccines are inactive and can be given at the same time.

measures in order to bring a balanced budget before Town Meeting. Given that more than 70 percent of the school's budget is salaries and contract obligations, school representatives said there were only a few areas where they could look to cut expenditures or raise revenue.

Increasing fees for bus service and athletics, reducing bus service to only what is federally mandated, and augmenting the recycling program are a few of the ideas.

What could potentially bring significant savings in the budget is returning to a traditional class schedule. The savings would come from reducing high school staff by 10 positions, which translates to an estimated $500,000. However, unemployment costs would need to be factored in.

When Cohasset High first switched to a block-scheduling model, which is four 90-minute periods as opposed to the more traditional seven 45-minute periods, it was negotiated with the Cohasset Teachers' Association.

According to Superintendent Denise Walsh, in the contract teachers are required to teach three out of four periods three days a week, the other two days they only have two blocks to teach. In a more traditional scheduling setting, teachers taught five classes a day and were assigned lunch or study hall at other times.

Members of the School Committee and Superintendent Walsh said there were educational advantages to block scheduling. Walsh said it provides the students with the opportunity to take 10 classes every year, as opposed to five in traditional scheduling. The longer class periods allow student to delve deeper into the material.

"That's an advantage this superintendent would never recommend against," Walsh said.

School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz said for him doing away with block scheduling would impact the classroom, something he felt was a last resort.

"It impacts at the heart of what we do (academics)...and would involve collective bargaining in a big way on a contract we just settled," Slanetz said.

In the bigger picture – and more long-term – Capital Budget Committee chair Steve Gaumer said the town, and Cohasset was not alone in this issue, needs to look at changing schools' cost structure. The largest cost center – making up just under three-quarters of the budget – is salaries.

"You have a cost structure that doesn't work," Gaumer said, adding the issue wasn't just a Cohasset issue, it was a widespread across nearly all municipalities.

Advisory Committee member Sam Wakeman agreed, "the only way to have significant change in the school district (budget) is to completely re-negotiate the teachers' contract."

However, an effort like that would not be able to accomplished by July 1, 2010, when fiscal 2011 begins, Wakeman said to bring the discussion back to the more immediate future.

An override scenario was not discussed in detail, but Wakeman said if there was to be an override proposal, information needed to be presented.

"If we are going to make any case for an override we're going to need to set out the options," Wakeman said and make clear what services would be cut if the town lives without an override.

While much discussion centered around the schools, Selectman Karen Quigley said committee members needed to keep in mind the budget issues are facing the whole town, not just the schools.

"There is a history of sacrifice on the town side and the pain has to be shared (between the school and town sides of the budget)," Quigley said. She also reminded the group that property taxes are not the only factors to consider. Both the water and sewer departments intend to seek rate increases in the next year, as well as a large capital request to overhaul the water treatment plant, Quigley said.

"The big picture of things is something that has to be looked at," Quigley said.

On the town side of the budget, Town Manager Bill Griffin asked all town department heads to develop a level-funded budget and give thought to how, if necessary, as much as 5 percent could be eliminated from that number.

The result is a draft budget that is "very, very tight," Griffin said.

"We're not going to have any slack at all (in the budget). We better hope it doesn't snow," Wakeman said.

The School Committee will continue its discussion on its budget at their meeting next Wednesday, Feb. 3. The final budget hearing where the fiscal 2011 budget is certified is Wednesday, March 3.

The Budget Planning Group is scheduled to meet again on Thursday, February 11.

Two citizens' petitions come forward

Override proposed to pay for half of Little Harbor sewer

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"If there are other sewer projects in the future, will they get the 50/50 split?"
— Alex Koines,
380 Atlantic Ave.

Cohasset will be considering two citizens' petitions at the upcoming Annual Town Meeting (March 27). One involves a debt exclusion override request to help pay for the near-complete Little Harbor sewer project. The other requests funds dedicated to the Beechwood area be transferred to a new non-profit to ensure the care and upkeep of the Beechwood recreational area.

Both citizens' petitions were submitted to the town by the Jan. 11 deadline and must be included on the warrant. There will be more discussed in the coming month as the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee review the petitions.

In recent history, sewer expansion projects have been paid through in a 50/50 split between the benefiting residents and the whole town. The North Cohasset and Central district sewer expansions were done this way. However, according to a vote taken at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting, the cost of the largest sewer expansion project, involving 487 homes in Little Harbor, is being 100 percent borne by the benefiting residents.

A citizens' petition on the warrant for the March 27 Annual Town Meeting, if approved, could change that.

A group of residents has submitted an article to see if the town will take on 50 percent of the Little Harbor sewer expansion, which in total is about $13-million plus interest. The area residents would pay the other 50 percent.

The proponent, Alexander Koines of 380 Atlantic Ave., one of the homes benefiting from the Little Harbor sewer project, said the article is about fairness.

"I don't think it's right, a precedent has been set," for the 50/50 split between the town and benefiting residents, said Koines. "If there are other sewer projects in the future, will they get the 50/50 split? The danger is in having a whole lot of different mixes," Koines said in a phone interview. "I want all sewer projects to be 50/50."

The article will require a debt-exclusion override. The article will need to get an approval vote from Town Meeting, and approval at the ballot box two weeks later.

"We're trying to get it changed, I'm not sure how successful we'll be," he said. "Normally I don't like overrides, it's contrary to my philosophy, but this is about fairness."

A second citizens' petition was filed in regard to the Beechwood Ballpark and recreational area. The article requests Town Meeting to authorize a transfer from the Beechwood Improvement Association Fund account, which currently has $11,860 in it, to a new organization, Beechwood Area Recreation Association.

Proponent John Cavanaro of Arrowwood Street said the funds have not been used in many years and the idea to create a new non-profit to take responsibility for the funds and maintaining the Beechwood recreational complex.

"The Beechwood Ballpark is really such a wonderful asset and we want to create some longevity and ensure it is given the attention is deserves," Cavanaro said. "We're trying to keep the field up and keep the facility up."

The new group, the Beechwood Area Recreation Association, will be a registered non-profit, Cavanaro said.

According to Jacqueline Dormitzer's "Narrative History of Cohasset, 1950 – 2000, Volume III" when the Beechwood Improvement Association dismantled in the late 1970s about $4,000 was given to the town, under the auspices of the Recreation Department, to be used "for the perpetual benefit of youth from the Beechwood neighborhood."

Meals and hotel tax could make it on warrant

Last year, the state gave municipalities the option to impose an excise tax on hotel rooms up to 6 percent and a 0.75 percent tax on the sale of restaurant meals. The additional revenue could support the town's operational budget.

But, local businesses see the additional tax as an unfair burden on their small business and their customers.

Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's Home Presence and president of the Chamber of Commerce, came to speak on behalf of many of the food purveyors in town. She had personally spoken to nearly all the restaurants in town.

"They are absolutely not in favor of this (tax) at all. Business in 2009 has been extremely tough," Evans said. "These small businesses cannot afford to lose any customers."

The Board of Selectmen considered placing the hotel and meals tax option on the November Special Town Meeting warrant, but ultimately took no action in consideration of the economic climate for residents and businesses. It was not the right time they said back in October. The Selectmen will again take up the option in February. If placed on the warrant, Town Meeting will have the ultimate say on whether to impose the local tax option.

The tax could translate into real revenue estimated to be more than $100,000. According to projections presented to the Selectmen last fall, the Department of Revenue figures that each one percent rooms tax would generate approximately $12,000 per year for the town.

Jennifer Warshaw, owner of 5 South Main and Cohasset Confectionary Company, also was in attendance to speak against the imposing a meals tax. Warsaw said local businesses serve a variety of customers of a variety of economic means.

"You don't think people would, but people fuss all the time (over their check). They notice everything," Warsaw said. She feared her regular customers might consider cutting back or choose to frequent other restaurants in bordering towns that do not have the additional tax.

Ed Lappen, budget planning group and Advisory Committee member, said he believed the deciding variable was not the extra 0.75 percent on a check, but the overall dining experience.

"The incremental increase of the cost of a meal is more than overridden by your stellar reputation," Lappen said.

There was also an argument presented of equity – the hotel and meals tax places a burden on a few.

"If we're looking at being equitable, we need an override," suggested Paul Schubert, school committee member.

Lappen said the hotel and meals tax is only one effort in a multi-faceted approach to balance the budget, "there's lots of little pieces."

Cohasset previously adopted a 4 percent room occupancy (hotel) tax in 1989, but it was revoked at the next Town Meeting. On the South Shore, Braintree has adopted a 6 percent rooms tax, while Quincy, Weymouth, Hull, Marshfield, Kingston and Plymouth have imposed a 4 percent rooms tax for many years. All municipalities on Cape Cod and Martha's Vineyard impose a 4 percent rooms tax, while Nantucket recently voted to impose the maximum 6 percent tax.

Leland Jenkins to run for Selectman

No candidates for School Committee yet

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I feel common-sense management is needed in this town in the way we provide services."
— Leland Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road

More citizens have pulled papers to seek election to town positions, but so far no races have emerged.

Notably, no candidates have come forward to run for the School Committee as of yet. Citizens have until Feb. 18 to take out nomination papers.

On Thursday morning, Leland Jenkins of 198 Jerusalem Road took out papers for one of two seats on the Board of Selectmen on Thursday morning.

"I feel common-sense management is needed in this town in the way we provide services. We have a financial responsibility to constantly work at that," Jenkins said in a phone interview. Many seniors in town living on fixed incomes don't have the ability to pay for the rising cost of town services and the town has to keep all its residents in mind when it comes to budgetary decisions, he said.

Jenkins previously served on the Advisory Committee for six years and is an engineer by trade. On a personal note, he described himself as a "penny pincher" and will bring that attitude to the Board of Selectmen.

Three other citizens stopped by the Town Clerk's office this week to pick up nomination papers.

Nathaniel Palmer of 9 Little Harbor Road, who currently sits on the Water Commission, has taken out nomination paper to retain his seat.

Helen "Taffy" Nothnagle of 36 Atlantic Ave. has pulled papers to run for the Housing Authority. She has served on the committee as the Governor's appointee for the past seven years.

William Hannon of 79 Linden Drive has taken out nomination papers for the new associate member position on the Planning Board. The associate member will sit in and possibly vote on special permit applications. The position is for a three-year term.

Long-time member of the Board of Health, Steve Bobo of 292 Jerusalem Road, has indicated his intention to seek re-election to his post.

Nomination papers for the annual Town Election for 2010 became available on Thursday, Jan. 7. Citizens have until Feb. 18 to return their papers to the Town Clerk's office.

In order to hold an elected office, one must be a registered voter of the town. Citizens are not running for office until they take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies signatures.

Incumbent candidate Paul Carlson for Selectmen has returned his nomination papers to the clerk's office. He is seeking one of two seats on the Board of Selectmen; no one has come forward to seek the second seat.

Sankey Road resident Stuart Ivimey pulled nomination papers to seek re-election to his seat on the Planning Board.

Abigail Alves and Andrew Quigley have taken out papers for seats on the Recreation Commission. Alves, who is running for re-election, is seeking the five-year term. Quigley was appointed to the Recreation Commission in 2009 and is running for a one-year seat to complete an unexpired term.

A newcomer to the Library Trustees, Henry Rattenbury, took out papers to seek one of three three-year terms on that board.

James Dow pulled papers for a three-year term on the Sewer Commission. Sean Cunning, who currently holds that seat, is not seeking re-election. Dow ran for Sewer Commission two years ago and lost to sitting sewer commissioner Wayne Sawchuk.

Positions available for the 2010 Town Election

- Selectmen – Two for three years
- School Committee – Two for three years
- Trustees Paul Pratt Memorial Library – Three for three years
- Assessor – One for three years
- Board of Health – One for three years
- Cohasset Housing Authority – One for five years
- Planning Board – One for five years
- Planning Board Associate Member – One for three years
- Recreation Commission – One for five years
- Recreation Commission – One for one year to fill an unexpired term
- Sewer Commission – One for three years
- Water Commission – One for three years

Friday, March 5, 2009 is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting to be held on Saturday, March 27, 2010 and for the Annual Town Election to be held on Saturday, April 10, 2010.

Cohasset Plaza proposes expansion

New 30,000 square foot building on site

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If a project currently before the planning board it approved, it could give a whole new look – and increase shopping options – for Route 3A's Cohasset Plaza.

The application for a 30,000-square-foot building located to the rear of the property between the other two already-built buildings is currently before the planning board for a site plan review.

On Wednesday, Jan. 20 the applicant gave a broad overview of what was being proposed.

There are currently no specific tenants for the proposed building.

"(The property owner) is looking to provide a larger space than currently available in the existing buildings," said Charles Humphreys, attorney for the applicant Cohasset Associates. "It is not likely there will be a single tenant, it is more likely there will be multiple larger tenants."

The plaza, which currently has two large buildings at either end of the site, is home to Stop & Shop, Feng Shui, Papa Gino's, Blockbuster and others.

Jack O'Leary of Merrill Associates, the project's site engineer, reviewed the basic engineering for the site. The building itself will be situated half on what is currently pavement and half on a landscaped portion of the site. Additional walkways, crosswalks and parking will be added to help integrate the new building into the existing plaza.

O'Leary said the construction of the building does require some relocation of the utility buildings and affects some parking spaces. The parking in front of the proposed building will be re-configured to be more accessible.

However, there was some confusion on the parking requirements.

The planning board approved the existing plaza in two phases, and it was currently unclear whether this third phase reopens the entire site and requires it to conform to current zoning regulations.

A new septic system is proposed behind the building. The Board of Health already approved a version of this septic system, O'Leary said, but it would need to be updated.

The project is also currently working with the Conservation Commission to obtain a stormwater permit.

Planning Board chair Al Moore suggested the applicant get a lot of the other permitting behind them before getting too far into the planning board's review.

"We've chosen to take care of the stormwater with a sub-surface system," O'Leary said.

Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey suggested the applicant look at incorporating alternative energy opportunities, like solar panels, for the building if possible.

Clark Brewer, planning board member, asked what the status of the architectural drawings for the building was. The current plans just show a rectangular 300-foot by 10-foot building. Humphreys indicated they would be forthcoming and could be tailored to the future tenant.

Planning Board member Jean Healey Dippold said she would like to make sure the abutting residential area is well protected. The under construction Cook Estate is the abutting residential property.

The project will have a second public hearing on Wednesday, Feb. 17 at 7:30p.m.

Town Meeting, election dates set

Annual Town Meeting will take place on Saturday, March 27 at 9a.m. In light of the fact the following weekend is the Easter holiday, the annual town election be held two weeks later on Saturday, April 10. Candidates have until Feb. 18 to return nomination papers to the Town Clerk's Office.

Angel Discussion is Feb. 2

Have you or someone that you know had an encounter with an angel? Angels are part of the spiritual belief systems of many of the world religions, but do angels have relevance for us in the 21st Century?

If you have had an experience that you would like to share, or you are curious about the topic, please join us at the Second Congregational Church on Tues. Feb. 2nd at 7:30 in Bates Hall.

We will be featuring the book "The Everything Guide to Angels" written by Karen Paolino of Abington . Copies of the book will be on sale that evening as well.

AROUND TOWN
JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

BYE, JANUARY

Hello Cohasset. I cannot believe it but this is the last column for January 2010. I wonder whether or not the Groundhog will see its shadow next week on Groundhog's Day? I think we have had a lot Winter so far, a few more weeks may be ok as long as it is not TOO cold! Of course, I have no problem with an early Spring either. Time will tell!

PAJAMA DRIVE

Here is a good news story to share with us all! We have a Girl Scout Troop here in town, Troop 74812 who has decided to hold a PJ (pajamas) Drive for Cradles To Crayons for local kiddos in communities around the area who are in need of a warm, cozy pair of jammies!

A collection box will be in the Deer Hill School, Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, the South Shore Community Center and St. Anthony's Parish Center. The goal for this venture is to come together with The Boston Bruins Annual PJ drive in working to collect 15,000 pairs of pajamas for local children.

The school that collects the most pairs of pajamas receives an ice cream party with the Bruins mascot Blades, compliments of BJ's Wholesale Club. Other prizes include Boston Bruins hockey pucks, and a school participation plaque. The pajamas should be new, or in like-new condition. Please use good judgment when considering which jammies to share.

The collection will begin today, Friday, Jan. 29th and the deadline for this wonderful effort is Friday, Feb. 12th! We can all help with this very worthwhile community effort. Thank you in advance to Dagny Nies and the rest of this very caring troop in organizing it all. If you don't have time to drop off pajamas or need to have them picked up, please call Mary at 781-383-6501 or Andrea at 781-383-9791 and the troop will come to your home.

LANGUAGE LABS

Have you seen the sign and heard the news about the Cohasset Education Foundation's campaign to fund two new language Labs for the Middle and High School? GREAT NEWS!! Because of generous support the High School Lab has been fully funded. Efforts are now underway to complete funding for the Middle School Lab. Please consider making a donation—we're looking for 100 percent participation! For more information about the Campaign for the Language Labs please visit www.cohasseteducation.org

SHELTER BENEFIT

Mark your calendars for WinterFest Beer and Wine Tasting event! On Saturday, Feb. 13 from 7 to 10 pm., the beautiful Hatherly Country Club will host "Winter-Fest", featuring red and white wine selection, seasonal beers, gourmet food pairings and live and silent auction. Tickets are $50 and can be purchased online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org , in person at the Shelter during public visiting hours, or by telephone order with Visa or Mastercard at (781) 544-4533. Advanced ticket purchase is recommended; tickets may not be available for purchase at the door. All proceeds from this event will support the exceptional care of the animals at the Scituate Animal Shelter. The Scituate Animal Shelter is a non-profit, no-kill animal shelter proudly serving the greater South Shore region...The Lucky Ones Come To Us!

TOILETRIES SOUGHT

The Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club is hosting their first Toiletry Drive to benefit The Helping Hands Essentials Pantry. The pantry in Quincy provides basic personal care items to those in need on the South Shore. The items should be full and in new condition. Let's work together and make a world of difference to families in need. Items needed most are: - laundry and dish soap- bath soap, hand sanitizer, hand soap dispensers- diapers- all sizes, baby wipes, baby lotions- toilet paper, tissues, paper towels shampoo, conditioner for adults & babies

Start collecting your items now and drop them off anytime (Tuesday - Friday) at Our World Museum in Cohasset, located behind the Library or we may be able to pick up at your home. Let's start off 2010 by helping others with our extras or pick up a few things on sale on your next trip to the market. Early in February, the items will be brought to the panty in Quincy. Please contact Kim Carvette: kim@thecarvettes.org or Beth Golden: beth_desimone@hotmail.com for any questions or to arrange a pickup.

That is the news for the end of January 2010. Please send in all of your news for the first week of February to me no later than Tuesday by 5 pm in one of the following ways.

Kodak and Jasper, two adult male Tuxedo Cats, are a little on the shy side.

Tuxedo cats have learned to trust

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Kodak and Jasper, two adult male Tuxedo Cats. They were rescued as kittens and spent much of their time hiding. For the longest time they would run away when approached. In the past year or so they have come to trust humans. They are friendly with other felines. They have never scratched or bitten anyone and will run from an aggressive cat. They do not care to be picked up and this could create a problem. We don't even know if we could get them in a carrier should someone decide to give them a home. If you're a true animal person and would like to visit these guys, please check out the videos of them on www.hsar.org. They adore one another and we would never separate them. Think about it and if you'd like to meet them or any of our felines give Shirl a call at 781-925-3380.

To schedule a place on the shelter's low-cost spay neuter van on Monday, Feb. 8, click on www.hsar.org and scroll down to the bottom in order to register your rewards card at Shaw's.

Open hours are 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays; and 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays. To leave a message, call 877-378-1195; physical address, 50 L St., Hull; mailing address, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. Visit the website at www.hsar.org to check out the many available felines. To become a member, call Mary at 781 925 3121 for details.

Community Center dedicates computer room to Tolman

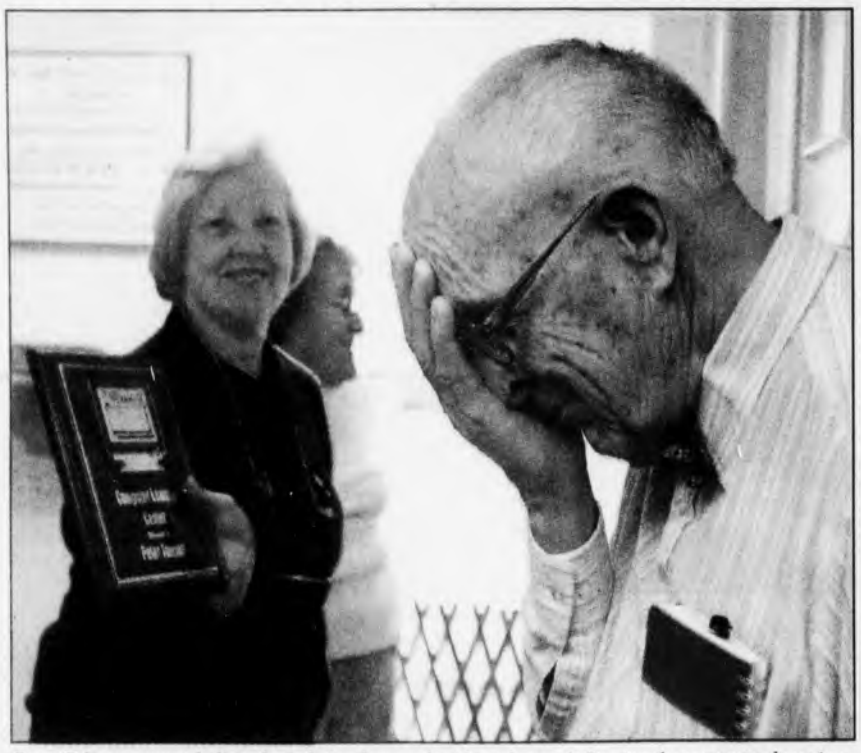
The computer room was one his most recent projects and has made a lasting impact on the Community Center.

Last summer, the computer room, which was once an oversized closet, was transformed into a highly useable and well-trafficked space.

The counter and streamlined equipment (flat screen monitors versus the old bulky monitors) have allowed the computer room to have nine computers, as opposed to four.



Three times a week children from the nursery school come upstairs to use the technology. Seniors have learned how to use the internet and summer programs have utilized the space.

Tolman ordered, fabricated and installed the counter where the computers not sit. The absence of table legs made the space more user-friendly.

"The work he did in the computer room really brought it into the 21st century," said Stephanie Church, director of the South Shore Community Center.

Tolman spent his career as a master electrician, a distinction he has kept up in his retirement.

"I've always done maintenance and construction work, whatever I could find. When I took this job I said I would do anything (they) asked of me, except paint," Tolman said with a laugh, explaining he usually makes a mess when paint is involved.

Peter Tolman cannot believe he is being honored with a plaque dedicating the computer learning center in his name at a surprise ceremony at the South Shore Community Center on Tuesday.

Paula Murphy hugs Peter Tolman during the dedication ceremony. They have worked together over the past 5 years to improve the computer learning center. They have installed new counters, rewired the room, and are getting flat screen monitors for all the computers.

"I've just got to have something to do all the time, so it was ideal to come work for the Community Center," Tolman said.

Tolman said he was honored by the room's dedication, "I was just doing what I like to do – keeping out of trouble."

Nearly every weekday Tolman stops by or calls to see if the community center needs him. Even on holidays he sometimes works because it is a rare day when the community center is empty. He does maintenance work for the apartments upstairs, the nursery school and occasionally the senior center space.

"This building needs a lot of maintenance," Tolman said, mainly because of its age and its high use.

Tolman has lived in Cohasset since 1976 in the same house on Blackhorse Lane. His wife, Connie, grew up in Cohasset.

Before Tolman took the job at the community center, he had little idea of what was offered here. Now, he thinks the bowling alley, with its four lanes, is one of the town's best kept secrets.

"We wanted him to know how important he is to the community center and how appreciative we are for all he does," Church said. "He is a vital part of what we do here."

But, for Tolman, he has just been doing his job, "I look forward to coming down here and looking around for something to do."

Cohasset Reads Together

Familiar author's book featured

COURTESY PHOTO

Tracy Kidder.

The 2010 Cohasset Reads Together selection, "Mountains Beyond Mountains" by Tracy Kidder, is both a tribute to the efforts of Paul Farmer to eradicate preventable disease in Haiti and a montage of a culture, dense in both despair and hope in 2003 when the book was published. Today, the news reports pouring out of Haiti render commentary trivial, but many points of light rise up and out from this devastation: One light shows the Haitian people, many who lost family and friends, laboring tirelessly to save the lives of others, and another reveals the selfless volunteers from around the world who continue to work with courage, endurance and dedication as the race against time quickens. These volunteers mirror the same force that drives Paul Farmer's commitment to his cause, one that would ensure all humanity the right to health.

Cohasset residents are familiar with author Tracy Kidder. Last November, 500 people gathered for his presentation of his most recent book, "Strength in What Remains," so readers will feel like they are visiting an old friend in "Mountains Beyond Mountains." The voice is the same – quiet and unobtrusive. The Cohasset Reads Together program finds its purpose in the spirit of community, kinship as people come together to exchange ideas and discover something new about themselves, about others. So people are urged to read "Mountains Beyond Mountains" and talk about it! The library has multiple copies on hand for lending and Buttonwood Books has copies for sale.

Following are Cohasset Reads Together programs. All programs will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library:

• Wednesday, Feb. 10, 10:30 a.m. Book discussion of "Mountains Beyond Mountains."

• Thursday, Feb. 11, 7 p.m. Film "Poto Mitan" followed by discussion.

• Thursday, Feb. 25, 7 p.m. Cohasset residents discuss their volunteer commitments in Haiti: Dr. Paul Cotter on medicine and surgery, and Jim Graham on water projects.

• Sunday, March 7, 4 p.m. Paul Farmer's colleague, Ali Lutz, will speak about "Mountains Beyond Mountains" and Farmer's ongoing work in Haiti and beyond.

Once again the Cohasset schools' Read-A-Thon will be part of the community reading program. The books in kindergarten through grade five were selected for their relevance to the theme of "one person can make a difference." "Give a Goat" by Jan Schrock is about a class of fifth graders who pull together and raise funds to give a goat to a girl in Uganda and how that changes her life and those around her; "Ryan and Jimmy" is the story of a well in Uganda that brings two boys together. The Friends of Paul Pratt Memorial Library have purchased class copies of both books.

From past and future also.
For most of us, this is the aim
Never here to be realized;
Who are only undefeated
Because we have gone on trying"
— T.S. Eliot, "The Dry Salvages"
(Frontispiece, "Mountains Beyond Mountains.")

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Election poll

Those readers who are regular visitors to the Cohasset Mariner Web site (www.wickedlocalcohasset.com), will have seen our redesign unveiled Monday.

Like any change, the redesign may take some getting used to. There are more categories and the "homepage" is deeper than before.

One of the new features that we think will be very useful and possibly enlightening is our poll feature. We now have the ability to conduct polls as often as we want.

The polls are not scientific. It is possible to vote more than once if you have access to different computers.

But we think the polls can help provide a gauge of how our Web visitors are thinking about certain issues.

This week we have posted a poll about why so few Cohasset residents run for elected office.

The poll question and the possible answers are:

Candidates have been few and far between in the last three town elections. What's your take on why?

- People are too busy.
- People don't care.
- Elected officials are doing a great job.
- Issues too complicated.
- Don't want to be involved.
- Other.

You can vote by visiting: www.wickedlocalcohasset.com

The poll is on the lower right of the homepage. Keep scrolling down and you will find it.

With the Town Election around the corner and nominations papers still available at the Town Clerk's office for a range of offices — we thought a poll on the subject would be a good idea.

We have had some feedback and readers are welcome to leave a comment on the web site ("Poll Comments Welcome") or via email to Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com

Several readers have suggested that past elections got rather nasty and therefore, some potential candidates may not want to throw their hats into the ring. We did not think of that when drafting the poll answers and suspect those votes fall under "other."

We will publish results in next week's Cohasset Mariner.

We welcome ideas for new polls. Please email your thoughts to editor Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com

In the meantime, please vote in our election poll and check out our newly designed Web site.

Let us know your thoughts!

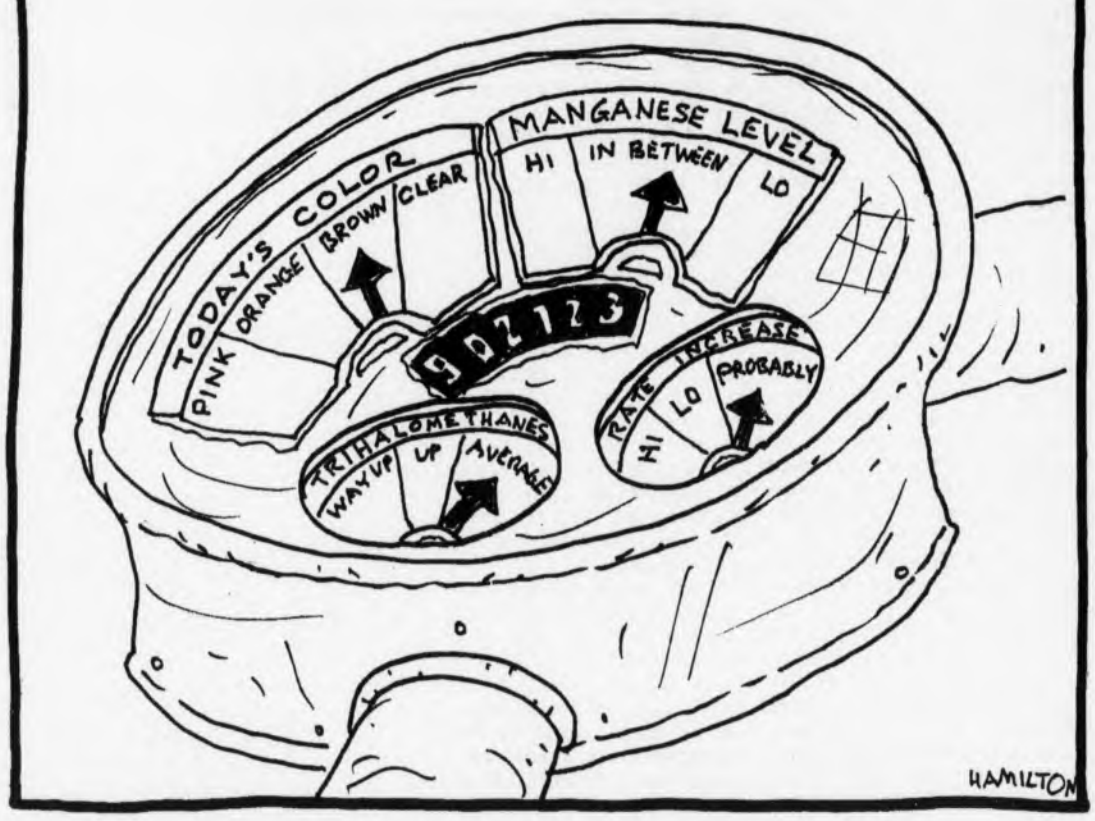
Town census for 2010



The Town Census for 2010 will be mailed to each household within the next several weeks. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through December 31, 2010. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible with a current rabies certificate although you may have recently renewed your 2009 license.

In addition to the census form, enclosed will be an informational form from the Veterans' Agent for veterans and their surviving spouse.

If you did not receive your census, please contact the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

Cell phone reception lacking

TO THE EDITOR:

Isn't it amazing that in this day of technology one would have to drive to a police station to report an accident for lack of cell service?

Next we will be reading about driving oneself to the hospital because of no cell phone service to call for an ambulance.

Perhaps a knock on a neighborhood door of someone who could help, and perhaps plaques could be posted on homes that would be available to help in no service areas.

I know both guests and trades people have difficulty using their cell phones in a reliable manner here on Gammons Road, which also poses a safety issue when we assume a cell phone service is always available.

What happened to that committee that was working on solving this problem for many areas of Cohasset?

I hope someone can answer my question.

Upset over flag maintenance

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to express my disgust at the way the new flag at Mariner's Park is being (not being is more like it) maintained. Initially the pole was flying the flag for Veolia water as well as the American flag. This in spite of the Board of Selectmen stating that only the American flag would be allowed. The proponents agreed to this stipulation.

The "new" flag that is there was put up around Thanksgiving. The flag is shredded, the weight that should be on it is on the ground. The flag was at half-staff during the Ft Hood period of mourning, and stayed at half-staff for a couple weeks afterwards as well. The flag flies 24 hours a day, even though it's not lighted.

This is yet another example of promises made, but not kept by the lessees of the property. The current flag is a disgrace. People have served, and died for that flag, and to see it mistreated the way it is, makes my blood boil. There seems to be a reluctance to address any problems at Mariner's Park on the part of the BOS, and this needs to stop. A good place to start would be to address the issue of the flag being desecrated in the manner it currently is. I am insisting that whoever is supposed to maintain the flag, start doing so, including raising and lowering it. If that is too much too ask, I suggest that the pole be removed entirely. To allow this mistreatment to continue is unacceptable. A flag suitable for outdoor use should be put up immediately.

Post Script — The flag has been taken down at this time. I understand Tom Wigmore discussed the proper way to fly the flag with the people who are going to maintain the flag. I hope that the flag will be treated properly in the future.

Sailing team, young sailors supported

TO THE EDITOR:

I was proud of our young Cohasset sailors, Morgan McCarthy and Danielle Sookiasian, who so eloquently articulated their belief in a Cohasset High School sailing team (Commentary, page 15. Jan. 22, 2010). I couldn't agree with them more, as a sailor, as the Vice Commodore of the Cohasset Sailing Club, as a psychologist, and as a parent. Perhaps Cohasset's greatest asset is our access to the ocean and the wonderful opportunities it offers for athletic endeavor and appreciation of nature. Sailing is a fantastic way to enjoy this wonderful resource. Sailing teaches you how to combine physics and engineering with sheer nerve to harness the natural elements of wind and water. As Danielle states, "I have received a sense of independence from sailing, and the feeling that I can accomplish anything I desire. Knowing that you are moving through the water using the force of the wind, and doing it all on your own skills that you have learned is an incredible feeling." Sailors who race know there is nothing more exciting, satisfying and mentally and physically challenging than competing in a sail boat race.

Not all children want to play traditional sports. Sailing may help some students blossom athletically in a way that they never would have, or would have avoided traditional sports all together. An argument that a sailing team would take players away from other sports teams seems like an odd argument (i.e. let's not offer Spanish it might take students away from French) and deprives those students an athletic opportunity they might not otherwise have. At an elite level, those students who may want to compete at a collegiate or even a national level would be well served by an opportunity to sail for their high school team.

Many towns have baseball fields, football fields, and basketball courts, but how many towns have access to the ocean? How many towns have a wealth of adult sailors who could support a high school sailing team? How many towns' high school sports teams are called the Skippers? Our high school is represented by a Skipper – a captain of a sailing vessel. What could make more sense or give us more reason to cheer than our very own high school sailing team!

Wednesday speakers have been super

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

It's been nice to have a couple of these warm days in the midst of winter. But who knows? By the time this goes to print, we may be knee-deep in snow again. However, have you noticed that the daylight hours are growing a little longer? We'll soon be looking toward spring again.

Our class in memoir writing has had its last session, and some of the participants are hoping to have another, perhaps in the spring.

This past month we've had two interesting Wednesday speakers. Sandra Hedges spoke about hoarding. She gave examples of what people collect and how it gets out of hand. She explained some of the reasons for hoarding, some of the dangers, and where to get help in letting things go.

On Jan, 23 we listened to Rosemarie Engel-Conn, a Cohasset resident, as she give a gripping account of the bombing and destruction of Dresden, Germany, just two months before the end of the war in Germany. Rosemarie was just a girl of 17 and working in a munitions factory just outside of Dresden at the time. She gave a vivid description of what it was like, her feelings, and how she and others escaped from the city to Leipzig,

HEALTH NOTES

AEDs, training can save lives

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

An AED is a device used to administer an electric shock through the chest wall to the heart when a person has a life threatening heart related problem

Health Notes has been requested to assist in a project for a Cohasset resident engaged in support of a program Health Notes described several years ago for providing AEDs (automated external defibrillators) for emergency personnel in our Fire Department. This year, a student currently in Cohasset's school system is seeking to achieve an important award in her Scouting program and has furnished material that provides an updated review of the CPR capability in the possession of many of Cohasset's public servants and to others wishing to learn to use the equipment.

According to the American Heart Association, around 250,000 people die of cardiac arrest per year. For every minute that passes after an event, the chances of survival decreases by 7 to 10 percent. To that end, the Board of Health has supported the addition of AEDs in emergency vehicles and in heavy use areas around town such as Town Hall.

An AED is a device used to administer an electric shock through the chest wall to the heart when a person has a life threatening heart related problem. AEDs are now present in every emergency vehicle in town, and have been placed in selected sites, including schools, the library, the Harbormaster's boat and selected businesses such as Hingham Lumber, which also bought the devices and have been trained in their use. Naturally they can be found at Town Hall. An AED will be installed in the near future at the DEP facilities at the RTF. Staff near these sites will be trained in their use. This program is an important defense against cardiac arrest in the community.

The AED system reads a victim's heart rhythm and automatically delivers a shock to regulate the heart when necessary. Built-in audio and visual guides help a responder administering the shock. Although Cohasset's emergency personnel (police, fire, medical, etc.) have been trained in CPR and the use of AEDs, it is only recently that a system of layperson training, operation and maintenance has been initiated.

According to the American Heart Association, having more people in the community who can respond to a medical emergency by providing defibrillation greatly increases sudden cardiac arrest survival rates. Training for AED now occurs in conjunction with CPR training. Students learn procedures for proper and safe use of the AED and are trained to ensure that vital steps in the resuscitation process are not missed. For example, it is necessary for the subject to be clear of dangerous materials, wires, manhole covers that may inadvertently have been electrified. A trained civilian responder becomes the leader of a team that performs a number of functions. In addition to performing CPR, the responder points out and instructs bystanders to call for help (911).

The machine completes all calculations, senses the need for shock and applies the proper shock at the right time. Training on the use of an AED is accompanied by several pictorial aids such as descriptions of the chest paddles and methods for placing the paddles on the victim. Verbal instructions given by the self-contained machine make application of a resuscitating shock foolproof and easy.

A story recently appeared in the media concerning a skater at a Hingham rink whose life was saved by individuals trained in CPR and an AED. The Board of Health encourages residents of Cohasset to learn this vital skill. CPR/AED training will be offered through the Recreation Department to adults periodically. Please contact them at Town Hall for time and place. Participants will receive a two-year certification. In all, training requires about four hours. The fee is $48.

COMMENTARY

JOHN NESTEL

I challenge the Republicans to change course and create fresh ideas that have a chance to help America become better.

We the people have become accustomed to fast food, fast information, fast banking and the list is endless. What we have come to expect unfairly is fast solutions to major economic and international problems that we and our leaders have been complicit in creating. The preceding administration left America in a war that has not only cost $1 trillion in taxpayer money but killed many brave Americans and physically and mentally maimed more than 30,000 more. A war that had little to do with terrorism but more to do with nation building and an agenda of inept strategy, failed international relations, paranoia and crises management following 9/11.

This failure was compounded by a weak domestic policy that refused to regulate our banking system and caused the collapse of some of the worlds largest institutions (Lehman Brothers, Merrill Lynch & AIG). Billions in taxpayer bailout money and retirement funds being reduced to half or less while the economy was plunged into recession. A feeble stimulus by the Bush Administration of tax rebate checks that had as much of a chance to solve the crises as a sugar pill will heal an ailment. An auto industry that saw three of the largest corporate icons (GM, Chrysler and Ford) come to Washington on the verge of bankruptcy looking for handouts. Unemployment that soared into double digits and a real estate industry reduced to foreclosures, evictions and government bailout of Fannie and Freddie Mac.

These are undisputed facts brought about by a Republican philosophy and Bush Administration that ignored logic and common sense while clinging to archaic ideology and economic philosophy. The careless strategy of an unfettered financial industry and reducing taxes in the hope it would be a panacea for all economic woes has proven itself to be a failure. I challenge the Republicans to change course and create fresh ideas that have a chance to help America become better.

After a year of the new Obama administration that had to dig out from an eight-year chasm of problems that it inherited; look at what they have accomplished. Obama has signed 124 bills in his first year alone, which is the change we asked for when electing him to office, and one bill every three days he has been in office.

He has pushed for and passed stiffer banking regulation to prevent future collapses and more taxpayer money being wasted on bailouts. Increased accountability and transparency for companies that have received bailout monies. Obama has pushed banks to come to the table and help out borrowers that were taken advantage of in predatory lending schemes and set up accountability by the big three US automakers in exchange for receiving taxpayer money.

He has restored the image of America and its credibility throughout the world. Set a deadline for ending the war in Iraq and increased troops to Afghanistan/Pakistan where the real terrorists train and organize. The stock market has returned to normal levels restoring some of our lost money lost by the previous administrations failed economic policies. The business climate is just starting to correct itself and with it employment will improve and real estate will start to bottom and level out.

America, there is no fast food solution for the kind of problems this administration assumed. It will take many years to correct itself but at least we are moving in a positive direction and have a leader who has the abilities to navigate us through it. Let's do our part by helping him get his policies through the democratic process and move our country in right direction.

Determined to fly

CALLING ALL VETERANS

RONALD WHEATLEY

"I was motivated. I was willing to do whatever was required. They needed two years of College, I got it, they needed my nose fixed, I got it fixed. I was a very determined young man."

Alan Labonte of Scituate and formerly of Cohasset wanted to be a pilot. He chose the Marine Corps because as he said with a chuckle, "I liked the uniforms."

A 1959 graduate of South High School and former student at St. John's Preparatory School in Worcester, Labonte attended Worcester Junior College for two years studying engineering. He enlisted before graduation, but had to pass the demanding physical exam and have two years of college to enter the Marine Cadet, MARCAD, flight training program.

"Every kind of exam you can imagine," said Labonte of his week of pre-acceptance physical exams.

"They were pretty worried about my nose because I had a serious obstruction from playing football in high school. And so before I was accepted I had to have surgery to open up the nasal passages."

After taking all his exams, Labonte turned down an offer of entrance to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland. "I think about that many times and I say I had my chance to go to Annapolis and I turned it down. I wanted to fly airplanes and in the shortest time."

Labonte graduated second in his class, receiving his navigator wings at Cherry Point where he was assigned to a transport squadron as an aerial navigator.

The Marine Corps pilot training is done by the Navy, and accordingly Labonte reported for duty at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Florida. "My first day in the Marine Corp was January 4, 1961" when he began the 16-week preflight course — a combination of physical training, education and military training. We were busy every day."

Everyone had to ride the Dempsey Dunker — a highly modified airplane cockpit located at the top of a high tower at the edge of a very large swimming pool. Once the trainee is strapped in, the instructor pushes a button and the device rolls down to slam into the water, tip over and then sink to the bottom with the trainee who must release the straps and swim to the surface.

"The first time I did it my harness got stuck, and the Navy Diver had to release me and shoot me up to the surface," Labonte said. "I had to do it over again. As the instructor was strapping me in again, I said, Look I'm not sure I want to do this. 'I'm sorry, sir, we don't have any time,' and wham – he hit the button and down I went. I said that's it. They're going to kill me; I'm going to drown so I might as well just relax. So the dunker went down. It rolled over and sank to the bottom and I just sat there and waited, and then I said to myself — I guess I'm not going to drown after all. I unstrapped myself and got out of the cockpit and kicked my way up to the surface, and I got a thumbs up."

At primary flight training also at Pensacola Labonte learned to fly the T 34, which was a single engine airplane. "We sat in the front; the instructor sat in the back. Some of the instructors would just scream at you from the minute you got into the aircraft. I had a screamer one day, but most of my instructors were really good. I was lucky."

After soloing the flight regime became more demanding "and that's where I started to run into trouble. They want you to consistently land in the first third of the runway. And that I could not do consistently. An instructor said to me 'there's no question you are a good, safe pilot. . . If you were in the Air Force you'd be all set. But in the Navy you are not going to make it."

What Labonte did not know, what all the Navy physical exams did not reveal at the time, but what Labonte's neurologist surmises is that he had contracted Multiple Sclerosis (MS) as a teenager. This no doubt affected his performance during the increased stress of practicing for aircraft carrier landings.

After "washing out", Labonte felt himself a failure, but still wanted to fly so he spent a week in flight intermediate school located in another part the base. "There I'd go through a program of courses. After that they asked me: what do you want to do?"

"I said well if I can't fly a plane at least I could be in airplanes – if I could be a navigator. So they said fine and they sent me up to Cherry Point North Carolina in the spring of the next year."

According to Labonte aerial navigator school was a very rigorous four-month course. "That's where you learn how to use the stars, the sextant, and a lot of it is flying. We would fly in a four-engine plane outfitted with multiple glass domes. So we go out as a group with our instructors and do our navigation, do star fixes, and such. We trained at night mostly because we needed to see the starlight. You learn the stars; you learn the constellations, the names of the stars, and then you learn to 'shoot the stars,' using the sextant" to find your way in the long night flights.

Labonte graduated second in his class, receiving his navigator wings at Cherry Point where he was assigned to a transport squadron as an aerial navigator. Later when the new C-130s came in "we started refueling jets. I was assigned to a mid air refueling squadron. We could refuel three fighters at a time. It was tricky especially at night. My job as a navigator was also to do the weight and balance, which is how the cargo and people are distributed in the back of the airplane, and to keep track of the fuel, and weather. So I had a lot of work before we even took off. I would sit down in preflight and chart out the flight." This was before computers.

"I always marvel to think that the light coming from millions of years ago, we were using to find our way. In a religious context, if you are a good navigator it would be hard to be a good atheist. It's humbling."

Labonte's service included being sent to Guantanamo Bay during the Cuban Missile Crisis in October 1962. He finished his hitch in July 1963. He returned to Worcester and had a successful career. But his last career is another story best told by Labonte in his compelling book titled "A Million Reasons, Why I Fought for the Rights of the Disabled." In 1990 Labonte was diagnosed with MS. Today Labonte is often invited to speak to companies, professional association and groups regarding the rights of the disabled in the work place. He lives in Scituate with his wife Lora. Labonte is on the faculty at the School of Management at University where he works at the medical campus engaged in health services research working on ways to improve medical outcomes following surgery.

Holly Hill Farm board member and Hingham resident Cindy Prentice is the new director of Holly Hill Farm. Cindy is working with Friends of Holly Hill Farm Education Director Jon Belber to plan for an exciting season of programs for school children and workshops for adults and families.

Holly Hill Farm is far from quiet during winter months

By Janice McPhillips
CORRESPONDENT

"Cindy's unique set of qualifications and skills including her background in education, agriculture and business, and her enthusiasm and interest are just what the farm needs right now."
— Jenny White, Holly Hill Farm

If you're thinking that winter is a quiet time at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset, then guess again. The farmers Ben and Hannah Wolbach are busy reviewing notes from last season, remembering which crops flourished and which ones suffered in the wet weather, planning crop rotations for the fields and ordering seeds and other supplies for the upcoming season. Things are also really busy in the offices at the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the educational center at the farm housed in a converted barn adjacent to the main farm stand barn.

In December, the family of Frank White, one of the owners of the property, appointed longtime Friends of Holly Hill Farm board member and Hingham resident Cindy Prentice to be the new director of Holly Hill Farm. Sadly, Frank passed away in September 2009 at a time when he was actively engaged in implementing the long-term plan for having Holly Hill Farm remain an educational organic farm. Frank's vision was that the property would forever be a farm providing fresh, organic produce, as well as a place where people of all ages could come learn about the practices of sustainable agriculture and enjoy the beauty of the farm and surrounding woods.

"Cindy's unique set of qualifications and skills including her background in education, agriculture and business, and her enthusiasm and interest are just what the farm needs right now," said Jenny White, Frank and Jean White's daughter who is a member of the Friends' board.

Right now, Cindy is busy learning all about the for-profit farm operations as well as those of the non-profit education center and working with Friends of Holly Hill Farm Education Director Jon Belber to plan for an exciting season of programs for school children and workshops for adults and families, including popular summer programs.

The Friends of Holly Hill Farm is proud to share some exciting news regarding Education Director Jon Belber. In November, the Farm-Based Education Association named Jon the Teacher Farmer of the year for 2009. This award was presented to Jon at the fourth Farm-Based Education Association Conference in Tarrytown, N.Y. Jon was attending the conference and speaking about the collaboration between the Friends of Holly Hill Farm and local schools. Brooke Redmond, Executive Director of the Farm-Based Education Association, made the announcement of the award. Jon was selected for this award "for inspiring hundreds of people every growing season through the work of farming and gardening and for his impact at schools in his community."

In other exciting farm news, the farm has two new family members, Billy Jo the quarter horse and Pepper the snow bunny. Billy Jo will be staying at the farm for a few months while her owner, Ann Nigro of Hull, has a barn built for her and Pepper is living in the rabbit enclosure next to the goats, Jasper and Kate. Even though there is a thick blanket of snow on the fields and in the woods, the farm remains a beautiful and peaceful place to walk, snowshoe, or cross-country ski all winter long. The property is open from dawn to dusk. If you head into the woods by the northwest side of the Ox Pasture you may be able to see two beautiful new stone and wooden bridges over Richardson Brook that were constructed this fall by Bob Miner and Justin White. They are works of art worthy of recognition.

Come to the farm on Friday, Jan. 29, for a new event, our first full moon "Owl Prowl" from 7 to 8:30 pm. Meet Hedwig, the barred owl from South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell and enjoy a snowy night time walk at Holly Hill Farm.

Despite the quiet and peaceful appearance of the buildings during this time of year, anyone who thinks a working vegetable farm is totally dead in the winter is mistaken. Plenty of work is happening behind the scenes to make sure the farm and the education center will remain productive and vibrant in the future.

Republican field getting crowded for congressional run

Hedlund considering entering race

"At all levels, you're going to see a whole lot of people come out for different races, different seats."
— State Sen. Robert Hedlund

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, is trying to decide whether to challenge Democratic U.S. Rep. William Delahunt, D-Quincy, for reelection in the wake of state Sen. Scott Brown's upset victory in the Jan. 19 special U.S. Senate election.

Hedlund is weighing his options, he told the Mariner on Jan. 25.

"This week's all about Scott Brown and that's it," Hedlund said in a State House News Service report in the wake of Brown's victory over state Attorney General Martha Coakley.

State Rep. Jeffrey Perry, R-Barnstable, is also eyeing a run against Delahunt, who has been serving in Congress since 1997.

Delahunt is already facing a potential election challenge from Republicans, Donald Hussey of Hingham and Ray Kasperowicz of Cohasset.

Former state Treasurer Joseph Malone of Scituate is also considering a run for Delahunt's seat.

"I've been getting a nonstop flood of e-mails, several hundred now, and fundraising commitments in the range of half a million," he said.

The Republicans would have to face off in a Primary.

"At all levels, you're going to see a whole lot of people come out for different races, different seats," Hedlund said. "If it was me getting in, it wouldn't be simply based on those results."

Plymouth County Republican Committee Chairman Vincent Cogliano said that Hedlund and Malone are getting strong pushes to jump into the congressional race and to do it soon.

The Tenth Congressional District Delahunt serves includes Cohasset, Quincy, Weymouth, Abington, Rockland, Hingham, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Scituate, Plymouth, Plympton, and communities in Barnstable County, Dukes County, and Nantucket County.

The district also includes Precinct 2 in Hanson.

Delahunt spokesman Mark Forest did not say if the congressman was seeking reelection or ruling out a campaign bid.

"We've never known Bill to shy away from a fight," he said. "He has been very busy."

Forest said that Delahunt normally announces his election plans in February.

"We will be making an announcement pretty soon," Forest said. "The only difference is that we will have to make our announcement a bit earlier than in the past because people have been speculating."

Forest said that Delahunt goes through a process of evaluation before announcing a reelection bid.

"At the beginning of every election cycle, he takes a look at the race," Forest said. "He will be making an (election) announcement in a normal time frame. The reason there is a lot of excitement and enthusiasm is because we have had a special Senate election and there has been a lot more campaign speculation than before."

Cogliano said that two factors are fueling interest in Delahunt's seat: Brown's overwhelming voter support in the recent special election and speculation that the congressman won't seek reelection.

"Many are assuming that this seat is going to be open," Cogliano said. "That's why they're jumping in."

The Mariner sought comment from Delahunt's staff on Jan. 26 about whether he would be seeking reelection, but a call had not been returned before press time.

Delahunt ran unopposed for reelection in 2008. He has not faced a serious challenge since he first won the Democratic primary by edging out Phil Johnston of Marshfield in 1996.

"I fully expect him to run again," Johnston said in a published report. "I'm going to be there to do everything I can to help him."

Hedlund, the House minority whip, has been representing the Plymouth and Norfolk District that includes Weymouth, Hingham, Duxbury, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Cohasset, and Scituate.

"I think he has the energy and enthusiasm to serve in Congress," said Hedlund legislative aide Patrick O'Connor, a Weymouth councilor at large, on Jan. 22. "He presents a sound fiscal policy that is responsible and what Washington is in need of. I'd be in full support of Sen. Hedlund if he decides to run for Congress. He has done a lot up here on Beacon Hill, and he could do a lot on Capitol Hill, too."

O'Connor said that Hedlund is not afraid to cross political party lines when he decides how to vote on legislation.

"He is a person who will go to Washington and rein in the complete out of control spending," O'Connor said. "He will be the voice of Massachusetts citizens and won't be beholden to any special interests or party bosses. People are sick and tired of party politics. We need people on Capital Hill who will stick up for the rights of the people and the political parties."

Rep. Bradley office hours announced

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley of Hingham, whose district includes the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Precinct 3 in Scituate, will host district office hours from 6 to 7 p.m., on Monday, Feb. 1, at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham, 88 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. Those attending are asked to enter through the Route 3A side entrance of the building into his district office.

People who are unable to attend the office hours, but would like to meet with Bradley, can call 617-722-2520 to schedule an appointment. The district office is also staffed Wednesdays and Fridays during normal business hours, and may be reached by calling 781-749-3331.

Political Notes

Democrats to caucus Feb. 13

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will hold their annual caucus at the Paul Pratt Public Library, located at 35 Ripley Road, on Saturday Feb. 13 at 9 a.m. to elect four (4) delegates and three (3) alternates to the 2010 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

The State Convention will be held on Friday, June 4th and Saturday, June 5th at the DCU Center in Worcester. At that time, Democrats from across the state will gather to endorse statewide candidates.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Cohasset, Massachusetts. All ballots will be written and secret. Those not elected as Delegate and/or Alternate, who meet the qualifications, may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority, and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, disability, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland Street, Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129 no later than 10 days after the caucus date.

For caucus information please contact Chairman Kevin McCarthy at Kevin@cohasset-democrats.org or at 781-383-0639.

Lt. Gov. Murray at Democratic Caucus

On Thursday Feb. 4 at 7 pm at the Paul Pratt Library, there will be a meeting of the South Shore Democratic Caucus at which Massachusetts Lt. Governor Tim Murray will both appear and speak to the members of the South Shore Democratic Caucus and as well be available to field questions and engage in discussion.

In light of the recent Senate race, Lt. Governor Murray and the leadership of the South Shore Democratic Caucus will review and analyze the results of the election and discuss the "way forward" for the Democratic Party from a local, statewide and national perspective.

Candidates Corner

Campaign kick-off for Ray Kasperowicz

A campaign kick-off event for Ray Kasperowicz, Republican candidate for the 10th Congressional District in the November 2010 elections, will take place from 4 to 7 p.m., on Sunday, Jan. 31., at the Red Lion Inn, Cohasset. Guest speakers will be Dr. Richard Lindzen, atmospheric physicist from MIT, and state Sen. Robert Hedlund. Lindzen will discuss the validity of Al Gore's science, the merits of cap and trade and the sociology of the global warming debate.

Reservations can be made online at Ray2010.com or by sending a check to The Committee to Elect Ray Kasperowicz, P.O. Box 142, Cohasset, MA 02025. Suggested donation is $50 per person.

Kasperowicz is a certified public accountant who has been practicing in Cohasset and the Greater Boston area since 1980. He is seeking the seat currently held by U.S. Rep. William Delahunt. Additional kick-off events are being planned for the greater district in February.

Stay in touch with campaign news at Ray2010.com. If interested in working on the campaign, call 781-864-3974.

Food Pantry grateful for donations

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Food Pantry relies on food and monetary donations throughout the year. We were especially blessed during the holiday season with an abundance of donations from food drives at our local churches and schools and from our many benefactors.

We thank Fr. John Mulvehill and the staff of St. Anthony Church for their continued support and generosity.

As always, we are very thankful for our loyal volunteers who help stock the shelves, distribute food and provide friendship and guidance to our grateful recipients.

There are many people and organizations who helped us provide holiday meals and gifts for Thanksgiving and Christmas. We wish to acknowledge:

Joe Kinnealey-Kinnealey Meats, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Rockland Trust, St Anthony Parish, Second Congregational Church, First Parish, St Stephen's Parish, Beechwood Congregational Church, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Cohasset Economic Committee, Cohasset Rotary Club, Cohasset Police, Stop & Shop, Shaw's, Barbara Cook, Roger Nast, Ann Vanderweil, Jan-the bread lady, Eileen Hart, Social Service League of Cohasset, Scituate-Cohasset Newcomer's Club, Community Center Nursery School, Cohasset Middle/High School, Leslie Fallon, Ann Fitzgerald, Mark Brennan, Tom Gruber, Darilynn Evans, Cohasset Postal Workers, Holly Hill Farm, Joe McElroy, Taffy Nothnagle, Tucker Fulton, Bonjis Turkey Farm, Brownie Troop 4792 and Taniguchi Deane Family Foundation.

Also: Carriage House Nursery School, Anna Abbruzze, Eileen Craven, Kate Mahoney, Taggart Eymer, Alexander Schubert, Mrs. McCarthy's ninth grade CCD Class-St. Anthony, Suzanne Waters, Rita Barry, Mary Mastromarino-10th grade CCD Class-St. Anthony, Hanna and Samuel Laugelle, Colby Litchfield, O'Leary Family, Third grade Osgood School, Roger Hill, Atlantica, Cohasset Elder Affairs, Ross Rosano and family, The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset Building Dept., Cohasset Amateur Garden Club, Boy Scouts, Cohasset Republican Town Comm., Pack 38 Cub Scouts, Scituate Girl Scout Troop 4467, Jackie Plant, Osgood School Holiday Concert, Deer Hill School, Michele and Michael Hubley and Carol Sandblom.

Many thanks and Happy New Year to all. The Cohasset Food Pantry is open every Tuesday morning from 9:30-10:30. Donations may be dropped off from 9:00-9:30am. Parking is available at the rear of the rectory.

where she could finally call her mother. On Feb. 3, Rosemarie will speak again, this time about the Russian invasion of Germany.

On March 9, chair yoga will again be offered. The time is set for 1 to 2 p.m., on Tuesdays. This is gentle exercise and done while seated.

The annual Valentine Day tea party is scheduled for Feb. 10, noon, at the Second Congregational Church. This always draws a large crowd, so call in your reservation at 781-383-9112. This is a refreshing mid-winter activity, with tasty treats, friendly conversation and lots of laughter.

Just a footnote here – after one of the Wednesday luncheons an impromptu group of ladies stayed to sing some oldies but goodies accompanied by Nancy Anderson at the piano.

Sean McKenna celebrates his game-winning goal against Carver.

Stretch run

Skaters hoping for late surge

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset hockey team had plenty of time to savor their 2-1 win over Carver on Saturday night.

After the win at Weymouth's Connell Rink, the Skippers weren't scheduled to play again until Sunday when they take on Hull at Milton Academy at 5:10 p.m.

That might not be a bad thing considering what the win did for Cohasset.

The Skippers improved to 6-5-1 for 13 points.

They need 20 points to advance to the South Sectional Tournament, and the extra rest could come in handy. There are eight games left.

When the games get going again, they'll be playing twice a week for the rest of the way.

Against Carver, it was a good night for Anders Goetz and Andy McKenna.

Both had a goal and an assist, while Jack Nelson had another big night between the pipes, keeping Carver and their star Cal Ciarcia to just one goal, a beauty that Nelson had no chance at, in the first period.

The Skippers controlled play in the second period, keeping the puck in the Carver defensive zone and capitalized with 10:24 left in the period when Goetz took a sweet feed from McKenna, who was behind the net, and snapped it topside to tie the game.

Late in the period, Cohasset had a couple of nice chances on a power play, but couldn't slip the puck in.

With 4:58 left in the second period, with the game tied 1-1, the play stopped to fix a huge hole in the ice.

When play resumed on fresh ice, the call was to finish the period and jump right into the next.

Hockey

Cohasset controlled the play the rest of the way, with the exception of the final two minutes when Ciarcia managed a couple of solid breakaway tries.

With 21 seconds left and Cohasset leading 2-1, there were a few scary moments when the Skippers were called for a tripping penalty and had to finish the game two-men down when Carver pulled their goalie.

With three seconds left, the defining moment came with a faceoff right in front of the Skipper net.

Carver managed a shot, but it was tipped away and Cohasset scored the win.

This has been an interesting season for the Skippers.

When the season started, they had excellent depth and one of the top playmakers in the area in Brendan Doonan.

Doonan suffered an injury early in the season and hasn't played, leaving Walsh to find other options.

"We've been playing hard, outplaying teams in the offensive zone, but we haven't been scoring as much as we'd like," Walsh said. "Sometimes if feels like we've been playing nervous."

Walsh has been pleased with many aspects of Cohasset's game and players.

"Harry Cipolla has been unbelievable," Walsh said. "He's playing great hockey. For the first three years of his high school career he had limited playing time. This year he came on strong. He's become a great puck carrier and playmaker. This his senior year and he has all the confidence in the world. He's one of my favorite players to watch this year."

Walsh said Cipolla sets a perfect example for the team, especially when it comes to sacrifice.

We have a bigger team this year than we've had in the past," Walsh said. "Not everybody is going to dress for every varsity game. Some guys get upset by that. They think they should be playing. I tell them that nobody should complain unless they've been in Harry's shoes.

"As a freshman he played maybe four games. He suited up for 12 games as a sophomore and in his junior year he didn't play much. He kept working at it, making himself better and now he's our starting center. I'm proud of him."

Walsh is also pleased with his

Still rolling along

Girls continue to roll through season

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset girls basketball team just keeps winning with the same formula that has worked all season.

Work as a team, stay focused and work hard.

Cohasset already qualified for the Div. 4 South Sectionals, and upped their record to 14-0 with wins over Hanover and Harwich this week.

Girls' Basketball

Meredith Kelly had 23 points and five steals to lead Cohasset to a 77-66 win at Harwich on Tuesday, with help from Tori Lehr, who added 16 points, 10 rebounds and three blocks.

In a 50-32 win at Hanover on Sunday, Lehr had 14 points, Kelly had 10 and Carli Haggerty added 12 points.

"Meredith played very well against Harwich," Cohasset coach John LeVangie said. "And Sam Crough did a very nice job running the club at Hanover. The kids were all excited for that game. Hanover is a good team with a good record. Harwich is also a tough game."

For LeVangie, a 14-game win streak is just another day with this group.

"We've been down the road before with streaks," he said. "We're only worried about the next game. Right now we're worried about Norwell. The kids are preparing for that game. A lot of times I don't know who's next. We'll look at that after the game."

The winning has come from a combination of talent, work and again, focus.

"The girls have a great work ethic," LeVangie said. "They practice hard and focus for two hours at practice. They love basketball and work at it. The kids are there early and they stick around after shooting. It's to their credit."

LeVangie said the program has made huge strides since he came onboard.

"It's a lot better than five years ago when we only had five kids on the varsity," he said. "We had 11 kids on the JV and varsity. If someone got hurt, we were in trouble. Now we can go to the bench any time and not lose anything. We have three great senior leaders. They've learned from the girls before them. We also have three juniors who have seen the seniors and will pick it up. The sophomores will see it too. The senior leadership has set the tone."

Having the talent and smarts that his team has, LeVangie said game plans are built to Cohasset's strengths.

"We do our thing," he said. "We press, refine the press, and play good defense. The defense isn't as good as next week or the week after that though. We're always improving and refining what we do."

As for the quick start, LeVangie said one goal is getting a few home games in the playoffs.

"We'd like some home games," he said. "It does help. We have a great crowd that follows us everywhere. At Harwich I think we had as many fans as they did. Still if we have a home playoff game, that should give us a big crowd. We'd like that.

Unexpected blowout

Visiting Provincetown without ineligible stars

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

With two stars declared ineligible to play, and just five players active, Provincetown was no match for the Cohasset boys basketball team on Sunday afternoon in Cohasset.

The Skippers took control early, jumping to a 36-6 lead and Cohasset finished up with a 62-27 victory.

Robbie Mahoney scored 12 points to lead Cohasset and Kyrel Jaundoo added 10.

Ten players scored for Cohasset and everyone got to play.

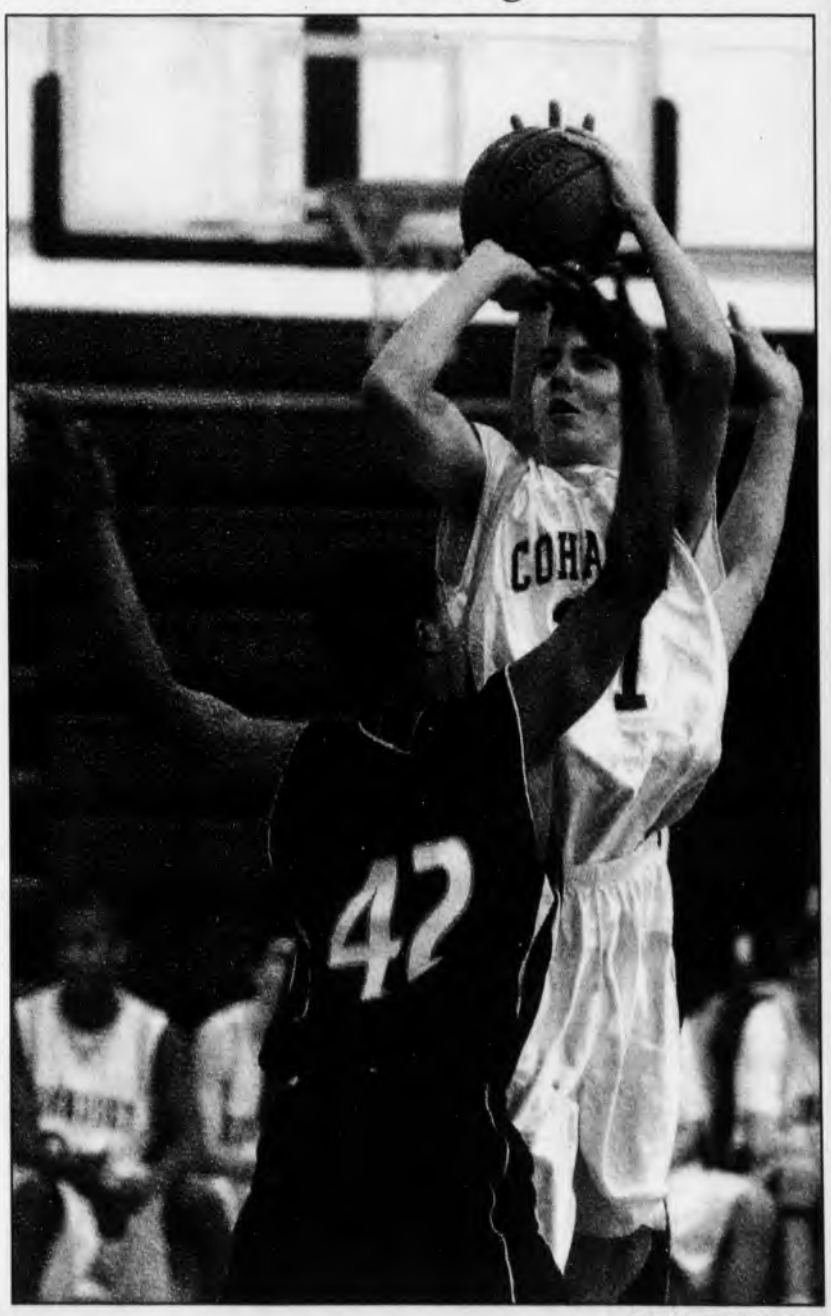
Boys' Basketball

"We played all 12 players," Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero said. "Unfortunately for Provincetown they had two 6-5 Serbian exchange students (Dusan Kojic and Aleksandar Isailovic) declared ineligible by the MIAA. We didn't know that when we scheduled them. We were looking for a good competitive game."

Provincetown had some solid players, including Zack Tobias, who is a 1,000 point scorer.

It just wasn't enough.

The win did count though, and it put Cohasset a game closer to a tournament berth.



The Skippers improved to 6-8 with the win.

Ruggiero was pleased with much of what he's seen.

"Robbie Mahoney has played very well for us," he said. "We're a very young team. We've lost a few close games. We lost to Mashpee in overtime, Hanover in overtime and we hung with Hull late into the game. In all three we were leading. It was just inexperience rearing its head."

On Tuesday night, Cohasset hosted Harwich and dropped a 75-72 decision.

Cohasset hosts Norwell on Friday night and travels to Mashpee on Tuesday.

Fresh Start with Lucie Rice

Part 1: INTRODUCTION

For the next seven weeks we will be talking with Marshfield-based personal trainer Lucie Rice, who will be giving us ideas on how to work our way back to good health. Part one is an introduction to Lucie and a general discussion about health. We will be covering strength training, flexibility training, diet, and other issues over the next seven weeks, and make sure to visit our website to get useful links and to see video demonstrations of many of the exercises and stretches discussed. Go to www.tinyurl.com/freshstartwith-lucierice.

Tell us a little about your background

"I have a long history of being an athlete, including being a nationally ranked tennis player in my teens. But like many people, I have since struggled with my weight. I tried to stay active, but became injured in part due to old athletic injuries and because of my increasing weight. I also ate a high-fat, low-quality diet and ate way too much. And like many of us, I could not discipline myself to exercise regularly. Over the next 20 years, I battled to lose weight, often successfully, but eventually I regained that weight and more. At 39 years old, I hit an emotional and physical low and an all-time high weight of 270 pounds. Walking more than a quarter mile was painful. My favorite exercise – swimming – was painful due to an old rotator cuff injury. I felt depressed and hopeless. I realized there was no end in sight to my weight gain when I could no longer fit into my size 26 pants. I had spent nearly 10 years working on health/long-term care issues at the State House in Boston, and I knew where my life was headed. I had become morbidly obese. I decided it was time to make a change or I would miss my chance."

How did you change your life around?

"It's a very profound process to change your habits, particularly if you are seriously overweight and/or have been inactive for a long-time. I began the slow process of losing weight, strengthening my injured knees and shoulder, and carefully increasing my level of exertion. I was my first client, and I began reading and learning to see if I could help myself. I had been to my primary care doctor and requested to see an orthopedic specialist and had been met with a judgmental and unhelpful response of 'lose weight first.' I set a goal to transform my life. In the back of my mind, I held on to a dream I had in my 20's to complete an Iron-distance triathlon, which includes a 2.4 mile swim, a 112-mile bike leg, and a 26.2-mile marathon run. I started this journey in August 2001 and completed my Iron-distance triathlon in August 2008. The Iron-distance triathlon that I finished in 14 hours and 47 minutes was one of my greatest life moments. It is important to note that I had many setbacks during this time, including a 40-pound weight gain at one point. I still struggle with weight and eating healthfully though exercise has now become habitual and I enjoy being active every day if I can."

What can our readers do to begin?

"The single most important thing is to start. Start today and start slowly. If you are seriously overweight, have medical problems, or have been inactive, it is important that you see your doctor and make sure you are healthy enough to exercise. In fact, call your doctor and make that one of the first things on your goal list. Give yourself encouragement for every positive step you take. Include reading this article as a step forward. Change occurs both through action and through mental preparation for action. We call this contemplation, and it is central to the process of change. If you are in very poor condition (and have checked with your physician) you could start by walking in 5-10 minute increments and slowly building up to more. For those of you in the worst shape, building to daily walks of 30 minutes per day can increase your chances of living longer by 50 percent if you are a man and 30 percent if you are a woman, according to a recent study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association."

You talk about doable over optimal a great deal?

"We have to be realistic. According to the new recommended physical activity guidelines for Americans, we ail should get at least 2.5 to 5 hours of activity weekly, including two strength-training sessions. This amounts to a minimum of 30 minutes of activity five times per week. For many people this feels overwhelming. When I work with clients, I try to help them figure out what is doable and it often is not optimal. I have clients who come to me and tell me they want to lose 100 pounds and wonder how long it will take and what it will require. For most people it will require a total diet alteration and almost daily exercise. Very few people are able to make massive shifts like this all at once."

So set realistic goals?

"Absolutely. If you have been inactive for the last 30 years, immediately starting a daily exercise program is unlikely. The discipline of exercise is like any other – you develop it over time. You might start by exercising just three times a week for 10 minutes. The form of exercise is less important than doing it. So instead of setting up a huge goal that sets you up for huge failure – take a small step, succeed, and take the next step. For instance, most health and fitness professionals these days will encourage a goal of 10 percent weight loss over many months which in and of itself, especially in conjunction with exercise will improve life expectancy and daily function. For some clients with weight problems, just maintaining and not gaining weight will be a success. Every success, however, no matter how small, should be cheered and built upon. Each step gets easier as we see that our capabilities are greater than we imagined."

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse registration ends on January 31

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will close its on-line registration for the Spring 2010 season January 31. To register go to our website www.cohassetlacrosse.com and click on the registration link.

Registrations will be accepted for both boys and girls at U15 (7th and 8th grade), U13 (5th and 6th grade) and U11 (3rd and 4th grade). We will also be accepting registrations for our 1st and 2nd grade clinic. All youth players are welcome, regardless of experience.

The program is committed to accepting every player who signs up by January 31. Once that sign-up period is completed the program will establish its ideal roster sizes and take late registrants on a first-come, first-served basis only until the rosters are filled. At that point a waiting list will be established, or players may be turned away.

Fees for grades 3-8 in 2010 are $150 per player, with family pricing of $100 for each additional family member. The fee for the 1st and 2nd grade clinic is $75. Scholarships are available for families facing unusual circumstances or financial difficulty. Please check the appropriate box on the on-line form.

If you have any issues with on-line access, or registration related questions you may contact Joe Fitzgerald at fitzpj8@aol.com.

top line, the one he calls the Red Line.

"Conor Queenan, Alex Evans and Anders Goetz are my Red Line," Walsh said. "Brian Scott is up there and Andy McKenna too. They have done a good job. That's a talented line. They create opportunities. The one thing that needs to be done better is to find the back of the net more."

Last season at about this time, Cohasset was struggling.

In fact, the Skippers needed a season-ending win streak just to make the tournament, before they snapped off some upsets in the postseason.

This season, a big win streak may not be necessary.

As long as they can play .500 the rest of the way, they can get that invite, and from there anything can happen.

Walsh is confident his team will get where it wants to be.

"We have so much talent," he said. "I just tell them to play their game and not be nervous. The kids do get frustrated when things don't go the right way. I'm trying to keep everyone positively focused in the challenge. The kids know how good they are. They know they have the talent. They just have to find the back on the net a little more."

As long as they can play .500 the rest of the way, they can get that invite, and from there anything can happen.

Walsh runs a tight, disciplined ship, but is also a coach who is close with his players.

"I feel their pain," he said about the missed scoring opportunities. "I try to reinforce the positives in the locker room."

If he could have one wish for the rest of the season, aside from bringing Doonan back faster, it would be more offensive production from the second line.

Walsh said Doonan's absence hasn't forced too many changes.

"I brough Brian Scott up from the defense and John Collins moved up from the fourth line," he said. "Brian had been our top defenseman, but he can ply up front. He's done a good job."

Other players who have been playing well include Eric Bartucca and Sean McKenna.

"Eric has become one of my most reliable guys," Walsh said. "He's real strong. He has a great presence on the ice. Sean is a sophomore and he's really stepped up. He's probably the strongest, most physical guy on the team."

Cohasset could actually be closer to the tournament, but Walsh said a mistake cost them at least a point against Mashpee.

"Vinny Calorio grooved one in," Walsh said. "Our guys were celebrating. The Mashpee kids were slamming their sticks. The goal was in the book, then the ref called a faceoff. I asked why it wasn't called a goal and the ref wouldn't talk to me. I had my captains talk to him and he said he didn't see it. My thought was all you had to do was look around. Mashpee was upset, Cohasset was fired up with sticks in the air. We played hard and lost by one goal, 6-5. We should have come away from that with at least one point."

As for the rest of the way, Walsh said it will be a battle.

"Teams we play down the stretch are teams that beat us earlier," he said. "We're going to have to reach deep into our bag to get it done.

What are the common components to successful weight loss and maintenance?

"Generally, very few people are successful at losing weight and maintaining that weight loss long term. In an attempt to understand this dismal reality, the U.S. government has started the National Weight Control Registry to learn what that small group who succeed have in common. To be included in the Registry an individual has to have lost more than 20 pounds and maintained that weight loss for at least one year. Registry participants have some of the following attributes: 1) 98 percent modified their diet; 2) 90 percent exercise on average one hour per day; and 3) 75 percent weigh themselves at least once per week. Very few people can do this all at one once. Your best bet is to take that first step and not look back."

Do you think society could do better at helping overweight people?

"Most Americans are now overweight and in many cases obese. We need to stop demonizing those who are the overweight and inactive and instead start finding ways to help people address the enormous challenge to lose weight when necessary and exercise regularly. We are in crisis as a society and individually."

What do you think of food journals?

"I am a big fan of food journals. Primarily because you can't solve a problem until you know what it is. They can be really empowering. Generally, people are a little horrified at what they are actually eating. Usually it is far more than they think, and it helps them to understand the changes they might need to make."

Are all skinny people healthy and all fat people unhealthy?

"Studies show that the healthiest group is lean, active people. The second healthiest group is overweight but active people. Clearly being overweight is not a good thing. Optimal is lean and very active. But for many people altering their diet is extremely hard and may take years. So being active is a good way to counter the effect of weight and stay relatively healthy."

Should people diet first, exercise first, or do both at the same time?

"Most people find it hard to change to many things at once. I often focus on exercise first and diet second. But it really depends on the person and their own goals and how much they want to take on immediately. Ultimately, it takes exercise and a balanced diet to reach optimal health and each individual has to figure out what they can handle at any given time."

For most of us there's a giant mental barrier that prevents us from taking that first step. How do we surmount that barrier?

Marshfield-based personal trainer Lucie Rice works with a client at the Workout Club in Webster Square.

"Break everything down into small goals and take that first step, no matter how small. For some of us, it will be walking into a health club, for others it will be starting to eat a healthy breakfast. Part of the reason that change is so hard, especially if it involves weight loss is because it requires changing so many behaviors at once. We make dozens of food choices every day. As for exercise sometimes it can be downright unpleasant – your muscles burn, you sweat. I often tell clients that is why it is called a workout, not a "sitout" or a "hangout." But I know from experience that very few people can continue something they hate for very long-months, maybe even years, but not indefinitely. So whatever diet changes are made and whatever exercise you do, eventually has to feel good to you or you won't keep doing it. So look for the exercise that you enjoy, keep trying until you find what is right for you."

So you have to go to the gym every day for this to really work, right?

"Definitely not. You can exercise at home, in a gym, outdoors, or wherever you wish. I love gyms because I can efficiently get optimal exercise – cardiovascular, strength, flexibility – all in one place. The essential element, however, is not a gym – it is to move. The old saying, 'move it or is lose it,' has been proven to be scientifically accurate. We know now that if you don't us the brain, bones, muscles, heart, etc., they become weaker and weaker until they no longer work well or at all."

What can you do to promote good heart health?

"Adults should check in with their doctor from time-to-time especially as they age to ensure that their cholesterol, blood pressure, and sugar levels are healthy, and get appropriate treatment if necessary. Exercise is critical for heart health. Small amounts of cardiovascular activity can make the difference between life and death."

Let's face it, exercise is for the young, right?

"Not at all. Everyone can do it – the disabled, the elderly, the young. I am an endless believer in people's ability to do whatever it is that they set their mind to. We used to think that aging meant deterioration. Now we know people can be extremely active well into their 80s and 90s. While aging does bring with it a decrease in some functions, the majority of the decline we see in older people is actually due to inactivity."

So you're really saying it's never too late?

"I have a client who first began working out with me at the age of 65. He had never engaged in any formal exercise program. Now at age 69, he can do many things men half his age can't. He went skiing with a friend who was a healthy man in his 30s. My client had to leave his young friend in the lodge for the afternoon because he couldn't keep up. It gives a hint of how truly amazing the human body is and how far we can reach if we want to."

You are a personal trainer. Why should we come to you? How can a personal trainer help?

"There are two main reasons to use a personal trainer. One is obviously for discipline. The other is information. Some of my clients use me to help them stay focused, to stay consistent, and some frankly to exercise at all. Other people really want to learn the right way to strength train, or find out the recommended amount of each exercise. Some want cutting-edge knowledge for sports performance or for optimal health. Also some trainers such as me are specifically trained to work with people who may need a little more guidance in developing an appropriate exercise program due to chronic diseases, orthopedic problems, after surgery, or similar situations. But a trainer is not essential. You can do what I did initially – do your own research and learn basic information from books or the web." (See attached website links and recommended reading).

Can't anyone become a personal trainer?

"Anyone can hang a shingle that says personal trainer, just as anyone can say they are a therapist. But the landscape has changed dramatically over the past decade. There are organizations that have nationally accredited tests, which make sure that personal trainers meet similarly high standards across the spectrum. It is recommended that you choose a trainer who is certified through one of these groups, such ACE, ACSM, NSCA, AFAA."

Now for the really serious stuff – what's your favorite form of exercise?

"I actually like many types of exercise. Variety is the spice of life, and to be honest the variety helps exercising stay fresh for me. It's also good to vary your exercise as it will prevent the chance of repetitive stress injuries, and by changing up your workout routine from time-to-time you'll continue to help your body develop more."

Favorite "good food" and favorite "bad food"?

"(Laughing) I wouldn't have said this 20 years ago, but I love a healthy salad with some olive oil and vinegar. Fill it with peppers, cucumbers, dried cranberries, nuts, and tomatoes. Fabulous! I really have to tell you my bad food? Really? I haven't had it in years! Triple chocolate brownies with Brigham's Mississippi Mud ice cream."

Procrastination is a lifestyle

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

Wednesday was another superb half a day. It was well placed because this is the last week of the semester but teachers couldn't book tests for this day because of the shortened classes.

Hello. You are about to experience the shortest/most rushed "Life at CHS" to date. Why? Because I have a final tomorrow morning during first period and I have yet to begin studying for said final. Me? A procrastinator? Of course I am. It's a life style. A great lifestyle…until there is about 9 hours left until the thing you waited to do is due. Oh well…at least I had a fun day up until 20 minutes from now.

Let's get down to business. Monday? Boring. Everyone had a case of the Mondays. By the way, saying: "You got a case of the Mondays" on a Monday morning literally contributes nothing positive to the day. Don't do it. Ron Livingston from "Office Space" hates it too. Respect man…respect…

On Tuesday fliers were put out around the school. Why would there be fliers? To inform the citizens of Cohasset High School about the Junior-Senior Semi Formal which takes place on Saturday, Jan. 30. It will be held from 8 to 10:30 p.m.. Tickets only cost $15 if you buy them ahead of time, but will cost $25 if you buy them at the door. A portion of the profits will be going towards Haitian relief. If you want another way to support Haiti, there is a donation box in the front of the school by the main office, which has already been filled up with clothes and other items. This little fundraiser was set up by Imani White-Barbosa and Khiana Clemons. If you ever see them, thank them for being so generous and caring. Great job, you two.

Wednesday was another superb half a day. It was well placed because this is the last week of the semester but teachers couldn't book tests for this day because of the shortened classes. I love when stuff like that works so conveniently. Oh and I love half days. And the food you get on half days. Normally I would go into food critic mode but not this issue. Sorry.

Thursday was book turn in day for most people. If you don't turn in your book or if it is damaged they hit you with a hefty fine equal to the cost of the book. Which basically means kids end up lying to their parents to get their parents to open up their wallets so they can pay for the books.

And on Friday, the semester came to an end. This was the last day for some of the classes as kids will be moving on to different classes come Monday. Many students have mixed feelings as they are happy to drop one class cough global studies cough while sad to drop another class cough chorus cough.

Overall, it was a bit of a stressful week. I even got a new row of stress acne out of it just in time for semi. Hooray? Nope. Anyways, I really have to go study for my final exam tomorrow in pre-calculus. In the off chance that you are reading this, Mrs. Brindley, please go easy on the grading. Wish me luck and make your kids go to semi!

Psychologist seeks questions from parents

All are welcome to "A Conversation with Psychologist Barbara Green," sponsored by Cohasset PSO/Parent Advisory Council, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., on Tuesday, Feb. 2 at Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road. Green has asked that parents email their question to her ahead of time at: bjgreenphd@aol.com and she will do her best to base the evenings conversation on answering those questions.

Here are some examples of the type of questions the Parent Advisory Council have put together:

- What is considered typical behavior in adolescents vs. at-risk?
- Do you have tips for parents to help our children deal with stress and anxiety?
- How do parents breach the barriers of adolescence?
- As a community, are there examples of proactive steps or models we could learn from?
- What are some of the available resources on the South Shore?

Green is a psychologist working with adolescent in Cohasset and the South Shore area. As a professional with an interest in the mental health and well being of children, adolescents and families — her doctoral dissertation was on adolescent depression — Green helped create Youth Health Connection, a Community Benefits Program of South Shore Hospital. The Youth Health Connection is a partnership among health professionals, educators, religious leaders, law enforcement, parents and teens. The core values of Youth Health Connection are health knowledge and risk prevention through collaboration, respect, connectedness and coalition building.

All workshops and presentations are free and sponsored by the PSO/Cohasset PAC.

Kindergarten registration

Kindergarten registration for the 2010-2011 school year is under way. Registration will be at the Osgood School, daily, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Parents registering children for kindergarten will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration, but do not have to commit at this time. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for programs. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required for kindergarteners in order to register. Call the school office at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Preschool registration

Preschool registration for the 2010-2011 year is under way. Children who turn 3 or 4 by Sept. 1, 2010, are eligible to register for the Osgood Preschool Program, which takes place four days per week, Monday through Thursday, for 2-1/2 hours. Entrance to the preschool program is based on a lottery system. Registration applications should be returned to the Osgood School no later than Friday, Feb. 5. The lottery will take place on Wednesday, Feb. 10, and parents will be notified immediately following. A deposit of $150 will be required to hold a space for those selected. A birth certificate and proof of residency must accompany applications.

Preschool open house

A preschool open house for parents will take place at Osgood School from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m., on Friday, Jan. 29. Parents will have an opportunity to meet preschool teachers and support staff and view the classrooms and facilities. Call the school office at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Derby Academy accepting applications

Derby Academy is now accepting applications for the 2010-2011 school year. The school's PreK program for 4- and 5-year-olds takes place mornings, Monday through Friday, while programs for kindergarten and later years is full day, ending at 3:15 or 4 p.m., Monday through Thursday, depending on age and athletics, and ending at 1:15 p.m., on Fridays. Class sizes are small with excellent teachers in optimal educational surroundings.

Derby Academy, in its 225th year since its founding in 1784, is one of the oldest co-educational day schools in continuous operation in the United States. Located in Hingham, Derby Academy is dedicated to serving students in pre-kindergarten through eighth grade and is committed to providing an exceptional educational experience that includes academics, arts and athletics programs in a welcoming and nurturing environment. For more information about Derby Academy, call 781-749-0746 or visit online at www.derbyacademy.org.

DeRensis elected first VP of Selectmen's Association

Cohasset Town Counsel Paul DeRensis was elected unanimously by selectmen across the state as first vice president of the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association and also a member of the Massachusetts Municipal Association Board of Directors Executive Committee, on Saturday, Jan. 23, at the MMA annual convention at the Hynes Convention Center in Boston.

This is the same convention that Gov. Deval Patrick addressed to announce his fiscal plans for municipalities. Mayor Thomas M. Menino was on hand to welcome conference participants. Attending were selectmen, mayors, managers, councilors and finance committee members from cities and towns throughout the Commonwealth.

The MMA is a nonprofit nonpartisan association of city and town officials across the Commonwealth, and its board is elected by the various cities and towns. DeRensis' election was based on one vote per municipality.

COURTESY PHOTO

Cohasset Town Counsel Paul DeRensis.

The MMA provides its member communities with a range of services including lobbying and advocacy, where the state's municipalities are stronger speaking together with one common voice, training and education, publications policy research, insurance programs and management assistance. One of its constituent organizations is the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association.

As first vice president and as a member of the MMA Board of Directors Executive Committee, DeRensis looks forward to doing all that can be done to ease the burdens on local government and to make life better for citizens across the state on the local governmental level.

Registry of Deeds annual RE activity

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported recently on real estate activity in Norfolk County for the calendar year ending Dec. 31, 2009.

The Registry of Deeds took in 172,700 total documents in 2009, a healthy increase of 22 percent over recordings in 2008. Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the annual period from January to December, 2009 settled at just over $4.1 billion, a decrease of 9 percent from January to December 2008. The total number of 13,967 deeds recorded during 2009 was up slightly, increasing by 1 percent. This slight increase in the number of deeds recorded is potential evidence that the slowest point of the market has been reached. The price decline year to year was moderate with the average sale price of deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) coming in at $505,992.04, down 6 percent from the average price in 2008.

There was, however, positive news on the foreclosure front as Norfolk County experienced a decline of 26 percent in the number of recorded foreclosure deeds. Mortgage recording activity was up sharply rising 37 percent on a year-to-year basis with 40,307 new mortgages being recorded, although total mortgage value for 2009 stood at $26.7 billion, a decline of 8 percent from 2008. These numbers are likely the result of homeowner refinancing to take advantage of lower mortgage rates combined with an ongoing weakness in the commercial sector offering fewer opportunities for larger business loans. It is important to note that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true value of indebtedness as some are mortgages which may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. The Registry land records back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 are available for online viewing. The Registry's online index is available from 1937 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records. The Registry of Deeds can be contacted via telephone at 781-461-6101, or on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

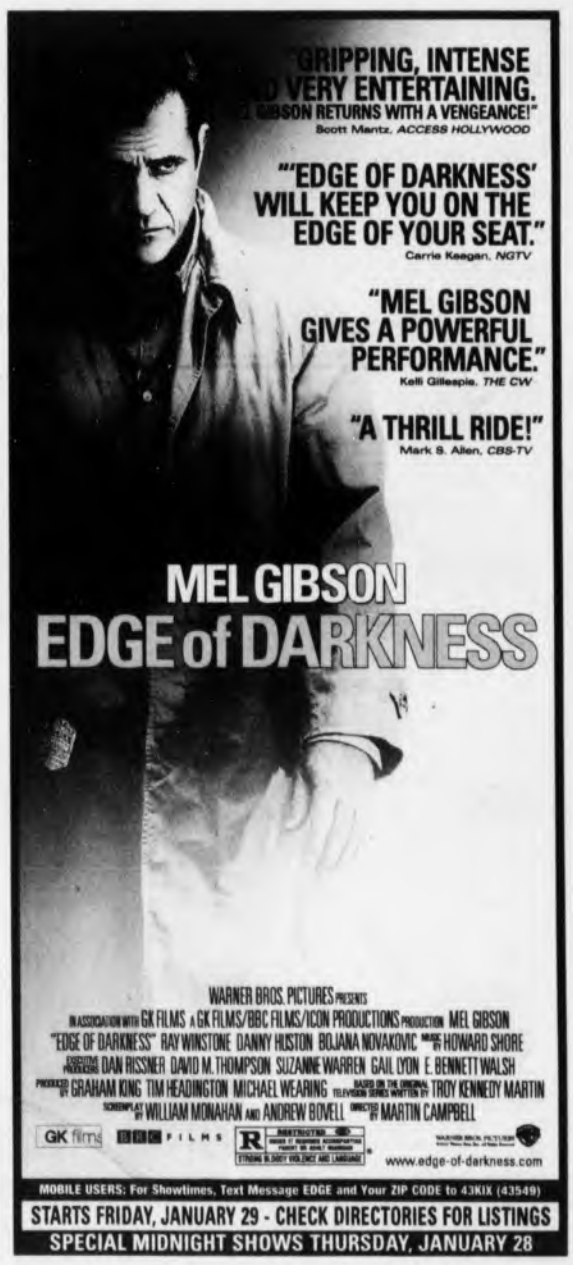
Town-wide H1N1 flu clinic Feb. 2

A second town-wide H1N1 flu vaccination clinic will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 2 from 6 to 8p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium. Anybody over age 9 is eligible and ample vaccine is available.

If residents have yet to receive the seasonal flu vaccination that will be available as well. Both vaccines are inactive and can be given at the same time.

Public Health nurse Mary Goodwin said about 300 residents attended the first H1N1 vaccination clinic held in early January.

"We are hoping for another good turnout," Goodwin said.



Please call 781-383-2210 with questions.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
FEB. 8, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your natural Arian leadership qualities make you the person others will follow in tackling that important project. But don't get so involved in the work that you neglect your personal life.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Aspects favor sorting through your possessions, both at work and at home, to start giving away what you don't use, don't need or don't like. Relax later with someone special.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The issues are not quite as clear as they should be. That's why you need to avoid getting involved in disputes between colleagues at work or between relatives or personal friends.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You'll get lots of support from others if you own up to your mistake quickly and include a full and honest explanation. Learn from this experience so that you don't repeat it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) There might be some early confusion over a major move, whether it's at work or at home. But once you get a full breakdown of what it entails, it should be easier to deal with. Good luck.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Creating order out of chaos, even in the most untidy spaces, should be no problem for organized Virgos. So go ahead and do it, and then accept praise from impressed colleagues.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Whether it's for business purposes or just for leisure, a trip might be just what you need right now. You would benefit both from a change of scenery and from meeting new people.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) While things generally go well this week, a romantic situation seems to have stalled. But you can restart it if you want to. Then again, maybe this is a chance to reassess the situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A meeting that was promised quite a while back could finally happen. So be sure you're prepared with everything you'll need to make your case sound convincing and doable.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace blunder could create a problem down the line unless you deal with it right now to see how and why it happened. Don't be surprised at what you might learn.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This is a good time to re-sort your priorities and see if adjustments are called for. Be honest with yourself as you decide what to keep, what to discard and what to change.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Letting yourself be bathed in the outpouring of love and support from those who care for you will help you get through a difficult period sooner rather than later. Good luck.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

'Power of Hope"

Glastonbury Abbey's Lecture Series, Listening to Other Voices: Transformation and Renewal: The Power of Hope," will be presented at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, Feb. 11. Rabbi Peter J. Rubinstein will present a lecture titled: Lifting Your Head: A Jewish Perspective During Times of Crisis."

Difficult times demand that people consider core values and the legacy each would choose to leave to the generations who follow. Rabbi Rubinstein, Senior Rabbi, Central Synagogue, New York City, a Reform congregation, will speak about how Jews have reclaimed their undying faith in the midst of devastating circumstances. Even when shaken to the core, they look to their bedrock: Decency, optimism, faith in God and those they love. Will that bedrock hold for those of the Jewish faith? For those who are not of that faith or who are of no defined faith, can something be learned? Teacher, writer and leader in progressive Judaism, Rabbi Rubinstein has received many awards, including the Face to Face/Faith to Faith Peace is Possible Award, and in May 2009 the American Jewish Committee National Human Relations Award.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. For information, visit the Web site at glastonburyabbey.org.

'Laughter' all around

Classic Coward comedy returns to Broadway

By R. Scott Reedy

When actress Alice Duffy was cast to play Lady Saltburn in the 2007 Huntington Theatre Company production of Noel Coward's "Present Laughter" – starring Victor Garber ("Alias," "Legally Blonde," "Milk") – the longtime Hingham resident had no idea she would one day make her Broadway debut in the same role. Duffy is doing exactly that, however, in the just-opened Roundabout Theatre Company revival of the classic Coward comedy.

"We did so well in Boston that there were rumors that our director, Nicholas Martin, might take the show into New York," explained Duffy over tea recently with fellow cast member Nancy E. Carroll, who plays Miss Erickson, at a 42nd Street restaurant. "Victor was signed to the television series 'Eli Stone,' however, so we didn't hear too much for awhile. I thought to myself, 'This may never happen.'"

Last year, shortly after Garber's television gig ended, Duffy's telephone rang and she soon realized those early rumblings were about to become reality. She was soon set to make her first New York appearance at age 81. With Garber as past-his-prime stage star Garry Essendine onboard, Martin regrouped most of his Boston cast, including Duffy and Carroll, for the current Roundabout mounting at New York's American Airlines Theatre.

"Nicky called me about six months ago and asked me to keep December through early spring available, because it looked good that he would be bringing 'Present Laughter' to Broadway. I was perfectly happy with my life on the South Shore so the idea of appearing on Broadway was almost unbelievable to me. That Nicky would consider me for this opportunity is a great honor," says Duffy, who has lived in Hingham since 1966.

Alice Duffy

Her co-star Carroll agrees. "I feel exactly the same way as Alice about this entire experience. It is truly unbelievable to be here. Broadway was never a destination for me, because I have always been a character actress. That I am getting this opportunity is a great honor and privilege" says the Rockport resident, a two-time Elliot Norton Award winner renowned for her dramatic portrayals on Boston stages.

Carroll will put the heavier material on hold for the next few months, however, as she rejoins Duffy in the 1939 play about a middle-aged actor whose rave reviews have gone to his head. While the star prepares for a tour in Africa, his swank London flat is almost overtaken by his estranged wife, a smitten ingénue and her imposing aunt, a philandering producer and his married paramour, and a slightly deranged young playwright.

Both Duffy and Carroll, who played mother and daughter in "Kindertransport" at the New Repertory Theatre and who also appeared together in the Huntington's "Dead End," believe doing Coward justice means staying true to the text.

"You have to do exactly what Mr. Coward intended. If you think you can improve on it, you are mistaken. You do not want to change a single word or alter the meaning of a single line. To get it right, you need to memorize, memorize, memorize down to the last comma so every bit of the cadence and rhythm is correct," says Duffy, who acknowledges that her favorite role is Madame Arcati in Coward's "Blithe Spirit," which she did many years ago at the former Nickerson Theatre in Norwell. She describes her current character as "an effusive Grande Dame who is accustomed to getting what she wants."

Carroll, who has toured the country in "Nunsense" and also appeared in that show's Boston and off-Broadway productions, believes that Coward's humor works best when it is played straight.

"You're not going for a laugh when you do a show like this, because if you just go right for the laugh you'll never get it. You have to believe in and play true to your character and, whatever you do, don't push for the laugh," says Carroll, who plays a chain-smoking Swedish maid. "I'm not sure she knows it, but Miss Erickson is clueless. She's also unflappable which makes her a lot of fun to play."

Duffy – whose late father hosted a children's show in their Philadelphia hometown during television's infancy, and whose late brother, actor Peter Boyle ("Young Frankenstein," "Everybody Loves Raymond"), enjoyed a long career in film and television – is staying with her daughter, Clare Duffy, in New York, and welcoming the many friends and relatives who come to see her.

"My children and grandchildren are coming to the show, of course, and Peter's daughters, my two nieces, were my guests on opening night," says Duffy, whose husband, retired physician Benedict J. Duffy, Jr., passed away five years ago and whose daughter, renowned romance genre editor Kate Duffy, passed away on Sept. 29, 2009.

Duffy, who has appeared in "Shear Madness" over 1,000 times at Boston's Charles Playhouse, has attracted more than just her family's attention with her latest acting assignment. NBC-TV's "The Today Show" took notice, too, profiling Duffy, along with Angela Lansbury ("A Little Night Music") and other actresses over 80 appearing on Broadway this season, in a segment that aired Jan. 27.

While Duffy is enjoying the New York notoriety, she is also quick to share credit for her current success.

"Nicky Martin is a gift from God. Nicky started his career as an actor, so he is very conscious of actors. As a director, he is a true joy. And Victor Garber is just wonderful, too. Nicky and Victor are both consummate professionals. Together they create an atmosphere in which good work flourishes."

Roundabout Theatre Company will present Noel Coward's "Present Laughter" at the American Airlines Theatre, 227 West 42nd St., through March 21. For tickets and information, call 212-719-1300 or go online at roundabouttheatre.org.

Theater review

'All My Sons' remains relevant, timely

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Arthur Miller's "All My Sons" opened on Broadway 63 years ago this week. Six decades later, with Iran and Afghanistan – not to mention the always intriguing Halliburton/KBR subplot – in the headlines, the play's unflinching look at the American Dream through the prism of war-time profiteering and lives lost seems as relevant today as when it was first written. A compelling new Huntington Theatre Company production, under the direction of David Esbjornson, pairs two of Boston's best actors, Will Lyman and former A.R.T. company member Karen MacDonald, as self-made businessman Joe Keller and his wife, Kate, and a fine supporting cast to make its still powerful points.

Will Lyman as Joe Keller and Karen MacDonald as Kate Keller in the Huntington Theatre Company's production of "All My Sons," playing through Feb. 7, 2010 at the B.U. Theatre Mainstage.

Joe Keller owns a factory where faulty airplane parts were knowingly manufactured and sold to the U.S. government, resulting in the deaths of 21 American pilots. When his business partner takes the fall, Keller escapes a lengthy prison term but not the lingering small-town whispers about his part in the crime. Rumors aren't the only war-time remnants haunting the self-possessed Keller. One of his two sons, Larry, was reported missing in action in the war, and his wife refuses to accept that the young man is really dead.

Never one to muddy his central plot points, Miller's stage direction calls for the play to open with an apple tree, planted in the missing son's name no less, to crack and fall in a storm that portends the stormy weather that will engulf the Keller family over the next three acts. We see Kate in those first moments, and MacDonald makes it impossible ever to look away from her. Esbjornson and MacDonald have made this Kate stronger than some earlier interpretations — including Dianne Wiest's heartbreaking turn in the 2008 Broadway revival — making her apparent complicity in covering up her husband's misdeeds easier to accept if still hard to justify.

Kate holds vise-grip tightly to the hope that Larry will come home from the war, that her husband's deeply damaging secrets will remain hidden, and that her family will somehow remain intact. She bristles when her younger son, Chris (an earnest Lee Aaron Rosen), back from the war and working with his father, romances Annie (a sweet, but steely when needed, Diane Davis), his brother's former girlfriend and daughter of Joe Keller's imprisoned business partner. The Kellers can't move forward with so much from their past left unresolved. Before long, Annie's brother George (Michael Tisdale) arrives to put a stop to his sister's new relationship and to raise questions once again about Joe Keller's real role in his company's crimes.

Miller – who two years after winning his first Tony Award for "All My Sons" would win his second Tony, and a Pulitzer Prize, for "Death of a Salesman" — was inspired to write about the Keller family by a true story he had read in a newspaper detailing how a child turned her father in for selling faulty parts to the U.S. military during the second World War. Miller also took inspiration from one of the themes of Henrik Ibsen's play "The Wild Duck," for the idea of two business partners torn apart when one is sent to prison for a crime committed by the other. As he would do in "Salesman," Miller brilliantly captures the palpable ache of a family broken by pain.

Lyman's Joe Keller remains stolid until the full weight of what he has done, stirred by his own simmering grief, finally overtakes the once proud man.

"They were my sons," he sobs of the young men who lost their lives because of his company's faulty parts. "They were all my sons."

The Huntington Theatre Company production "All My Sons" will be at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston, through Feb. 7. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-0800 or go online at huntingtontheatre.org.

Newly appointed Cohasset Police Chief Mark DeLuca walks through a contingent of fellow officers into the Selectmen's Office for his swearing in ceremony on Monday. About 20 Cohasset officers turned out in a show of support for their new chief.

DeLuca 'hitting ground running'

New police chief sworn in Monday

Mark DeLuca officially took his place as chief of the Cohasset Police Department on Monday night.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas swore in DeLuca in front of a large crowd of supporters in the Selectmen's Office at Town Hall.

About 20 of Cohasset's finest turned out to support their new Chief. More than 30 family, friends, and former colleagues sat, or stood, in the crowded room. DeLuca said he was "floored" by the crowd.

"We're going to have a lot of fun, we're going to enjoy the job," DeLuca told the audience.

DeLuca, who started working last week, has wasted no time getting acquainted with the department, the town and getting moving on several initiatives.

"We have hit the ground running," DeLuca said. He has started the process to get the department accredited by the state. He has assigned different officers to be liaisons to key groups in town. He's looking to find funding for a school resource officer. Research has begun on a Homeland Security

Write a note, support the shelter

Cohasset residents help raise $2300 with card series

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If you could — in one fell swoop — support a homeless animal, bring a smile to a friend, and enjoy a piece of art by a local artist, wouldn't that be a positive thing?

That's exactly what a mother-daughter team of Cohasset residents intended when they spearheaded a fundraising campaign for the Scituate Animal Shelter this winter.

Carling Sturino, a recent graduate of Boston College, began volunteering at the Scituate Animal Shelter in the late summer and soon convinced her mother, Sherry, to volunteer as well.

Wanting to do something more for the shelter, and inspired by note cards sent by other humane societies, the Sturinos decided to create their own note-card series.

They called on the help of eight local artists from Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate – all communities served by the Scituate Animal Shelter – to create original pieces of art. All the artists created a piece of art in their medium of specialty using one of the shelter animals waiting for a new home as their muse.

A to B in a greener way

Grants available for cleaner travel options

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Do you have ideas about how Cohasset can create more opportunities to promote cleaner and greener travel?

If so, now is the time to bring them forward. Approximately $2 million is available at the state level to fund projects that promote clean air and mobility.

Planning Board member Clark Brewer said projects involving alternative transportation options, sidewalks, increased signage for walking paths or bike lanes were all possibilities for grant funding.

The Massachusetts Planning Organization is overseeing the Clean Air and Mobility grant, which gets its funding from the federal government. The goal is to fund projects that improve air

We Auto Know

by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman

WHY HESITATE?

Few problems are more perplexing than engine hesitation during acceleration. When this problem occurs, it pays to have the auto technician examine many of the components that are traditionally associated with a good old-fashioned tune-up. For example, it is possible that a clogged air filter is preventing sufficient amounts of air from entering the combustion chamber. Or the spark plugs may be so fouled that there is not sufficient spark to ignite the fuel/air mixture. The ignition wires may also need replacing. It is also possible that the fuel filter is in need of replacement or the fuel is contaminated. A host of other potential culprits can be addressed and eliminated as the source of this aggravating problem.

If your car is hesitating, you should bring it down to ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT for a complete tune up today. Our ASE-certified technicians will run a thorough check on your filters, fluids, and everything else, so that we can find and fix the small problem before it becomes a big problem. Even if your car is running fine, you should call 781-925-3200 to schedule some preventive maintenance so that we can prevent things like hesitating engines in the first place. Visit our shop today at 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: A variety of sensors used to adjust the fuel/air mixture can adversely affect engine performance when they fail.

Woman given 'no trespass' order following alleged theft

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Stop & Shop called police at about 1:50 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 26) about an alleged shoplifter. Police said a 38-year-old Hingham woman had gone through the self-checkout. An employee monitoring the checkout observed that her total bill was $38.35 when it appeared there was far more. The store called the police who detained the woman. A scan of the items totaled $228. Management did not want to prosecute but did take out a no-trespass order against the woman, who claimed she had been having trouble with the scanner in the self-checkout, police said.

MV accidents

• At 5:40 p.m. on Monday (Jan. 25), a single-car accident occurred on Atlantic Avenue by the Bathing Beach. Police said a 27-year-old Cohasset man, operating a 2006 Nissan Murano, was heading south when he lost control of the car that hit a berm, flipped on the passenger side and skidded 150 feet into the parking lot.

The driver was transported to South Shore Hospital, with what appeared to be minor injuries. Police investigation at the scene revealed, based on the distance the car skidded on its side that the vehicle was speeding. The driver was cited for speeding and for failure to stay in marked lanes.

• At 3:48 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 26), there was a two-car accident on Route 3A by Coastal Nissan. Police said a 2006 Toyota Tacoma pickup truck was exiting Coastal Nissan and attempting to go left on Route 3A (toward Scituate) when it pulled in front of a 1999 Nissan Altima, operated by a 51-year-old Plymouth woman. The vehicles collided and the operator of the Nissan was transported to South Shore Hospital by Scituate ambulance because the Cohasset ambulance was on another run. Both vehicles were towed. The operator of the pickup was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic, police said.

As it turned out the woman driving the Nissan had an expired license and she is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation. Her license had expired on her birthday 10 days earlier. Police remind motorists to check the expiration date on their driver's licenses because the Registry no longer sends out reminders.

• At 5:55 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 26) two cars struck the same deer on Forest Avenue. The two vehicles involved were a 2001 Toyota Avalon operated by a 70-year-old Hull woman and a 2005 Ford pickup truck operated by a 58-year-old Cohasset man. There was minor damage to both vehicles. The deer was killed in the accident, police said.

• At 7:38 a.m. on Thursday (Jan. 28), there was a minor accident in the high school parking lot off Pond Street. A 16-year-old Cohasset girl, operating a 2001 Nissan Pathfinder, misjudged the distance as she pulled into a parking space and struck at 1999 Toyota RAV4 that had just parked there. The RAV4 was operated by an 18-year-old Cohasset teen. There was minor damage to both vehicles and police assisted with the paperwork.

Arrest

A 42-year-old Somerville woman was arrested on Monday morning (Jan. 25) following a traffic stop for speeding after a computer check through the Registry of Motor Vehicles revealed her license had been revoked.

Police said the 2006 Chevrolet SUV she was driving on Forest Avenue was traveling 46 in a 30 mph zone. She was charged with operating with a revoked license and speeding.

Bounced check

A 48-year-old Marshfield man is trying to make good on a check for $571 that bounced at a local business on Route 3A. The business contacted police last week (Jan. 25) when the check was returned for insufficient funds. Police contacted the customer, who has promised to pay.

Missing papers

A Linden Drive resident reported to police last week (Jan. 25) that a box full of valuable documents, such as Social Security cards and birth and marriage certificates, was missing. There had been work going on at the house and the resident feared the box had been moved during construction. The resident later found the box and notified police.

Vandalism

Police investigated a report from an 82-year-old North Main Street man last Tuesday (Jan. 26) that his lawn, wheelchair ramp, and mailbox had been damaged. Police believe a car may have gone off the side of the road and caused the damage during a recent driving rainstorm. The vehicle apparently clipped the end of the wheelchair ramp. There are no suspects at this time. The resident went to the station to report the damage.

Summonses

• At 9:33 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 26), police stopped a 2009 Honda Odyssey on Beechwood Street for traveling 45 in a 30 mph zone. A registry check revealed the 44-year-old Cohasset woman driving the Honda had an expired license. She will be summonsed for unlicensed operation and speeding. Her husband took control of the car, police said. Again, police urge motorists to check the expiration date of their licenses.

• Police stopped a 1997 Honda Civic, operated by a 37-year-old Weymouth man for a violation in the town parking lot. The man was unable to produce a license only a Brazilian passport. He is being summonsed for unlicensed operation and his car was towed, police said.

ID theft

A 47-year-old Cohasset woman went to the police station on Wednesday (Jan. 27) to report that a credit card company had contacted her about unusual activity in her account. She is disputing the charges and noted that it was a credit card that she rarely uses and felt that her identity had been stolen. The resident took an identity theft packet and will notify the credit bureaus. There was no other unusual activity on her other credit cards.

Missing cook

A local establishment reported at about 8:50 p.m. on Wednesday (Jan. 27) that a cook, a 48-year-old man, went missing after an argument with a dishwasher. Employees pointed police in the direction of his travel and police checked along the railroad tracks and notified the MBTA that someone might be on the tracks.

The man showed up about three hours later at the establishment in a state of intoxication. His wife took custody of him, police said.

Tank taken

A resident went to the station on Saturday (Jan. 30) at 10:50 a.m. to report that the propone tank to his gas grill was stolen. The tank was on an elevated deck in an unfenced yard. The incident is under investigation.

Wren invasion

A Fairoaks Lane resident notified police at about 6:50 p.m. on Saturday (Jan. 30) that she took her holiday wreath in and did not notice that it had wrens in it. The wrens were flying around her house. The animal control officer was notified and called to advise the resident on the best course of action, police said.

grant to revamp the police station.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said she had the opportunity to sit down with DeLuca earlier in the day.

"I really think we hired the energizer bunny. Saying you hit the ground running is a gross understatement," Quigley said. "We have energized new leadership in the town and it's an exciting time for the department and the town."

DeLuca said everything he has done so far has been a team effort, "everyone I've approached has jumped on (what I asked of them) with open arms."

The Board of Selectmen thanked retired Chief Brian Noonan, who served as the town's interim police chief for the past few months. He received a standing round of applause for his service.

"You've done a great job running the department the past few months and keeping things afloat," Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said. "You once told me you loved this department and it certainly shows."

Noonan, who had to quiet the applause, said it was "an honor and a pleasure to serve the department again."

DeLuca replaces Chief James Hussey, who served the town of Cohasset for the last five years and resigned in September to return to the Boston police force. Cohasset received over 80 resumes for the position.

A resident of Whitman, DeLuca recently served 10 years as Chief of Police for the Town of Duxbury. He also served as a Patrolman and Sergeant in the Boston Police Department for 12 years. He holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Human Services – Criminal Justice from Springfield College.

MBTA forum on new commuter boat terminal

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority will hold a community meeting from 6:30-8p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 10) at Hingham Town Hall, 212 Central St. to discuss the 60 percent design for the new Hingham Commuter Ferry Terminal Replacement and the new Intermodal Center.

At the meeting, MBTA project staff and the design consultant will provide an overview of the proposed design and schedule.

CANDIDATES CORNER

COURTESY PHOTO

Jennifer, Casey Belle, Paul (candidate), and Quinn Ognibene.

Ognibene announces candidacy for School Committee

Cohasset resident, Paul M. Ognibene, announces today his candidacy for School Committee. Ognibene said, "I've launched my campaign to serve our schools and do what I can to help ensure that all of Cohasset's students have the opportunity to receive a world-class public education."

Lincoln P. Bloomfield, long-time Cohasset resident, MIT professor emeritus, and former State Department and White House official, said of Ognibene's decision, "There is nothing more important for our society and America's future than world-class education that produces technologically-skilled workers, innovative entrepreneurs, and effective leaders. This demands schools that represent the best we can be. All my children went through Cohasset schools when the schools were at their best – and worst. Paul Ognibene is an ideal candidate because he not only understands the broader priorities, but will be an activist in helping Cohasset's school system be the gold standard it deserves to be."

Ognibene believes that the school system's strength depends on four elements: (1) motivated, curious students; (2) concerned, involved parents; (3) dedicated, enthusiastic teachers; and (4) well-equipped facilities and sufficient resources.

"Cohasset possesses all the tools needed to achieve top-tier results. As a father of two young children — one of whom will be starting kindergarten at Osgood this year — my priority as a School Committee member will be to ensure that we capitalize on our unique opportunity to be not only one of the finest public school systems in Massachusetts, but the country as well," Ognibene said.

Ognibene added, "I'm interested in applying my entrepreneurial business background and passion for problem solving in a leadership position in our schools. On April 10th's election day, I hope to earn the privilege of serving Cohasset's schools and the community in general."

Paul Ognibene is a small business owner and entrepreneur. He earned a BA in economics from Boston College and an MBA from Harvard Business School. He and his wife Jennifer and children, Casey Belle and Quinn, reside at 44 Beach St. For additional information, please contact Paul Ognibene at (781) 383-0597 or Paul@VoteforPaulO.com.

Grants available for cleaner travel options quality and mobility, and reduce congestion in the region.

Among the ideas are some the town has heard about before. Brewer resurrected his idea for a "one-way Sunday" on Cohasset's most scenic roadway – Jerusalem Road to Atlantic Avenue to Beach Street. The idea would be to allow only one-way traffic on Sundays to promote walking and biking in a safe manner.

Sidewalks to create safe access to the MBTA stations in Cohasset and North Scituate were bigger ticket items. Working with the T to create the opportunity for overnight parking at the Cohasset station or creating a bike lane on Route 228 and Route 3A were lower cost options.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said it has been proposed to him to have an on-demand walk signal at the King Street/Cohasset Plaza intersection.

"There is no limit to the amount of applications we can submit," Brewer said.

However, there is a time restraint: the deadline for grant applications is April 1. Given the short timetable, Brewer said he was looking at conducting one or two forums to gain input and perspective from residents.

"I want to vet the ideas we have and maybe get some new ones," Brewer said.

Selectman Ted Carr thought a forum was a great idea, "a forum is a great way to engage the community and get a dialogue going on the issue."

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley wanted to see an additional alternative to the forum for those who could not attend. She suggested creating an online survey to gather input.

As far as Brewer can tell there is no matching requirement on these grants.

A date on the forum is in the works, stay tuned to the Mariner for updates.

Bike racks are in

Last winter, Planning Board member Clark Brewer came before the Selectmen to gain permission to apply for a $3000 grant to purchase several bike racks. Cohasset was awarded the grant and the bike racks have arrived. They will be placed at key places throughout the village, the Little League fields on North Main St., and Town Hall.

The grant is from the Metropolitan Area Planning Council as part of their regional bike-parking program.

The grant only pays for the purchase of the bike racks, not for their installation. The racks, which are currently being stored at Brewer's home, will be installed when the ground thaws.

If any groups or individuals are willing to donate time to install the bike racks, contact Brewer at clarkbrewer@comcast.net.

Ognibene to run for school board

Water Commission race emerges

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

One School Committee seat still awaits a candidate.

One candidate has come forward to run for one of two seats on the School Committee. Paul Ognibene of 44 Beach Street took out nomination papers on Tuesday. In addition, a race for the Water Commission seat has emerged.

Citizens have until Feb. 18 to take out nomination papers.

Ognibene has lived in Cohasset for four years and is the father of two, his oldest will begin her Cohasset Public School education at Osgood in the fall.

"I was looking for a way to serve the schools and Cohasset in general...I think School Committee is a good match for my interest and ability," Ognibene. If elected, he said he would bring an entrepreneurial spirit, business mind and a passion for problem solving to the committee.

"I think it's important for Cohasset to have one of the finest public schools in Massachusetts, if not the country," Ognibene said.

Christopher Seebeck of 36 Riverview Drive will face off against incumbent candidate Nathaniel Palmer of Little Harbor Road who is seeking his third term on the board.

"I think the mission of a local water department is to provide the best quality water at the best price. A lot of folks I've been talking to in town don't feel this water commission and department is living up to that mission," Seebeck said, adding one of his goals would be to bring more transparency and openness to the department.

Seebeck and his family moved to Cohasset in 2004 and he has spent his career working in operation and IT. He recently changed jobs that allows him to be more local, "I thought this would be an appropriate time to give back."

Also this week incumbents Sarah Pease of Sankey Road and Stacey Weaver of Nichols Road signaled their intention to seek re-election. A newcomer to the Library Trustees, Henry Rattenbury, previously took out papers to seek one of three three-year terms on that board.

"I think it's important for Cohasset to have one of the finest public schools in Massachusetts, if not the country."
— Paul Ognibene

Abigail Alves and Andrew Quigley took out papers for seats on the Recreation Commission. However, Quigley, who is currently serving on the Recreation Commission as an appointee, told the Mariner this week he does not intend to run for the seat. Alves, who is running for re-election, is seeking the five-year term.

Two candidates have emerged to run for the Board of Selectmen: Leland Jenkins of Jerusalem Road and sitting Selectman Paul Carlson of Old Coach Road.

Helen "Taffy" Nothnagle of 36 Atlantic Ave. has pulled papers to run for the Housing Authority. She has served on the committee as the Governor's appointee for the past seven years.

William Hannon of 79 Linden Drive has taken out nomination papers for the new associate member position on the Planning Board. The associate member will sit in and possibly vote on special permit applications. The position is for a three-year term.

Sankey Road resident Stuart Ivimey pulled nomination papers to seek re-election to his seat on the Planning Board.

James Dow pulled papers for a three-year term on the Sewer Commission. This is Dow's second bid for the seat; he lost to sitting sewer commissioner Wayne Sawchuk in 2008.

Elsa Miller is seeking re-election to the Board of Assessors.

Long-time member of the Board of Health, Steve Bobo of 292 Jerusalem Road, has indicated his intention to seek re-election to his post.

Nomination papers for the annual Town Election for 2010 became available on Thursday, Jan. 7. Citizens have until Feb. 18 to return their papers to the Town Clerk's office.

In order to hold an elected office, one must be a registered voter of the town. Citizens are not running for office until they take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies signatures.

Positions available for the 2010 Town Election

- Selectmen – Two for three years
- School Committee – Two for three years
- Trustees Paul Pratt Memorial Library – Three for three years
- Assessor – One for three years
- Board of Health – One for three years
- Cohasset Housing Authority – One for five years
- Planning Board – One for five years
- Planning Board Associate Member – One for three years
- Recreation Commission – One for five years
- Recreation Commission – One for one year to fill an unexpired term
- Sewer Commission – One for three years
- Water Commission – One for three years

Friday, March 5, 2009 is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting to be held on Saturday, March 27, 2010 and for the Annual Town Election to be held on Saturday, April 10, 2010.

Selectmen wave Senior Center on Memorandum of intent signed with Swim Center

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A trio of articles passed at the annual Town Meeting last year gave the Board of Selectmen the authority to negotiate a land swap or other exchange with the Cohasset Swim Center.

If the building of the Senior Center were a race it most certainly would be the hurdles. One after another, the visionaries behind a new Senior Center are leaping over the smaller hurdles, but still have a marathon to go before groundbreaking.

This week, the Council on Elder Affairs paid visits to the Board of Selectmen and Community Preservation Committee (see related story this page).

With a memorandum of intent from the Swim Center, the Council on Elder Affairs was before the Board of Selectmen to get their blessing to move forward to other pertinent boards.

Earlier this month, the Social Service League received permission from the Attorney General and the Supreme Judicial Court to donate up to $1 million to the construction of a Senior Center.

On the heels of that positive news, the Council on Elder Affairs and the Cohasset Swim Center Trust have negotiated a "memorandum of intent" to enable a land swap. The land swap will create a parcel of town-owned land adjacent to the swim center's parking lot off Sohier Street targeted for the Senior Center and senior affordable housing complex.

A trio of articles passed at the annual Town Meeting last year gave the Board of Selectmen the authority to negotiate a land swap or other exchange with the Cohasset Swim Center. With the passage of the three articles, the Board of Selectmen has the authority to use a five-acre parcel of land to negotiate, to accept a gift (or purchase) of land from the Swim Center for the sole purpose of a building a Senior Center.

In order to go through with the land acquisition the town must go through the state outlined procurement process (Chapter 30-B). Although the memorandum of intent is not legally binding on either party, both the town and the swim center have pledged to work together in good faith.

Town Counsel Lou Ross provided a framework of language for the parcels of land, then the specific points were added by the Council on Elder Affairs and the Swim Center trust.

"We felt it was important to show we have this agreement," said Glenn Pratt, who is on the Senior Center building committee.

The configuration of the parcel enables a 10,000 square foot footprint for a to-be-built building, said John Cavanaro, civil engineer and Cohasset resident, who has done the preliminary site engineering work.

The land swap would enable the parcel to have frontage on North Main Street, and hopefully allow the Senior Center to tie-in to town sewer, Pratt said.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said she wanted to be sure the process going forward in "an open and transparent way."

Pratt said more specifics about the agreement in terms of licenses and responsibilities that will be talked about as the project moves along. The Senior Center building committee plans to meet with the Planning Board and the Sewer Commission within the next month.

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to see the building committee move forward in the project and asked for progress reports as they continue to tackle the hurdles.

Senior Center back on warrant

$220K CPC allocation needs amendment

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I'm concerned in making this allocation it is asking the CPC to shoulder the entire burden."
— Stuart Ivimey, Community Preservation Committee

At last year's Town Meeting excitement buzzed after voters approved an allocation of $220,000 in community preservation funding.

The allocation was meant to move the Senior Center project forward, give it the "seed money" to create a detailed site engineering and professional design services. The Council on Elder Affairs hoped to use the funding to kick-start fundraising and gain enthusiasm for the project.

However, almost a year later, the funding is still not available – and it needs another Town Meeting vote in order to make it available. Voters will take up the issue at 2010 Annual Town Meeting March 27.

Last spring, the community preservation allocation had two sets of conditions.

First, the allocation would be available in two equal parts. The second available only after a business plan and updated conceptual plan were produced and evidence given they had a permittable site near the Swim Center.

Second, an addendum, proposed the day of Town Meeting, conditioned the first $110,000 allocation on the Social Service League's receiving approval from the Attorney General to make their $1 million donation for the project.

This amendment, or second condition, is what has caused the Council on Elder Affairs to be back before the CPC this week – and Town Meeting in March. When the Attorney General and Superior Court approved the Social Service League's Mary Hooper Trust donation a month ago they conditioned its release on having all the other funding in place for the project. This condition essentially makes that money unavailable for preliminary design and permitting.

Furthermore, as a restraint inherent in the Community Preservation Act (CPA), the funding was intended for the housing component of the project.

At the Community Preservation Committee meeting on Tuesday, CPC chairman Stuart Ivimey was concerned that the project had changed fundamentally since the appropriation was authorized at the 2009 Annual Town Meeting – and those changes made the appropriation illegal, in terms of compliance with the CPA.

In terms of the Senior Center project, CPC funds can only be used toward the affordable housing component. The Senior Center itself does not fit into any of the narrowly defined categories for community preservation funding.

"The CPC money has to be proportional to expense devoted to the housing," Ivimey said. When the CPC recommended the allocation to Town Meeting, and voters approved it, it was with the understanding the Social Service League Mary Hooper Trust donation would be available as well.

"I'm concerned in making this allocation it is asking the CPC to shoulder the entire burden," Ivimey said. "I don't think this project now qualifies under the CPA."

In addition, Ivimey said the cost estimate for the project has gone from $2 million to $5 million and questioned the feasibility of raising an additional $4 million.

"I don't want our $220,000 to go to naught…the risk is just too great," Ivimey said.

But, within the committee Ivimey stood alone in his opinion.

"The support of the CPC and the $220,000 says a lot to the community and will help them raise the rest of the money," said Susan Sardina, CPC member.

Council on Elder Affairs chairman Joe Nedrow agreed, "we're really stuck and we really need your money to get to the next stage."

CPC member Al Moore agreed with Ivimey that the money was being put at risk, "but we're doing it for damn good cause…we've spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on ballfields for the kids, why not do something for the seniors?"

The CPC voted to recommend changing the article's language in a majority vote; Ivimey was the sole opposing vote. Town Meeting will have the ultimate say on March 27.

Film on Haiti ties in with Reads Together

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"Poto Mitan brings honor and respect to the women who have been the true backbone of Haiti. In conditions of despair, they bring hope to a people by their efforts and well reason arguments, by their keen intelligence, and their undaunted spirit."

— Patrick Bellegarde-Smith, Haitian American Scholar

Cohasset Reads Together begins today. The town-wide read is about coming together as a community and engaging in a conversation that focuses on issues and themes of a particular book.

"It's truly meant to spark a town-wide dialogue and sharing of ideas. All generations are invited to join in," says Jackie Rafferty, Director of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

To begin the "conversation," all are invited to see "Poto Mitan: Haitian Women, Pillars of the Global Economy on Thursday, Feb. 11th at 7 p.m. The screening, which takes place in the library meeting room, will be followed by a discussion. Light refreshments will be served."

"Told through the compelling lives of five courageous Haitian women workers, Poto Mitan gives the global economy a human face. Each woman's personal story explains neoliberal globalization, how it gendered, and how it impacts Haiti. And while Poto Mitan offers an in-depth understanding of Haiti, its focus on womens' subjugation, worker exploitation, poverty, and resistance demonstrates that these are global struggles." (www.potomitan.net)

The topic of Haiti could not be timelier. The 2010 selection, "Mountains Beyond Mountains" by Tracy Kidder, is a tribute to Paul Farmer. Dr. Farmer began a lifelong commitment to Haiti when still a student, in 1983, working with villages in Haiti's Central Plateau; the following year he began medical school at Harvard, and two years later helped found Zanmi Lastane (Creole for Partners In Health), serving as its medical director from 1991 to the present. Boston-based Partners In Health was founded in 1987.

As Haiti struggles to rebuild and reinvent itself in the aftermath of a catastrophic earthquake, this documentary and book selection become even more relevant to the times we live in.

Poto Mitan was made in 2009 and is approximately 50 minutes long. Whether you've had an opportunity to read "Mountains Beyond Mountains" or not, all are welcome and encouraged to attend what promises to be a very thought provoking film. Visit www.cohassetlibrary.org for details on the entire Cohasset Reads Together Program.

Mountains Beyond Mountains is the selection for a book discussion that will take place at the library on Wednesday, Feb. 10, 10:30 a.m. There are multiple copies of the book available for check out from the library, as well as for sale at Cohasset's Buttonwood Books & Toys.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

GROUNDHOG

Hey there Cohasset. Ok, the Groundhog dude saw his shadow (imagine that, doesn't he always?) and that meant 49 more days of Winter. Well, guess what? That was three days ago so now we are a little bit closer to Spring, RIGHT? We will see but the way I see it is that if it is going to snow, bring on the big stuff or else, just jump into Spring! Anyways, I am hoping that everyone is handling the cold and yucky stuff ok and that the bugs and illnesses that many are reporting go away soon. Keep thinking warm, positive thoughts! Make sure to enjoy your plans for the Super Bowl on Sunday and eat well, drink safe and hopefully, win your bets! Now, on with the news.

DEAN'S LIST

A huge congratulations is being sent out to Samantha Snow from Cohasset, daughter of Mary and Kenny Snow, who made the Dean's List for the Fall 2009 semester at Bridgewater State College! Your family and friends are so proud of your accomplishment Sammi and you should be too! Keep up the great work.

GIRL SCOUTS

We have some news about not one but two Girl Scout Troops in town this week. Daisy Girl Scout Troop #74022 is holding a cookie sale at Shaw's this coming Sunday (yum, just in time for the Super Bowl Munchies) from 11 am until 3:00 pm. All of the proceeds from this event will be donated to the American Red Cross for help in Haiti. Make sure to stop in if you can and support this effort.

Another great effort that is for children a bit closer to home is also being run right now. Troop 74812 has decided to hold a PJ (pajamas) Drive for Cradles To Crayons for local kiddos in communities around the area who are in need of a warm, cozy pair of jammies! A collection box will be in the Deer Hill School, Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, the South Shore Community Center and St. Anthony's Parish Center.

The goal for this venture is to come together with The Boston Bruins Annual PJ drive in working to collect 15,000 pairs of pajamas for local children. The school that collects the most pairs of pajamas receives an ice cream party with the Bruins mascot Blades, compliments of BJ's Wholesale Club. Other prizes include Boston Bruins hockey pucks, and a school participation plaque. The pajamas should be new, or in like-new condition. Please use good judgment when considering which jammies to share. The deadline for this wonderful effort is Friday, Feb. 12th! We can all help with this very worthwhile community effort. Thank you in advance to Dagny Nies and the rest of this very caring troop in organizing it all. If you don't have time to drop off pajamas or need to have them picked up, please call Mary at 781-383-6501 or Andrea at 781-383-9791 and the troop will come to your home.

WINTERFEST

Mark your calendars for WinterFest Beer and Wine Tasting event! On Saturday, Feb. 13 from 7 to 10 pm., beautiful Hatherly Country Club will host "WinterFest", featuring red and white wine selection, seasonal beers, gourmet food pairings and live and silent auction. Tickets are $50 and can be purchased online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org , in person at the Shelter during public visiting hours, or by telephone order with Visa or Mastercard at (781) 544-4533. Advanced ticket purchase is recommended; tickets may not be available for purchase at the door. All proceeds from this event will support the exceptional care of the animals at the Scituate Animal Shelter. The Scituate Animal Shelter is a non-profit, no-kill animal shelter proudly serving the greater South Shore region.

MAGICAL MOON

The Friends of the Magical Moon Foundation (www.themagicalmoonfoundation.org) would like to invite you to attend a "Knight to Remember" to honor one of their young Knights, Ricky Hoffman of Scituate. Ricky was 11 when he passed away in November. He bravely battled brain cancer for two and a half years and touched many lives. All proceeds to go to the Magical Moon Foundation in Marshfield. This event will be held on Saturday, Feb. 20th from 6-11 pm. The special evening will be held at the Shaw's Center (http://theshawscenter.com) in Brockton just 5 minutes off of Route 24. At the event, you will enjoy a beautiful sit-down dinner that is fit for royalty, a Silent and Live Auction, Music to fill a Kingdom with Love for your Dining and Dancing Pleasure featuring a ballroom dance performance with Boston's nationally ranked youth dancers accompanied by Conor O'Brien www.conormusic.com) and friends and an evening filled with magic for all. Tickers are $75 per person and advance ticket purchases are required. Call the Magical Moon Foundation at 1-800-840-0205.

That is all the news for this week. Send it all to me for next weeks copy no later than Tuesday by 5:00 pm.

FEBRUARY VACATION: February Vacation is only a week away and for all those who are looking for some fun, entertaining and safe plans for your little ones, consider sending them to the February Frolic Week at Our World! Programs are running from 9:30-10:45, 10:45-12 and a Lunch Bunch from 12-12:30 and each day will focus on a fun theme with art, music, movement, nature, indoor and a bit of outdoor play and so much more! This is for children ages 18 months to 7 years and children will be separated as needed by ages to give each child the experience based on their ages and needs. The dates are Feb 16-Feb 19th and you can choose the number of days and times that you would like. Each time block that you register your child for will be $12 for members and $15 for non-members. Lunch-Bunch is $5. Make sure to bring a nut-free snack and lunch with drinks, warm clothes and even a pair of slippers if you like. Also, bring snow pants/suit, boots, hats and gloves for outdoor play.

Not all sessions will have an outdoor time but we want to be prepared for the ones that do. Please LABEL all items to help keep items from being lost. For more information, check out the website or call for Miss Jen at 781-383-3198 or by sending an email to jen@ourworldcgdm.org

ITALIAN NIGHT: Here is another fun event for the whole family to enjoy. The Our World Family Fun Italian Nite is being held on Saturday, Feb. 27 from 4 to 7 pm. Come to this super family style event and enjoy a late winter celebration here at Our World! We hope you can come out and join us for this fun night. Proceeds will go towards upgrades and improvements we are in the process of doing at the museum. This evening will be a fun-filled event for the whole family to come and enjoy. Plenty of food, movies, music and games with a European Flair! A few raffles will be held and even a bit of dancing if you dare. The meal will include salad, pasta, dessert and beverages with adult beverages available for an additional fee. The cost is $10 per person and $30 per family. Reservations are required and need to be made no later than February 24th. Please contact Miss Jean by calling the Museum at 781-383-3198 or sending her an email at jean@ourworldcgdm.org Hope to see you all there!

NEXT SESSION: Our next session of classes and programs begins the week of Feb. 23 and will run for 8 weeks. These will include classes for ages 18 months through school-age in areas like art, drama, music, recycling and so much more. To obtain a schedule, make sure to check out the website and sign up to receive the newsletter as well as become a fan on our Facebook Page. Cohasset residents help raise $2300 with card series

"The artist tried to really capture the essence of the animal," Carling said. Some artists spent time with the animals while others worked from a photo.

Artists included Jill Flynne, Ivy Frances, Judy St. Peter, Tina Watson, Sue Dreamer, Scott Leaver, Mary Beth LoPiccolo and elementary-aged artist Alison Cook.

On each of the cards is an animal-related quote meticulously researched and carefully chosen by Carling, an English major in college.

One of the cards, which features the shelter dog "Natalie," a Chihuahua-Dachshund mix, now has special meaning to the Sturinos – they have since adopted her. Carling said she fell in love with her when she was trying to get the dog to pose for the note-card artwork. Now she answers to the name of Chloe.

Inside is the following proverb, "In a perfect world every dog would have a home and every home would have a dog."

All of the animals featured on the note cards have since been adopted, "(the note cards) were an opportunity to advertise the animals at the shelter and let people know this animal, or animals like her, is looking for a home," Carling said.

Judy St. Peter, a Cohasset artist, volunteered her talent and created two acrylic paintings for the note-card series. One of the paintings is of a Border collie, the other is a Golden retriever with an orange cat.

St. Peter, a self-described animal lover, currently provides a loving home to two feral cats she rescued from almost certain death during a cold winter. She trapped them in crates and socialized them as best she could.

"I always have had a love for animals, so it is easy for me to paint them…this seemed like a way I could do something for the shelter," St. Peter said.

The first order of 400 note cards came in and sold out almost overnight. A second order was placed for 800 cards and only a few packages are left in that order. South Shore Printing and Mailing of North Scituate printed the cards at a discount.

"The support has been huge. Everyone want to give, but it's nice to get something back, too," Carling said. "With this project everyone is getting something – the artist, the stores, the customers and, of course, the shelter."

The note cards have raised $2,300 for the shelter. All the proceeds will go toward the day-to-day care of the animals – food, vet care and supplies.

"The final product everyone agreed was unique and beautiful. The enthusiasm of the artists and the Sturinos and their collaboration for the benefit of homeless animals is very touching," said Jennifer Durkin, chair of the shelter's marketing and communications committee.

The Scituate Animal Shelter is a non-profit, no-kill animal shelter that serves the Scituate and its surrounding South Shore communities. In 2009, the shelter moved to a brand new facility – years in the making – on Route 3A in Scituate. The new facility allows them to take in more homeless animals, up to 15 dogs and 50 cats, with some space for smaller, more unusual creatures, like guinea pigs or ferrets.

In 2009 alone the Scituate Animal Shelter found homes for 260 homeless animals and reunited 100 lost animals with their family. Cohasset families made up a large number of those homes adopting 23 animals in the last year.

With the new facility, as it was as its former location, the shelter is entirely dependent on the support of area residents and donations to do its job.

According to Durkin, the organization is a lean one. In 2009, nearly 89 cents of every dollar donated went directly to the care of the animals in need. To achieve that kind of efficiency the shelter depends on an active and enthusiastic volunteer corp.

"We have a wonderful legion of volunteers, but we'd always love to have more. There is constant and growing need for volunteers," Durkin said.

In addition to volunteering, Durkin said there are many ways to support the shelter. Fundraising events are held periodically throughout the year; coming up next weekend (Feb. 13) is a WinterFest Beer and Wine Tasting event at the Hatherly Country Club. A wish list of supplies is posted on the shelter's website, www.scituateanimalshelter.org. A cookbook, Bone Appetit, is available for purchase at the shelter, as well as a 2010 calendar.

"Our job is never done at the animal shelter, but with community support together we can make the job easier and give animals another chance at a happy life – and that makes it all worthwhile," Durkin said.

To volunteer or find out more information about the shelter, call 781-545-4533 or visit www.scituateanimalshelter.org.

Notecads are available in Cohasset at Twist, Mariposa Massage Therapy, Buttonwood Books & Toys, and at the Scituate Animal Shelter.

Sherry Sturino, left, of Cohasset, and her daughter, Carling, helped put together note cards to raise money for the Scituate Animal Shelter. Each set contains 8 cards that are being sold for $12 each. In the first run they made 400 cards, and the second run had 800 cards.

WinterFest to support Shelter, Feb. 13

Mark your calendars for WinterFest Beer and Wine Tasting event! On Saturday, February 13 from 7 to 10 pm., beautiful Hatherly Country Club will host "WinterFest", featuring red and white wine selection, seasonal beers, gourmet food pairings and live and silent auction. Tickets are $50 and can be purchased online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org , in person at the Shelter during public visiting hours, or by telephone order with Visa or Mastercard at (781) 544-4533. Advanced ticket purchase is recommended; tickets may not be available for purchase at the door. All proceeds from this event will support the exceptional care of the animals at the Scituate Animal Shelter. The Scituate Animal Shelter is a non-profit, no-kill animal shelter proudly serving the greater South Shore region...The Lucky Ones Come To Us!

GIMME SHELTER

Tigress, an adult female Tiger cat, is on the quiet side and does not require a lot of attention.

'Good companion' needs new home

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Tigress, an adult female Tiger cat. She's about six years old and would make a great companion for a senior or for that matter, anyone who wants a cat that enjoys petting and brushing. She's on the quiet side and doesn't require a lot of attention. She's content to sit in a window or in a sunny spot but will welcome any attention. She's been with us for quite a while and thinks the shelter is her home. We all love her and would like her to find a home of her own with a very special person.

If you're interested in adopting Tigress or any of our felines, call Shirley at 781-925-3380. Kitten season will soon be upon us. If you'd like to be pre-approved to adopt a kitten, call the shelter.

We all love her and would like her to find a home of her own with a very special person.

Open hours are 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays; and 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays. To leave a message, call 877-378-1195; physical address, 50 L St., Hull; mailing address, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. Visit the website at www.hsar.org to check out the many available felines. To become a member, call Mary at 781-925-3121 for details.

'History Trivia' should be a fun night!

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold the second of its 2010 regular Wednesday Night Lecture Series on Feb. 17 and invites members and non-members to join in an evening of "History Trivia." This program is a light-hearted look at people, places and events throughout history with a goal of having fun, seeing what we can recall and, maybe even learning a little something new.

Program coordinator, Judy Dickstein, playing the role of game host, will administer a series of questions, some easy, some hard, and a couple tricky. The game can be played on your own, or as a team with small prizes at the end. This event will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Society's headquarters in the Pratt Building at 106 S. Main St. As always with the Wednesday Night Lectures, there is no charge for the program and light refreshments will be served.

WEDDINGS

COURTESY PHOTO

Caitlin Mary Flint and First Lt. Michael Joseph Walsh, Jr., USMC, were married on Sept. 6.

Walsh — Flint

Caitlin Mary Flint and First Lt. Michael Joseph Walsh, Jr., USMC, were married on Sept. 6, 2009 at Christ the King Catholic Church in Mashpee.

The bride, who grew up in Cohasset, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Flint of Hingham. She is a graduate of Milton Academy and a 2006 graduate of Middlebury College where she earned a bachelors degree with honors in Economics and Spanish. She is employed as an Associate in Global Securities at Goldman, Sachs & Co. in New York City.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Walsh of Milton. He is also a graduate of Milton Academy and a 2006 graduate of St. Anselm College where he earned a bachelors degree in Criminal Justice. He is a first lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps and is currently in Advanced Jet Training at the Naval Air Station in Kingsville, Texas.

The bride was given in marriage by her father in a ceremony celebrated by the Reverend John R. Mulvehill of Cohasset. A perfect summer evening provided the background for the reception on the ocean at the Popponesst Inn at New Seabury in Mashpee.

The bride's sisters, Kara and Jacqueline Flint, served as maids of honor. Bridesmaids were Sarah Ceglarski, Emily Driscoll, Katherine Horvitz and Maryanne Verzosa, all of New York City, Caroline Curtis, Molly McGuinness and Heather Wright, all of Boston, and Corey Sullivan of Cohasset. Kylie Coffman of Cohasset, cousin of the bride, served as junior bridesmaid.

The groom's brothers, James and Ryan Walsh, served as best men. Groomsmen were Terrence Walsh, brother of the groom, John Cronin and Tripp Egan of Quincy, Michael Aylward of Hanover, Rob Curran and Brendan Price of South Boston, Brian Dobler of Londonderry, N.H. and Andrew Gartman of Alexandria, Va.

Readings were done by Terrence Walsh, brother of the groom, and Paula Sweeney, godmother of the bride. Kathleen Sweeney of Wayne, Pa. and Judith Theriault of Peabody, served as greeters.

Seven of the groom's fellow Marine pilots were able to attend the wedding. Their service to our country was gratefully acknowledged by all the guests.

The couple traveled to Hawaii in December for their honeymoon.

Raising athletics and bus fees still on the table

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Can we investigate the ability of the boosters of fully funding the program, can the boosters come up with a little bit more?"
— Alfred Slanetz, School Committee

Fees – and the possible increase of fees – are still a hot topic with the School Committee.

The focus is on two areas of the budget: athletics and transportation.

Some savings has been found since the last School Committee meeting, but also the school department reported some budget estimates have gone up. With some more concrete information for several areas expected by the end of the month, the School Committee did not feel ready to make a decision this week. They will take up the issue at a meeting in the last week in February (to be scheduled).

The options were laid out for both sets of fees, and some changes to original budget estimates were reviewed.

The one option that has been ruled out in terms of transportation is scaling back busing to only include those students federally mandated to be transported. If the schools went forward with that scenario, they would pay about $16,000 more than the current transportation budget estimate largely because they would not be bringing in revenue from the bus fees.

In the meantime, the school department has found some savings in the bus maintenance line item. Last year the bus maintenance line item soared above $90,000; this year the school is asking for $42,000. School business manager Dave DeGennaro is not sure of the different approach for bus maintenance to bring this cost down, but said he is currently researching possibilities. Additionally, through changing some driving routes around, some savings was also realized in the transportation salary line item for next year.

Currently, any child in grades K through 6 whose residence is two miles or less from the attending school, and all children in grades 7 through 12 have to pay a fee to receive transportation services. The fee for one student is $180, with a family cap of $540. Students who drive to school pay a $180 parking fee.

In terms of athletics both cutting junior varsity squads and increasing user fees as high as $550 per sport are on the table. Currently, the athletic budget is a $155,000 operating line item in the draft fiscal 2011 line item. The School Committee needs to figure how to fund that to keep athletics afloat. To complement the operating budget, the schools are forecasting $216,000 in offsets from user fees, gate receipts and booster club donations.

"I feel athletics is an important part of the educational experience," Slanetz said, but was aware the school's budget had to give somewhere. "Can we investigate the ability of the boosters of fully funding the program, can the boosters come up with a little bit more?"

Over the past four years the athletics portion of the budget has stayed relatively stable as boosters and increased user fees have covered increased costs. That translates to depending on $162,652 in offsets in fiscal 2008 to $216,600 scheduled for fiscal 2011 – an increase of $54,000.

Ellen Maher of Old Pasture Road and an organizer of two booster clubs said the boosters were doing more than what goes through the athletic department's office. In addition, the booster clubs several of which also run the youth programs are subject to a facility fee, which took effect last year.

"We can't raise any more money. It's the same parents paying facility fees, user fees and supporting the booster clubs," Maher said, adding there needed to be a full and delicate dialogue on the subject if that's route the School Committee wants to take.

The current athletic user fee schedule is $250 for the first sport, $250 for the second sport and $150 for a third sport (there is a $900 cap per family). Slanetz said the increased fee could be $600 per student per sport.

One fee that was definitively increased at Wednesday night's meeting was an increase in tuition for the pre-kindergarten program at Osgood. Tuition was raised from $2,000 to $2,200 for the upcoming school year. The primary driver for the increase was the addition of third classroom for this school year.

As a philosophical argument, Slanetz said if the schools were forced to increase their fees for their services, he felt is was only equitable for the town side fees to go up as well. He said town departments like the library, the beach/RTF stickers and recreation programs as fees that could stand to rise.

"We're trying to keep the level of services going based upon the backs of parents," Slanetz said, adding he intends to bring the issue up at an upcoming Budget Planning Group meeting.

From the audience, Maher said this philosophy had to be considered very carefully.

"A lot of the same families will be hit both ways if the town and schools increase fees. It's an interesting concept, but you need to be very careful who the target audience is," Maher said.

Slanetz understood, but said options were becoming scarce, "there are only so many time we can pull the rabbit out of the hat."

Superintendent Denise Walsh said the schools could receive an extension to their stimulus grant, which supported the integrated pre-school program last year to the tune of approximately $164,000. Circuit breaker, the state's reimbursement program for special education, is also a wild card.

"We'll have a better idea at the end of February," Walsh said.

A to-be-scheduled School Committee meeting is expected to occur the last week in February. The School Committee will certify its budget after a public hearing on Wednesday, March 3.

'Leveling' forum well attended

"I don't want any child to be referred to as a college prep kid, an honors kids or a SPED kid."
— Denise Walsh, Superintendent of Schools

About 100 parents came out to the middle-high school's forum on Tuesday held to address the issue of leveling, or de-leveling, classes at the high school.

The forum was held to clarify and respond to information being circulated about the possibility of classes at the middle-high school being "de-leveled," meaning combining college prep level with honors level in one classroom.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini wrote a letter to explain what is going on with scheduling and leveling at the high school level. The letter was mailed to all parents of Middle-High School students and was posted on the high school's website last week.

The topic came up again at Wednesday's School Committee meeting. Several parents were in the audience to find out more information and what was next in terms of the discussion.

At the crux of the discussion Wednesday night, the School Committee said the subtle changes happening at the high school were all moving toward the goals set forth on the five-year strategic plan (which is reaching the end of its useful life and needs to be re-vamped next year).

School Committee chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said the goal was to have high expectations for every single child and to challenge them to meet or exceed their aptitude.

Yet, parent and public school teacher by profession Chris Kerr said it was the details and the how it would be accomplished, not the vision that was lacking in the message from the schools. He had concerns about accomplishing differentiated instruction in a high level AP class with 30 students and how much decisions were based on budget concerns.

"We never make education decisions driven primarily by budget because that's at the heart of what we do," said School Committee member Alfred Slanetz.

Superintendent Denise Walsh said her ultimate goal and hope is a day when children are not labeled.

"I don't want any child to be referred to as a college prep kid, an honors kids or a SPED kid," Walsh said.

The greater vision, beyond extending the offering of heterogeneous elective classes for all core academic areas including math and foreign language, which currently don't have courses with college prep and honors levels, is to ensure each child is reaching his or her potential.

Walsh said the high school has been successful in moving honors students into more AP classes and need to also focus on getting college prep students into honors courses.

The School Committee and superintendent invited parents to seek out more information on the school district's website, www.cohassetk12.org, or send questions to the school department.

Walsh said she aims to set up some working sessions where parents can discuss different teaching methods and philosophies after the budget season.

A more complete story on Wednesday's discussion on leveling will appear in next week's Mariner.

Nautical photographer Onne van der Wal visits Focus Gallery

On Sunday, Feb. 21 from 3 to 5 p.m. renowned nautical, sailing and yacht photographer, Onne van der Wal, will make a return visit to the Focus Gallery in Cohasset. Van der Wal will give a presentation titled "High Latitudes" – a visual journey showing images from his recent photographic expeditions to remote high latitude areas, as far north as Spitsbergen in the Norwegian Artic and as far south as Antarctica. The presentation will include images of sailing in and around these regions as well as the native wildlife, raging oceans, fishing and the flora and fauna that make these areas so photographically stunning. Van der Wal will also discuss his unique experience in 2003 photographing an epic journey to retrace the steps of Sir Ernest Shackleton on the Island of South Georgia in the Falkland Islands.

Van der Wal's photographs have been featured in countless publications and in advertising materials for a long list of clients. His fine art photographs are in numerous private and public collections around the world. He has also received the sponsorship by CANON as a Canon "Explorer of Light" – a recognition given to only 50 photographers in the world.

According to Focus Gallery owner, Cindy Vallino, "Onne's not only an incredible photographer, but a great speaker. The stories he tells are as amazing as the photographs!" The slideshow presentation on Feb. 21 will begin at 3 p.m. at the Dillon Gallery at the South Shore Art Center, followed by a reception and show of Van der Wal's fine art photography at the Focus Gallery directly across the street. Tickets are $15 per person and may be purchased at the gallery at 15 Depot Court, or by calling 781-383-0663. Vallino encourages families to come – "Onne's presentation would be of interest to all ages, and may be the perfect finish to the winter school break."

The Focus Gallery specializes in fine art photographic prints by a number of regional and internationally recognized photographers, including Mr. Van der Wal. More details about the High Latitudes presentation may be found at www.thefocusgallery.com.

MEDICARE AND HOME CARE

Medicare may be the answer for those who need help to cover home healthcare. To be eligible, you must meet certain conditions. A doctor must decide that you need skilled care in your home and prescribe it. You must need part-time or intermittent skilled nursing care, physical therapy, or speech-language services. Also, you must be homebound. This means that you are normally unable to leave home without considerable and taxing effort, and when you do leave home, you require the assistance of another person or "assistive" device. Services must be provided from a home health agency that is "certified" or approved by Medicare. Medicare may cover therapy, medical social services, and certain medical supplies and durable medical equipment.

If you have any questions about your parents' eligibility for Medicare, please call our office today. We know how hard it can be to take care of a homebound senior without help. Our experienced and bonded caregivers can take care of tasks like cooking, bathing, cleaning, and transportation, which will free up your time and make your loved ones' lives easier. Call 781-878-2994 today to learn about our wide variety of services, including a flexible schedule of care, from occasional respite to 24-hour care. We are located at 145 Washington St., Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

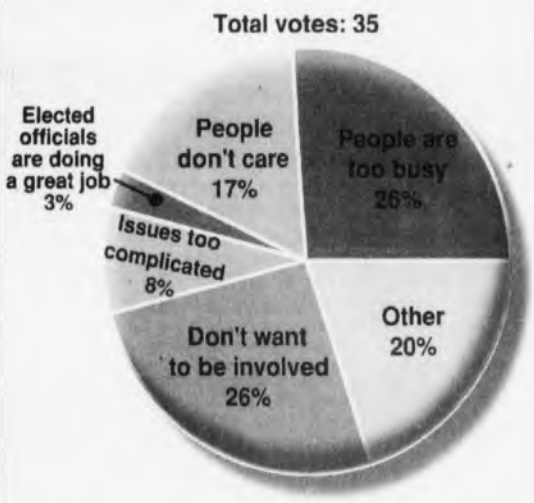
Election poll results

The results from our on-line poll on why so few citizens run for public office are in!

As you can see from the pie chart – most of those who voted think people are either too busy or don't want to get involved. As of Thursday morning, there were a total of 35 votes in the poll. The number of votes is disappointing but the poll feature that debuted last week as part of our newly redesigned Web site may take some getting used to.

While our polls are not scientific (it is possible to vote more than once if you have access to different computers), we think the polls can be a good vehicle to provide a quick snapshot of public opinion.

We have the ability to conduct polls as often as we want. This week we have a poll on the meal's tax. Be sure to visit: www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset to vote.



The poll is on the lower right of the homepage. Keep scrolling down and you will find it. We will publish results in next week's Mariner.

Polls on our "old" Web site included topics such as, what from Cohasset should Astronaut Steve Bowen take to space; what the meetinghouse pond on the common should be called; and opinions on regionalized dispatch and its effect on Cohasset. Those polls were successful in terms of participation.

Last week's poll question and the possible answers were:

Candidates have been few and far between in the last three town elections. What's your take on why?

- People are too busy.
- People don't care.
- Elected officials are doing a great job.
- Issues too complicated.
- Don't want to be involved.
- Other.

Our polls are on the lower right of the homepage. Keep scrolling down and you will find it.

We welcome ideas for new polls. Please email your thoughts to editor Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com

In the meantime, please vote in our meal's tax poll and check out our newly designed Web site at: www.wicked local.com/cohasset

Let us know your thoughts!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sincere naiveté about election

TO THE EDITOR:

I was amused by the sincere naiveté displayed in the Jan. 29 commentary in which President Obama's multiple failures were transmuted into golden deeds and miraculous successes.

Granted, the President displays his oratorical skills with numbing frequency, but how much of it is relevant to out real problems and to realistic solutions, or to what the knowledgeable portion of the electorate really wants? Exhibitions of grand philosophical rhetoric is not the same as effective executive action. For example, delegating the drafting of the health care bill to the special-interests-plagued Congress, instead of to the somewhat less-compromised White House staff, was not effective governance.

As for restoring American credibility around the world: sure, he remains popular with the crowds, but the experienced and savvy world leaders don't seem snookered, far from it. They may have disliked the previous President for his seeming contempt for them, but they knew enough not to contemplate rolling him.

Of course the President's weaknesses and misdirection are not cause for rejoicing; the nation (and the world) desperately needs an effective and sensible US Administration. Blaming the previous Administration for our troubles is naïve, reveals a distorted memory of facts and causes, and retards realistic and effective address to our troubles.

What is not so amusing is the realization that a substantial (even though shrinking) portion of the electorate suffer the same delusions as the commentary author, and may not vote for the change we really need when comes the opportunity.

Opportunity to be proud again

TO THE EDITOR:

Scott Brown's election last month was a political watershed that sent shock waves throughout our state and country, and was in no small way a resounding repudiation of President Obama and his unexpected jerk to a far left agenda. His partisan policies that cater to the most extreme left wing of his party are now costing him dearly; and rightly so. Obnoxious government interventions of all shapes and sizes, growing and unsustainable deficits, government controlled healthcare, and the codling of terrorists (e.g. "terrorist have feelings too") does not represent the vast majority of the electorate, both statewide and nationally.

Regrettably, the President has lost his way and it is now incumbent on the American people, through midterm elections, to move, push, or shove him toward the "center" of the political spectrum; no doubt kicking and screaming. The cold reality is that the far left and their socialist driven agenda does not represent our ideals as a nation; never has and never will. The fact that our country is comprised of mostly center/center right principals should be reflected in how we are governed and the policies and programs that are enacted. For President Obama to do otherwise, is to awaken the sleeping giant that stirs within each of us; Sir, be afraid, be very afraid as independents move en-mass to more moderate legislators.

To the far left minority that proclaim, in a fit of desperation, that it is time for the President to double down on their agenda; "Bring it on." The sooner we see the absurdity of their economics, the mirage of healthcare reform, the folly of their jobs programs, and their naive foreign affairs and terrorists policies that put us all at heightened risk, the sooner we can move on to "change that we can believe in." To stay the course is to sign on to the inept government dependent economic policies and weak foreign affairs not seen since the failed Jimmy Carter administration. OMG, please, please, not another Jimmy Carter!!!

The Brown election was profound at many levels but particularly so because it gave the silent majority a voice long taken for granted by Massachusetts politicians. Moderates can and should have a loud voice at the table and this is a time in our history when it is sorely needed. To paraphrase an iconic quote from our first lady, Michelle Obama, "For the first time in my adult life, I am proud of my".....State for having the courage to stand up and be counted. And come November of this year, we have the opportunity to be proud again.

HEALTH NOTES

Insurance always a timely topic

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The question arises what questions should one be asking when considering taking out or changing an insurance policy.

Medical care is all over the news nowadays. New rates for Federal medical insurance have again just risen this February and the problems with health insurance are a major political issue. No major new ailment has caused the problem, but improved medical data and the statistics collected there from have concluded that the types of treatment for a given ailment are appropriate.

The problem is the variations in insurance coverage and the substantial differences in costs for the same treatment at different medical facilities. Everyone in Massachusetts must by law have medical insurance. Unless we work for a large company, each of us ends up paying for medical insurance from a policy obtained from a group, which deals with a much larger insurance company. Some without medical insurance use the facilities available in clinics and emergency rooms, and public facilities as is done when 9-1-1 is called. In such a case in Cohasset, an ambulance owned by the Town is directed to an address and local first aid administered. If medical care is needed, the patient is conveyed to a hospital; almost always, the South Shore Hospital. Sometimes, medical coverage for uninsured persons is provided on the way to the hospital. So, sooner or later we all end up with a plan provided by an insurance company.

The question arises what questions should one be asking when considering taking out or changing an insurance policy. Something one should ask when taking out any kind of insurance polity — not only medical.

To obtain the answer, it seemed appropriate to contact an expert or several. In Cohasset, three local companies are listed in the telephone book under insurance. A visit was made to the proprietors of each of the three organizations and each was asked a series of questions:

- Tell me about the insurance business. You probably don't sell health insurance, but what information will be needed when considering purchasing an insurance policy?
- Can one classify the types of insurance brokers whom a person would encounter when trying to buy an insurance package?
- Are there preferred brokers?
- What should buyers know about taking out insurance for their cars, homes or any other kind of insurance policy?
- What are the important questions one should be sure to ask?

Shawn and Christine Cunning at 15 Depot Court, responded that they insured coastal homes for about half of their business and half for golf courses, contractors and builders, etc. They described the ways costs could be limited by appropriate use of deductible and co-pay provisions and appeared extraordinarily conversant with the multiplicity of complex provisions and issues necessarily addressed in the policies.

Craig Martin at 152 King St. explained the relationship between costs and exposure to hazards like hurricanes and gave guidelines about how to minimize expense by deciding early the level of costs it's possible to assume based on income.

Phil Lehr at 200 North Main St. explained the difference in methods between large insurers such as those dealing with health insurance and smaller underwrighters dealing with property insurance.

Summary:

How should a person should go about buying insurance? The guidelines apply to health or any other kind:

- The greater the risk, the higher the premium.
- Use deductibles as a way of distributing costs and assuming more risk.
- Don't add to a policy, provisions which 'would be nice' unless you can't afford to support the cost of the loss.
- Be sure you're protected against a major loss.
- Ask what is the meaning of each heading in the policyand the benefits thereof.
- Keep your policy current. Check at least every three years or when major changes are made.

OPINION

School fees don't make the grade

COMMENTARY

HOWIE ALTHOLTZ

What's next, fees for better desks, or perhaps classrooms with a VIP section with premium seating for a few bucks more?

The following letter to the School Committee was provided to the Hingham Journal.

Dear School Committee:

I urge you to not increase school fees, transportation or athletic. In fact, the right course would be to roll them back.

They say a society or community can be judged by the way we treat the most needy and vulnerable among us – children first and foremost. This is no way to treat our children, we can and should do better.

Transportation fees: Getting to school is not an "extracurricular" or optional activity. It's a fundamental part of the right to a free public education. No child should ever be charged for it. To do so just seems to violate the most basic obligations we have as a community – to educate our children.

In these times especially, we should be even more mindful of the difficulty families, even in Cohasset, have making ends meet (qualifying for a fee waiver is akin to the federal guidelines for free lunch program, a non-starter for most families).

State law only protects kids up to grade six, who live over 2 miles from school, so technically a town can charge fees for grades 7-12 but that does not mean we should – providing only the bare minimum legally required – the least we can do and get away with.

Charging kids to get to school is the same, as charging kids to go to school. What's next, fees for better desks, or perhaps classrooms with a VIP section with premium seating for a few bucks more?

Sports fees. Sports like art and music, is a critical part of development and character building. The Committee says it will look into what impact increased fees could have on participation. The common sense conclusion is that it will certainly suppress participation. Every kid in school already knows that. Even the present fees do that now. If we more that double the fees, as is being proposed, should we expect anything else? In a small school like ours especially, where every kid who does or does not participate makes a critical difference, this hurts not only individual children, but the teams as well. Then there's the spill over effect that lower participation has on the college admission process, where extracurricular activities count for a lot. That will hurt individual students and our system standing overall.

Our society benefits in so many many ways from well-educated children. We're all vested in it. Thus, education is a community-wide obligation, whether we have children in the system or not. We would never for example say that since seniors use more ambulance services than younger healthy people, that we should institute user fees on EMT services and ambulance transport for seniors.

Once we start breaking things down by us vs. them, the fabric of what a community is begins to deteriorate.

So let's look at the school as a community endeavor, and do what our democracy does well: Put it to the voters.

Include transportation and athletics in the budget.

I think most people share my appreciation for the commitment and hard work of our fine teachers. If the case can be made that the schools are being run well, voters will step up to the plate.

If the community is not willing to support the schools, maybe there's a good reason, and the Committee needs to figure out what that is, and do something about it. Not simply throw the burden back on the students and their families.

Back in December the Committee talked about a "Budget Summit with the town," which seems to be no longer scheduled. That could have been helpful.

Our schools are fortunate to have so many truly talented and dedicated teachers and staff, and by and large the principals do a fine job running their schools.

One concern I've heard expressed a lot, and it's a legitimate question to ponder, is "why with such a small system do we need such heavy layers of bureaucracy and administration?" In these budget crunching times, it may be worth considering the trend toward consolidating community administrative costs (we just did something similar with the dispatch center).

Currently we pay a Superintendent's salary of $163,416 plus significant additional money for administrative support for that position. It also includes something like 60 sick days, and six weeks vacation each year. At the time that contract was authorized in 2007, our Superintendent's salary was already higher then Duxbury, Norwell, Hingham and Scituate – all towns with significantly larger school systems (three of those twice our size).

Why not study the possibility of sharing a Superintendent with other communities. Create competition, and opportunity, for the best leadership and management, including for those currently serving in these positions.

If we're serious about serving our students and being fair, then let's look at every option before we start hammering the children of Cohasset, and parents who are just trying to send their kids to school.

Howie Altholtz lives on Cedarledge Lane.

The Spices of Life

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

Why was it so expensive? Simply, because it grew so far away and was so difficult to get.

Editor's note:
Mary Kennedy couldn't find a fun birthday girl/boy for January, so she provided one of her "Did you know that....?" shipboard talks.

It's an ordinary day in 1492 and you're shopping in Paris or Madrid, Lisbon or London. You step into a shop and speak to the merchant. He smiles, visions of profits dancing in his head, shuts the door and closes the shutters. Then he unlocks a cabinet and carefully extracts a small packet. He measures out a tiny amount of the most valuable substance in the world…

That priceless powder of yesterday is today's commonplace commodity. Do you worry about the cost of pepper? Does it figure in your food budget? Have you ever carelessly pocketed a few extra packets while buying a Big Mac? In 1492 in Europe you would have been arrested, jailed, and fined.

Early Sanskrit medical texts recommended pepper for "fever, piles, and dyspepsia." In ancient Greece pepper was both condiment and medicine. The physician Hippocrates combined it with honey and vinegar to treat feminine disorders. For the Romans it served as a ransom. Alaric, the Visigoth king, demanded 5,000 pounds of gold and 3,000 pounds of peppercorns as payment for not looting Rome in 408 AD. That's enough pepper to fill 24,000 pepper mills! Only 50 years later, the Romans again used pepper and other spices to buy off Attila the Hun.

Why was it so expensive? Simply, because it grew so far away and was so difficult to get. Peppercorns — berries that grow on climbing vines — were found only on remote islands in the Far East. Traders had to trek thousands of dangerous miles across Europe or sail across the Mediterranean to Egypt to bargain with Arab middlemen who controlled both price and quantity.

During the Middle Ages when death came early and the diet was dismal, pepper and other spices (cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves, ginger) were more priceless than gold. Europeans valued them as medicine and painkillers, and to preserve and season food. Pepper also helped kill the smell and taste of rotting meat. So highly prized was it that people sometimes used peppercorns to pay rents and taxes. Judges were bribed with it. A supply of pepper was the mark of wealth and social position. One popular saying "He hath no pepper" meant that the person was worthless.

In 1453 the Turks conquered Constantinople, cutting off the land route for traders from Europe to Asia. No more bargaining for spices. The supply dwindled and, not surprisingly, the cost skyrocketed. A sea route to the far Eastern countries had to be found. Kings and queens knew that the country that controlled that route would rule the world. When Isabella grudgingly agreed to finance Columbus' expedition, she was thinking just as much about pepper as she was about gold.

Every one of those great explorers — Columbus, Magellan, John Cabot — was looking for the Spice Islands (now known as the Moluccas) that Marco Polo had reported lying off the coast of Cathay (China). Finally, in the early 1500s, explorers found their way to the true source of pepper: the Malabar coast and the island of Sumatra. After the Dutch wrenched Sumatra away from the Portuguese in the 17th century, tiny Holland became one of the richest and most powerful nations in the world, thanks to the spice trade.

The Dutch kept the location of the pepper-growing regions a state secret until 1795 when a Yankee skipper from Salem, Massachusetts sailed home with a cargo that made a 700 percent profit on the voyage.

And today? Pepper, cheap but cherished, goes with everything. It stimulates the saliva and gastric juices, aids digestion, provides a little "pep." As one Elizabethan poet cheerfully wrote: Pepper is blacke/And hath a good smacke/And every man doth it bye."

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

A 'fresh' look at the harbor

Freshwater behind harbor's changes, panel says

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Mysterious disintegrating mooring chains.

The disappearance of clams.

A decrease in rockweed.

What is to blame for these changes and many others in Cohasset Harbor?

According to panel of Cohasset residents, who grew up and depend on the water for their livelihood, an increase in freshwater is slowly deteriorating the harbor's health.

The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research sponsored a State of the Harbor forum last Thursday night at the Lightkeepers' Residence. High School students sought out "experts" on the harbor to participate in the panel discussion. More than 70 students, parents, and interested residents came out to listen and participate.

The panelists, all of whom are intimately familiar with the past and present of Cohasset Harbor, spoke to the high use of the harbor in many capacities – and to the significant changes that have occurred over the past few decades.

"The harbor may [illegible] to be the same, but there have been changes though, they may have been subtle changes, but there have been many impacts," said Chuck Peterson, chair of the Harbor Committee.

Over the past decade the use of the harbor has increased at an enormous rate.

"More and more people want to use the harbor," Cohasset Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons said. Bassing Beach has become a destination for local and out-of-town boaters for the sand bar at low tide. "On the weekends during low tide there are 200 boats out there."

However, the panelists do not believe the harbor's issues are due more people enjoying what it has to offer. David Marks of the Cohasset Yacht Club spoke about the mooring chains being eaten away before their useful life was even close to complete and the increase of algae developing on the moored boats.

Fourth generation lobsterman Paul Figuierido talked about not being able to store large amounts of lobsters in the in the cove as they wait for the price to go up.

"I can't sell dead lobsters," Figuierido said. "We don't dare hold them for more than a few days."

Frank Carey of Mill River Marine Railway spoke of the decrease in seaweed, less mussels, no quahogs. Instead of getting a variety of marine life when pulling up a shovel full of mud, there is little apparent life – "there's nothing, it is just bland," said Carey.

The issues, all of the panelists seemed to agree, pointed to too much freshwater being dumped into the harbor through stormwater runoff and wastewater from the treatment plant.

"We know something is going on. There is a freshwater plume that just stays there after a rainstorm…freshwater is a main factor as far as I can tell," Marks said.

In addition to the stormwater, which makes its way to the harbor from a large portion of town, thousands of gallons of freshwater empties into the harbor from the wastewater treatment plant on Elm Street. Over the next two years, once the Little Harbor sewer district is tied in, the plant will be permitted to treat 450,000 gallons per day of effluent, close to double what it has treated in the past.

The panelists noted when the wastewater treatment plant was first updated, the discharge pipes were supposed to be installed to outfall near Sutton Rocks, just beyond the outer harbor. Ultimately, the pipes were installed in the inner cove, near Lawrence Wharf, between Veteran's Memorial and the town dock.

The panelists discussed the possibility of extending the pipe to outfall outside the harbor where there is greater flushing.

"If we could pipe a little bit offshore everybody is going to be better off," Marks said.

To get that accomplished would take a lot of funding and effort from the town and its officials. Peterson said there needed to be some outreach to those who use and love the harbor.

"If we can get the people who use the harbor and get them aware, environmentally aware, of what is going on in the harbor (that could go a long way)," said Peterson.

The CSCR has collected data on harbor salinity since 2003. According to CSCR president Jack Buckley, the data on the harbor's salinity is comparable to those values typically found in estuaries. The data, however, does show some variation with depth, and some evidence of stratification—lower, fresher water sitting on top of denser, saltier water.

"Not enough data, however, has been collected by CSCR to state at this point whether stratification is atypical," Buckley said in an e-mail.

The CSCR students will use the information they gleaned from the panelists and the State of the Harbor forum to focus their efforts and research in the coming year. Buckley said more focused research needs to be conducted in partnership with physical and chemical oceanographers to get a better scientific understanding of how fresh and salt waters are interacting in the harbor.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from the week of January 25-29. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

MORE NUTRITIOUS FOOD IN SCHOOLS (H 4441)

House 152-4, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would ban junk food in schools and require new and healthy nutritional standards to be developed for food sold in all school cafeterias and vending machines.

The proposal requires that schools offer nutritional food including fruits or vegetables, whole grain products, no-fat and low-fat dairy products, water without additives or carbonation and 100 percent fruit juice.

Other provisions create a special commission to coordinate a strategy to reduce childhood obesity and require that all schools include nutrition and exercise in their curricular.

Supporters said that schools should not promote the sale of junk food and drinks that are unhealthy and have contributed to a child obesity problem. They noted that one in three Massachusetts middle school students and one in four high school students is overweight or obese.

Opponents said that many companies are already implementing some of these same changes on their own and argued that the government should not micromanage what students eat. They expressed support for broader nutrition education and physical activity programs that would provide comprehensive solutions to the child obesity problem.

(A "Yes" vote is for the nutrition bill. A No" vote is against the bill). Y

USE LOCAL FARM FOOD IN SCHOOLS (H 4441)

House 153-0, approved an amendment requiring that the state's education and agriculture departments work with each other to maximize the number of schools that get their food from local farmers. The amendment also requires state colleges to buy local farm products and fish from Bay State vendors to the "extent feasible."

Supporters said that this is a "win-win" amendment that would help local farmers by increasing business and boosting their sales. They noted that it would also ensure that many schools are serving fresher, more nutritious and tastier local food that has not traveled thousands of miles.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment). Y

RESTRAINING ORDERS (H 4443)

House 154-0, approved a bill allowing victims to take out restraining orders against abusers and stalkers with whom they have had no prior relationship. Current law allows victims of abuse to petition for protection orders only if the perpetrator of the abuse is a family or household member.

Supporters said that this long overdue law will save countless lives and reduce injuries inflicted on innocent women. They pointed to the case of Sandra Berfield, a waitress from Everett, who was repeatedly stalked by a customer and then killed by a small bomb delivered by him. Sandy sought but failed to qualify for protection because she had no prior relationship with the attacker.

The Senate in July approved a different version of the bill. The House version now goes back to the Senate for consideration. Y

ALSO UPON BEACON HILL

BAN TEXT MESSAGING WHILE DRIVING - The Transportation Committee approved a bill banning texting while driving for all drivers and banning cell phone use for drivers under 18.

The measure fines adult texters 18 and over $100 for the first offense, $250 for the second offense and $500 for all subsequent violations. Junior operators under 18 who text or use a cell phone would be subject to a $100 fine and 180-day loss of license. A second offense would yield a $250 fine and one-year loss of license and subsequent offenses would result in a $500 fine and one-year loss of license.

PATRICK PROPOSES $28.2 BILLION FISCAL 2011 STATE BUDGET - Gov. Deval Patrick took center stage on Beacon Hill last week when he fired the first shot in the long battle over the state budget for fiscal year 2011 that begins on July 1. He proposed a $28.2 billion state budget that raises overall state spending by three percent and funds local aid and Chapter 70 education aid to cities and towns at last year's levels. The proposal includes $800 million in spending reductions and imposes the state's 6.25 percent sales tax on previously exempt aircraft sales, candy, soda, smokeless tobacco and cigars. It also relies on $600 million in federal funds that have not yet been approved by Congress.

Cuts include $56 million from adult dental services covered by MassHealth; $9 million from the Department of Transitional Assistance Employment Services program and $5 million from the Quinn Bill program that provides police officers with increased salaries for furthering their education.

The House will hold hearings on the governor's package and then draft its own version that will be debated and amended on the House floor. The Senate will follow suit with its own draft and a House-Senate conference committee will eventually craft a plan that will be presented to the House and Senate for consideration and sent to the governor.

'Diary of Anne Frank' still important

I am the eighth grade English Language Arts teacher at Cohasset Middle High School. Recently, my classes completed reading the drama version of "The Diary of Anne Frank" (Goodrich and Hackett, 1959). For a subsequent writing assignment, students were asked to compose a persuasive business letter addressing a theme of the play and its importance for audiences today. The following submissions from eighth grade students offer poignant and timely messages that coincide with International Holocaust Remembrance Day (Jan. 27, 2010) and the passing of Miep Gies (100 years old), helper to the Frank family in hiding during the Holocaust, who embodied the beliefs of Anne Frank in the inherent goodness of humankind.

Understanding the past

By Micaela Durkin

During one of the darkest times in our world's history, a young girl named Anne Frank kept a diary of her thoughts, fears, and mercurial emotions. Since Anne's death at a World War II concentration camp, her diary containing powerful messages continues to leave an impact on all readers. It's important to read the play "The Diary of Anne Frank" written by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett because it teaches readers how understanding the past can help humanity to avoid future dilemmas. What I've learned from the play is that the voice and ideas of any one individual can have a lasting effect. Hitler's immoral messages blamed the Jewish population for Germany's predicaments, and he devised mass murder in order to restore honor to Germany. Millions of Jews and others suffered from the ideas and actions initiated by this cruel dictator. During her lifetime, Anne Frank only hoped to become a significant author, but today her optimistic messages are known throughout the world and may influence contemporary heroes, such as Greg Mortenson, author of "Three Cups of Tea" (2009) who decided he wanted to assist remote villages in central Asia by building schools and promoting peace with books, not bombs, and by replacing guns with pencils. He commenced a fund to help pay for the education of young children who will grow up with the ability to hold a suitable job and have a sense of self worth ("Pennies for Peace"). After reading "The Diary of Anne Frank," I have begun to understand the influence of one voice and the power of individuals to make a difference

No barriers for the mind

By Liza Riedel

Anne Frank is the most prominent figure representing the millions of Jews who died in the Holocaust. When readers pick up a copy of Anne's diary, they feel her emotions. They understand her feelings toward herself, others in the secret annex where she lived in hiding, and the war. Emotion is a powerful thing, which is why Anne's diary is so compelling for the multitudes of its readers. What makes the play version of "The Diary of Anne Frank" by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett significant is not the sentiment within its pages but rather the fact that it teaches the life lesson that people can be hopeful in implicitly difficult times. Though there are many themes presented in the play, one of the more relevant is that there are always ways to make happiness for oneself. This theme presents itself as Anne creates happiness with her own diary and through her thoughts. She "thinks herself out" of the annex, and remembers happier times with friends and family. Also in the play, Otto Frank's (Anne's father) words about hopefulness are inspiring. First, when Anne feels "trapped" he tells her that there are no barriers for the mind and that she can create happiness. Later in the play as the occupants are about to be discovered by the Gestapo, Otto says, "We have lived in fear. Now we can live in hope." Even in the face of death, hope remains. Many morals and values are learned from the secret annex occupants' ordeal. For now, we may be taught about the subjects of hopefulness and peace, and we may, in time, master the lessons.

Social Service League to award local grants

The Social Service League of Cohasset announces that it is now accepting grant applications through March 1. Working with community leaders, the Social Service League directs the majority of its giving through local grants that address pressing needs in the communities it serves: Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate. The primary areas of focus are elder service programs, teen safety programs and families in crisis.

Local grants are accepted on a rolling basis and awarded twice annually. Grant applications submitted by the March 1 deadline will be reviewed by the League, voted on by its board of directors and awarded in May.

The Social Service League of Cohasset identifies and assists the most needy and least served people of all ages within surrounding communities.

To be considered for funding, qualified nonprofit organizations must fill out a Local Grant Application, found on the League's website at www.socialserviceleagueofcohasset.org. Organizations seeking funding must operate in at least one of the League's designated South Shore communities and provide direct assistance to people in need within at least one of its areas of focus.

The Social Service League of Cohasset identifies and assists the most needy and least served people of all ages within surrounding communities. The League creates, develops and supports programs that directly help those in need through donations and educational programs that have a positive impact on the five South Shore Communities it serves through its philanthropic efforts.

Bill Harley entertains the whole family

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Join the South Shore Conservatory and the Duxbury Performing Arts Center as they co-present Harley in concert on Saturday, Feb. 6, 3 p.m., at the Duxbury PAC, 73 Alden St., Duxbury.

What a treat! For the third time since I've been with South Shore Conservatory, songwriter/storyteller Bill Harley is coming to entertain us in concert, and I'm so excited. My preschoolers love him, my co-workers love him, my daughter loves him and I just adore his music and stories. Even though I'm no longer a kid, I still can't get enough of him.

Why do I love this entertainer/educator so much? I think it's mostly because he weaves stories that hit home for both parent and child. At his concerts, I watch as each generation shares the joke on their own level. He finds a commonality for all ages. Harley takes me to places where my own imagination can soar, accompanied by engaging musical scores, and through his stories I learn something new about teaching and reaching children.

Harley takes me to places where my own imagination can soar, accompanied by engaging musical scores, and through his stories I learn something new about teaching and reaching children.

For example, just to be fun, when one of our preschoolers has an "oops" moment (for example dropping something – no biggie), we sing Harley's words, "you're in trouble, you're in trouble, you're in trouble, like you've never been in trouble before" and the whole class breaks out in laughter. It eases the tension in the classroom and we go on with our day. What a gift to have at our fingertips!

His stories range from the hilarious to the thought-provoking, and whisk me away on an enchanting journey into Bill Harleyland. He takes normal family situations and creates funny yet poignant songs that tell the whole story. Whether it's a tricky hamster escaping just when an elder aunt is visiting – that's a yikes we can all identify with, or a young girl discovering a mystical sack filled with magic and emotion, kids and adults are transported to a place of pure entertainment. I know he always leaves me longing for more.

At Harley concerts I don't know what I find more enjoyable: watching him perform or watching children watching him perform. It's a tossup. Last time he graced our amphitheater stage I remember one 9-year-old boy laughing heartily at "Barbie's Head Is Missing" while the his younger sister sat next to him, mouth open, appalled at the thought of someone's brother dismantling his sister's Barbies and coming up short one head. Both of these children were completely riveted to the song/story. It was a delightful and heartwarming moment to watch.

Won't you be a kid for a day and join South Shore Conservatory and the Duxbury Performing Arts Center (PAC) as they co-present Harley in concert on Saturday, Feb. 6, 3 p.m., at the Duxbury PAC, 73 Alden St., Duxbury? I personally think you'd be "Wacka Wacka Woo" (my favorite) if you did not come and hear this master of a musical yarn for yourself. Tickets at $5/child and $15/adult may be purchased at www.sscmusic.org or by calling 781-749-7565, ext. 20.

Carol Forbes Scheig is South Shore Conservatory's preschool director. She has worked with children for more than 35 years and is considered an expert in what appeals to children. Her incredible "Wacka Wacka Woo" sense of fun is the secret to her success with youngsters.

Cohasset's Carli Haggerty hangs onto the ball during a game at Carver. Haggerty has been one of many keys to Cohasset's 17-0 start this season. Cohasset has three games left before playoffs, starting tonight when the Skippers host Hull for Spirit Night festivities.

Spirit Night, Senior Night on tap

Three tough games left in regular season

Girls Basketball

With the regular season winding down, the Cohasset girls basketball team couldn't be faulted if they were looking ahead to the upcoming Division 4 South Sectionals.

Not so fast.

There are still a few tough games left, and this is not a team that looks ahead, at least any further than tonight.

Tonight is when arch-rival Hull comes to town on Spirit Night at Cohasset.

That's about all the motivation needed.

"It doesn't matter how they're doing or how we're doing," Cohasset coach John LeVangie said. "They always play us tough."

Last year, including playoffs, Cohasset beat Hull four times, including an overtime victory in the tournament.

This year, Hull brings a talented team who can press and put the ball in the net.

"They have two of the leading scorers in the league," LeVangie said. "Their defense is very good. They have a strong press."

Cohasset has the type of team that can beat a press though.

"We're disciplined," LeVangie said. "That helps against the press."

In their most recent game, Cohasset beat Mashpee 55-29

The Skippers (17-0, 12-0) got 11 points and 8 rebounds from Allie Farren. Tori Lehr added 9 points and 6 rebounds, and junior Merideth Kelly scored 8 points while pulling in 7 rebounds in that game.

"It was a good opportunity to get all the kids in," LeVangie said of the Mashpee game. "We were up by 40 at halftime. The younger kids got a lot of time."

LeVangie was pleased with that.

"A lot of games they can't get in. When they do it is nice," he said. "The second group did a good job. Allie Farren, Anna Serakis and Kristen Alexander did a good job."

With three games left, Hull, Hingham and Abington on Wednesday's Senior Night, the season is far from over.

"Hingham will be a tough game," LeVangie said. "And Abington will be tough. They could be fighting for the tournament, and they're going to bring everything."

Hingham is also a tournament team, buoyed by center Sarah Fisher's scoring touch.

For Cohasset, they'll do what they have all season.

Take it one game at a time, share the ball and win as a team.

"I expect Meredith (Kelly) and Tori (Lehr) to step up," LeVangie said about his two stars . "They're not the only ones playing well. Carli Haggerty has been playing very well. Our two guards, Lindsey (Davis) and Rachel (Fredey) have been playing very well. Sam Crough has been shooting very well. It's hard to concentrate on stopping one player. We don't have one high scorer. We spread it out."

LeVangie said Wednesday's Senior Night will be an emotional night.

"That's a night when they begin to realize their career is winding down," he said. "The parents are there and everybody has a great night. Hopefully we can win."

For Spirit Night on Friday, there will be face painting for kids, a whiteout in the stands, the CHS Jazz Combo Band will be there

CHS coaching legend Al Gallotta will be honored in a pregame ceremony to celebrate his induction into the Massachusetts Baseball Coaches Hall of Fame last week, and the game will be broadcast on WATD Radio.

Game-time is 6:30 p.m.

Monday, Cohasset heads to Hingham for Hingham's Senior Night and then the regular season finale is a 6:45 p.m. start against Abington.

Jack also plays lacrosse where he was a top goalie.
His family includes Mom, Sarah, Dad, Dave, and brothers Chris and Sam.
"Jack has flown under the radar," coach Torin Sweeney said about Murphy. "He's ranked in Division 3, but not the state rankings. He should be, but I don't mind. The less opponents know about someone, the better. It can be an advantage.

Wrestlers at Team Sectionals on Saturday

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Wrestling

The Cohasset wrestling team needed a pick-up, and they got it Wednesday night with a 39-24 win over Bristol-Plymouth.

Cohasset was still stinging a bit from Tuesday night's loss to Tri-County that gave Tri-County the Mayshore League title.

Cohasset finished second in the league with a 6-1 league record, 12-14 overall. They won four of the last five meets.

"We always make it our goal to win the league championship," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "We're a little disappointed not winning it."

There were still solid performances though, especially in the middle weight classes.

"We wrestled great, but we lost a couple of close ones," Sweeney said of the Tri-County meet, a 36-29 loss. "We won all through the middle."

Then Cohasset won at 145, 152 and 160.

Jack Murphy was the winner at 145, while Andrew Littauer won at 152. Justin Yeager notched a victory at 160 and Thomas Flibotte won at 189. Cam Washak won at 189.

All the wins were by pin except Murphy, who won on a technical.

Gymnasts picking up pace

Team sees improvements on a daily basis

By Ryan Wood

Gymnastics

Since its first meet back on Jan. 6, the Norwell/Cohasset gymnastics team has made some great strides and now have a 2-5 record after a slow start.

"We may not be winning, the girls are definitely improving," co-head coach Nancy Durkin said. "At the beginning of the season we were in the low 120s. Now we're in the high 120s and low 130s."

After seven competitions, the team has a 2-5 record and has seen a number of individuals reach new personal highs.

In the team's meet against Marshfield, Betsy Crawford, Amber Silvia, Maddie Ward, Sam Sprague, Courtney Smith, and Izzy Ortigoza received their highest scores of the season.

In that 133.35-130.3 loss to Marshfield on Jan. 28, Ward won the all-around with a season-high score of 34.9, while Sprague finished third with a score 34.65. On the vault, Ward and Sprague went 1-2, with Ward scoring a season-high 8.7 and Sprague scoring a season-high 8.5. Courtney Smith also helped out with her score of 7.8, and Jillian Crawford scored a 7.5.

On the bars, Ward placed second with an 8.85, while Sprague

Hockey

The Cohasset hockey team was victorious Saturday night as they blanked Hull 3-0.

Cohasset thoroughly outplayed a young Hull squad and if not for the heroics of Hull's talented sophomore netminder, the score would have been much higher.

Smooth skating junior Brian Scott opened the scoring with a one timer off a beautiful feed from linemate Anders Goetz from behind the net. Cohasset peppered the Hull goalie, but could only take a one goal lead after the first period.

Senior Andy McKenna continued his strong play by banging home a rebound in front of the net to increase the Skippers' lead to 2-0.

McKenna's physical play and willingness to crash the net has made him the team's top goal scorer to date. Coach Walsh rolled out all four forward lines and they did a great job of cycling down low in the offensive end that inevitably wore down Hull's defense.

Sophomore Sean McKenna tallied the final goal in the third period to put the game out of reach. McKenna's blast from the blue line was screened beautifully by sophomore John Collins.

Forwards such as Connor Queenan, Anders Goetz, Alex Evans, Jamie Faber and Travers Craven deserve special praise for their relentless forechecking that resulted in the Skippers dominance in controlling the play.

Fifth-graders learning with a smile

They might not be winning many games, or any, but the girls on Cohasset's fifth-grade travel team have something special.

They have fun and are learning as they go.

For a coach, and some teams, losing can be a drag.

Cohasset coach Jeff Morrison won't let that happen.

"The girls are great this year," Morrison said. "It's their first year playing travel basketball. They're enthusiastic and a great group of girls. They're getting better every day. They're making tremendous strides."

For Morrision, the pleasure is in the small victories.

"You see the way their face lights up when they make a basket," he said. "It's great. They played at halftime of the high school girls game a few weeks ago and six different girls had hoops. It was amazing."

With a group of 9-and-ten year old players, keeping them smiling is a job that can be important down the road.

"I've talked to parents who have had older kids play and they said some of them started like this," he said. "Some are on the varsity now."

As for the final scores, Morrison said it's not important.

Parents with kids on the team have been thrilled with the way Morrison and the team have kept such a great attitude.

"We've been beaten handily," Morrison said. "But the last few games haven't been lopsided. Either way, two minutes after the game the kids are still excited. They love playing. My job is to make it fun. I try to teach them with a joke or a laugh. I'll tell them you can't keep your head down when you're dribbling because then you can't find a friend to pass to. Things like that to make them smile. It really is all about fun."

Fresh Start with Lucie Rice

Part 2: Start Now

This article is especially for, and dedicated to the majority of Americans who are now overweight/obese and/ or inactive. The subsequent articles: cardiovascular, strength, flexibility, and nutrition will speak to all levels.

Where do I start?

The most important thing that you can do is to start today. For those of you who have not exercised in years, have health issues, or are overweight or obese your first step can be to set an appointment with your doctor and see if you are ready for exercise. Take the exercise readiness test or PAR-Q on the Wicked Local Fresh Start website for guidance about whether you need to see you doctor. Better to be safe than sorry, so if you have any doubt see your doctor first. And then check off your first successful step. If you are reading this article, give yourself another check – you have already begun.

It all feels so overwhelming and hopeless. I've tried before with little success. Why bother?

Because, you have within you the capacity to make positive changes in your health and fitness. Regardless of your situation, there are some steps you can take today to start the process. For some it may be just to think about exercising or improving your diet. If you were to seriously consider all this information today, you have already begun. Behavioral change of any kind is very hard and most success follows many failures. In fact, your earlier "failures" may contain within them the seeds of your future success.

Let's say, you once went to a weight loss program and lost 30 pounds, you've since gained it back, but if you think back carefully you probably learned something during that time that you could use now - maybe you learned to limit eating in front of the TV. String lots of these small insights together, take some successful actions back to back and you will start making noticeable changes.

What type of exercise should I start with?

For some of you who are in really poor condition – simple stretching may be your first step. Others may be able to start the beginner strength training exercises or cardiovascular exercises. The Fresh Start website videos show some exercises you can do right now, at home, without spending a dime. The key point is to start moving.

Will doing these simple exercises for just a few minutes 2-3 days per week really make any difference?

Yes. Recent studies have shown that even small amounts of exercise can show measurable impact on health. By starting a small but manageable program of movement you begin to prepare your body and mind for the next step. It is all about continuing to make ongoing progress regardless of the starting point.

If I want to go to a gym, what's the best way to choose a gym?

First, find a gym that you feel comfortable in. The Workout Club, where I see many of my clients, is a good example of this. While we have many extremely fit members, we also have many "non-traditional" members. You want to feel comfortable when you walk in. One other critical thing, make sure you choose a place that is as close to your home as possible. Better to drive 5 minutes, do a small workout, and get home all in under an hour. Also, if the thought of walking into a full gym brings back hellish thoughts of gym class, find out when the gym is at its quietest, and do your workouts then. In other words, set yourself up for success.

How hard should I work?

When you first start an aerobic exercise program you should work at an intensity that allows you to carry on a conversation. Two things are likely to undermine any exercise program – 1) working too hard and injuring yourself and 2) working too hard, hating it and not wanting to continue. Be a turtle for now and make it to the finish line.

What should I avoid?

- Anything that causes sharp pain
- Anything that produces pain or discomfort in the joints

Lucie Rice

- Working at too high an intensity- if you're gasping for breath it's too much
- Lifting weight that are too heavy/too soon
- Doing too much too many days in a row – rest and recovery is as important as the exercise,
- Don't strength train the same muscle group 2 days in a row.
- Making yourself exercise harder than feels okay to you, the goal is to find an intensity that you don't mind doing again
- Comparing yourself with what other people around you are doing

What should I try to include?

-Weekly cardio exercise (perhaps 3 times per week at first)

-Once or twice a week strength training sessions

-Weekly stretching or a gentle yoga class (don't overstretch, you can injure yourself this way as well)

-An Evaluation of Your Diet and goals for any desired changes

-A goal list/training log – give yourself a check plus for everything you achieve, think about short term goals first, today I will… this week I will… then build from there

I hate exercise and always have. I hate every moment of it. What can I do?

You are not alone. Many of my clients truly hate exercise. Most of us, even those of us who "love exercise", have moments when we hate it too – sometimes it just doesn't feel good. I'm a believer in finding ways to make exercise tolerable. This may require you to continue to try to find something you actually might like. Try different exercise (see our Dana Does series online for inspiration). Also, most of us who use cardiovascular machines (treadmills, ellipticals, stair steppers) also read or listen to music. This can make a huge difference. Looking at the clock and counting every second can feel terrible.

Make sure to visit the Fresh Start website for more information as well as videos demonstrating the exercises and stretches discussed in the articles. Lucie Rice is a personal trainer based at the Workout Club in Marshfield. To contact her call 781-635-6258.

Against Bristol-Plymouth, there were some different names in the win column.

Sophomore Harry Braga, a first-year wrestler, won by points at 119.

Freshman Nick Tangherlini won by points at 135, Murphy had a pin at 145, Littauer pinned at 152, Yeager pinned at 160, Gus Helbock pinned at 112 and Washak had a pin at 215.

For Murphy, the win improved his record to 30-1, while Flibotte improved his mark to 18-0 for the season.

Sweeney said he's been pleased with the way a number of his younger wrestlers have come on through the season.

"We have a group of freshmen who have been wrestling well," he said. "Tommy Ryan (130), Billy Curry (103) is doing a good job. Craig Berbure has wrestled well at 112 and John Mills has some spot varsity time and has done well."

Saturday's 60-4 win against Bellingham was a big one for a few more Cohasset freshmen wrestlers, with Axel Seppala getting a pin at 112 for his first varsity win. Craig Davis won with a pin at 160 and Mike Livingstone was a winner at 171, also with a pin.

Saturday, Cohasset travels to Pembroke for the Division 3 team sectionals.

The Skippers will be the sixth seed and will face either Hanover or Canton.

Pembroke is the No. 1 seed.

Sweeney knows his team is in for a battle with either Hanover or Canton, but feels it's a battle that can be won.

"The Hanover match was close when we wrestled them," Sweeney said. "And we didn't have our best lineup against Canton. They're both very good teams. It will be tough."

The next week is the Individual South Sectionals at Canton, and then the State Tournament will be at Cohasset the next weekend.

Sweeney is hoping a few of his own will be wrestling at home that weekend, but won't make any predictions.

"Jack Murphy is positioning himself to do well," Sweeney said. "He's been doing very well, but isn't in the state rankings. He's flying under the radar, and I like that. He's ranked in Div. 3, but not in the overall rankings. When other people don't know someone, there can be a little advantage."

Sweeney said Murphy could have a tough road though.

"I think 140 is the toughest weight class," Sweeney said. "There's (Pat) Claflin from Pembroke, and there's a really good kid from Carver. Throw Murphy in the mix and it's a tough division."

Sweeney said at sectionals and states anything can happen.

"It's very unpredictable," he said. "You never know day-by-day what might happen in the state tournament."

FROM HOCKEY, PAGE 17

Saturday was another solid night for the defense starting with Jack Nelson posting his second shutout of the year in net.

Hard shooting junior Sam Leahy, along with senior Geoff Evans and sophomore Coleman Hernan continue to gain confidence on the blue line each and every game.

The Skippers improved their record to 7-5-1.

They played league rival Abington/East Bridgewater Wednesday night, and Old Rochester on Thursday.

The Skippers are off tonight, and play at Norwell on Saturday at 7:40 p.m. at Pilgrim Arena in Hingham.

"The Coh/Nor team had their best meet ever," said co-coach Ruthann Ardizzoni about a Cohasset/Norwell 134,4 to 128.2 win.

Seniors Izzy Ortigoza and Betsy Crawford were acknowledged by the coaches for their final competition before they head off to college.

Starting on the Bars Cohasset/norwell's Sam Sprague placed 1st on bars with a 9.2 tying with teammate Maddie Ward. In third place a strong performance by Amber Silvia with an 8.20.

Heading over to the vault again captain Sam Sprague placed first with an 8.3 followed by a third place finish with Amber Silvia at 7.90.

Abby Smith,Courtney Smith, Samantha Casey,and Emily Kuhn also had strong performances on the vault to help the Cohasset/Norwell team in their win.

"The girls on beam hit their best scores of the season." Ardizzoni said. "Sam Sprague startedwith an impressive 9.20 followed by Maddie Ward with a 9.0 and Amber Silvia with an 8.70. At that point we realized that we had a real good chance of beating the Weymouth Team. The beam and bars are the make it or break it of the whole meet."

Other strong performances by Betsy Crawford, Abby Smith, Jillian Crawford, Sam Casey, Izzy Ortigoza, and Melinda Dignam.

"The Cohasset Norwell's top performers on floor were flawless," Ardizzoni said. "The gymnasts expressed grace, poice, dynamics in tumbling, and overall confidence."

Leading the way again was Sam Sprague with a 9.30 followed by Maddie Ward 8.8, Amber Silvia 8.6, Betsy Crawford 8.3, Jillian Crawford, and a personal best for Sr Captain Izzy Ortigoza 7.30.

First place in the all around with a season best of 36.00 was Sam Sprague followed by a third place finish with Amber Silvia 33.40.

"The girls were really excited about their overall improvement, Ardizzoni said. "We started the season with a 121.00 and have improved thirteen points to an impressive 134.4. All the girls have improved immensely over the course of the season. Nancy and I are looking forward to the All League Meet on Saturday February 6 at Somerset Elementary."

FIVE INITIAL QUESTIONS TO ASK A CAMP DIRECTOR OR REPRESENTATIVE

Answered by, Bette Bussel, Executive Director American Camp Association, New England

With the camp fair and camp open house season starting to heat up, here is a list of questions families can ask the camp directors or representatives they will have a chance to speak with. Choose your questions carefully! Camp websites and materials often include FAQs; but if you've not had a chance to review these, don't be shy about clarifying key information.

What regulations, standards and best practices does your camp follow?
Talk to camp directors about what policies and regulations they have in place. Certain factors, such as location, can play a role in which rules the camp must follow. Some camps may voluntarily go above and beyond those standards to ensure the highest quality experience possible for the campers and the staff.

What is the camp community like?
It's important to understand the most highly regarded values that the camp holds and to learn about the people who lead the adventures and experiences the camp provides.

What does a typical day consist of?
There may not be a "typical" day at camp, but there are certain things that do happen every day – meals, bunk inspections, group gatherings, program offerings, etc… Having a good general sense of what the camper will be doing on a daily basis will help you know what to expect and help you to prepare your child.

How is communication handled between camp and home?
Talk to the camp director or representatives about the best way to keep in touch about the camper's adjustment to camp & needs. Some camps may have a system in place for parents & guardians to follow, while others are more flexible when it comes staying in touch. Ask what will happen if the camp has information to share and whom to contact with information from home!

Ask a question related to your child or family's needs and interests to explore the fit of the camp.
You may wish to ask how nurturing the staff are and how your child will be assisted in making the adjustment to camp. If transportation is a deal-breaking parameter of your camp search, asking about bus routes and transportation logistics or before and after camp care for day campers would be advisable. Perhaps your child is passionate about a particular activity; ask if it's offered at the camp and how often your child would receive instruction.

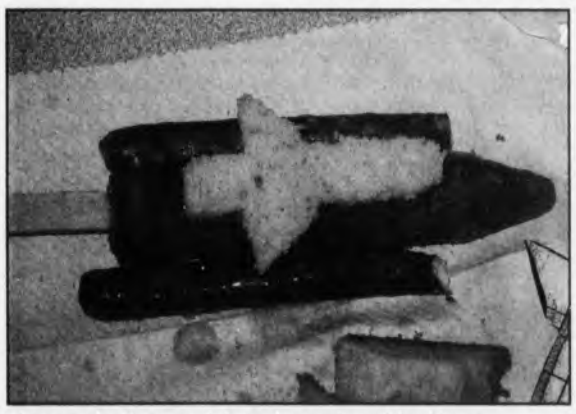
Will Duxbury prepares for a potential career as an astronaut.

COMPASS program heads to outer space

The COMPASS enrichment program recently put the finishing touches on its two-month study of space. The children learned about meteors, comets, planets, the moon, and rockets.

Many children participated in hands-on activities such as building rockets, real craters and even their own NASA shuttle. Using various food items, they constructed models of spacecraft and participated in science experiments. Some students even brought their own astronaut costumes.

The students are now starting a unit on dinosaurs and other pre-historic animals.



COMPASS is a before- and after-school enrichment program. The goal of COMPASS is to help children develop a positive sense of self worth, by providing a safe and secure atmosphere rich with opportunities for social, emotional, physical and cognitive growth, and is committed to working with the school system and parents. The goal is to help steer students toward excellence in enrichment, academics and citizenship.

Sam Albino works on a model space shuttle.

The program is open to Cohasset Public School children in grades kindergarten through six, and registration will be accepted throughout the year on a first-come basis.

Call Erick Amero at 781-383-8223 for more information.

A new month, new semester

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

Overall, everything went back to normal pretty fast. It was nice...except for that snow in the morning. What was that all about? I just want to wear flip-flops to school...

Word of the week: New. That's right; Monday was the start of a new month, February, and a new semester. Which I guess means it is also the start of a new term. And if you wanna be technical, it is the start of a new week in France. There that's 4 new things. Count 'em like Count Dracula.

Monday was a special day, because as stated before, it was the first day of the new semester. That means class changes, both good and bad. The only time a class is not changed is when you have an AP Class; otherwise, you changed your class. For many, mostly underclassmen, these changes were bad because classes tend to get harder towards the end of the year. For seniors like me, these class changes are glorious, because we like to have fun and easy classes. Is there a better way to go out of High School? I didn't think so.

Tuesday went back to the 4-period day, as opposed to the 5-period day on Monday. This was honestly one of the slowest days I can remember. I don't know, but this day just seemed to drag on. There was a lot of activity outside of the school though, as the basketball teams and the wrestling teams had important games. The wrestling team lost the League Championship match to Tri-County in the closest wrestling match I have ever seen. Shout out to my man Jack Murphy too who recently became the 15th person in Cohasset High School history to get 100+ wins. Well done.

Wednesday saw everyone starting to settle down into their classes. No more races down to the guidance office to switch out of the disliked classes. No more teachers threatening students with huge assignments trying to scare the kids out of the classes. Overall, everything went back to normal pretty fast. It was nice...except for that snow in the morning. What was that all about? I just want to wear flip-flops to school...

Thursday was a day where many seniors had a realization. On second thought, let's make the 2 revelations. Revelation numero uno (Spanish) was that Senioritis could now be put into full effect with very little consequences. Revelation nombre dous (French) was that this was the last semester in CHS...ever. I certainly like numero uno (Spanish again) more. It is weird to think about being done with High School for the rest of forever in only 4 months. :'(……..?

Friday, the last day of the week. As previously stated, things had settled down a lot by this point in time. Everyone was looking forward toward the weekend. Most of the big projects the teachers had initially given to their students were already done with, freeing up the weekend. Then of course, half of the weekend has already been booked (no pun intended) by kids asking their parents to drive them to Staples to get new folders and binders. That's only if you didn't take the Sean MacCarthy organization approach which consists of zero folders and zero binders. Just file everything in you backpack and you will be fine.

Well I'd say that's enough out of me. Happy February everyone! I still disagree about the spelling of February but I don't feel like going on a rant this late in the article. See you lata!

Sean MacCarthy wants to know when Groundhog Day is so he can know how much winter is left

Preschool applications due today

Preschool registration for the 2010-2011 year is under way. Children who turn 3 or 4 by Sept. 1, 2010, are eligible to register for the Osgood Preschool Program, which takes place four days per week, Monday through Thursday, for 2-1/2 hours. Entrance to the preschool program is based on a lottery system. Registration applications should be returned to the Osgood School no later than Friday, Feb. 5. The lottery will take place on Wednesday, Feb. 10, and parents will be notified immediately following. A deposit of $150 will be required to hold a space for those selected. A birth certificate and proof of residency must accompany applications.

Kindergarten registration is under way

Kindergarten registration for the 2010-2011 school year is under way. Registration will be at the Osgood School, daily, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Parents registering children for kindergarten will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration, but do not have to commit at this time. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for programs. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required for kindergarteners in order to register. Call the school office at 781-383-6117 for more information.

La Leche League to meet Tuesday

Mothers who are planning to breastfeed can obtain the information and encouragement that La Leche League provides. Leaders are experienced breastfeeding mothers, accredited by La Leche League International. Whether one is pregnant or already nursing, LLL has something to offer, such as tips and techniques shared by mothers who have enjoyed a successful breastfeeding relationship.

Services include monthly informational meetings, a lending library and 24-hour phone help for breastfeeding problems or questions. All mothers and their babies are welcome.

A new series of meetings will start on Tuesday, Feb. 9, at 7 p.m., at Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset, corner of Ripley Road and Sohier Street, which connects to Route 3A. For more information, call Christie at 781-740-7808, Kathleen at 781-749-2404, Heather at 781-544-9230 or Laura at 781-544-4077.

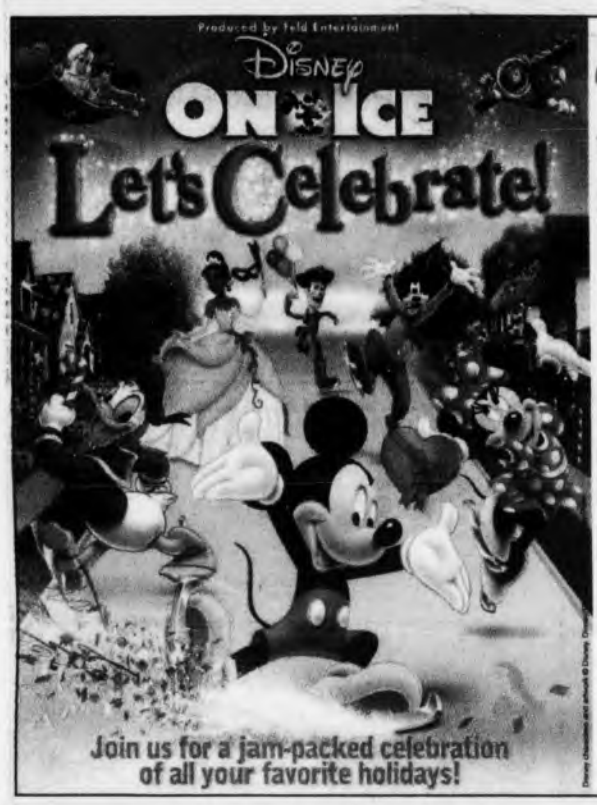
Gen. Thomas Sellars of the US Army was the keynote speaker for the Healing Field Dedication last year.

'Healing Field' is planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2010 observances.



The effort should result in hundreds of American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces.

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
FEB. 15, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) All that flattery and fawning shouldn't affect any decision you have to make. Keep your focus on the facts and ignore all the hyperbole, especially if it gets uncomfortably personal.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your Bovine instincts are on the mark about that "favor" you're being asked to do. Agree to nothing unless you get a full explanation — which you would check out first, of course.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A somewhat unsettled recent period should give way to a smoother time going through the week. Use this quieter time to catch up on matters you might have had to let slide.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Feeling a little confused is understandable with all those mixed messages. Take time to list the questions you have. Then present them and insist on answers that make sense.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Cupid can be very helpful for Lions seeking a love connection. The chubby cherub also brings warm and fuzzy feelings to paired Leos and Leonas who already share a special love line.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Travel is favored this week, whether you'll be globe-trotting or taking a trip to a nearby getaway. You might be surprised (or maybe not) by who wants to be your traveling companion.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Getting advice on your next business-related move is a good idea, but only if your advisers are trustworthy. Get references that you can check out before you make any decisions.

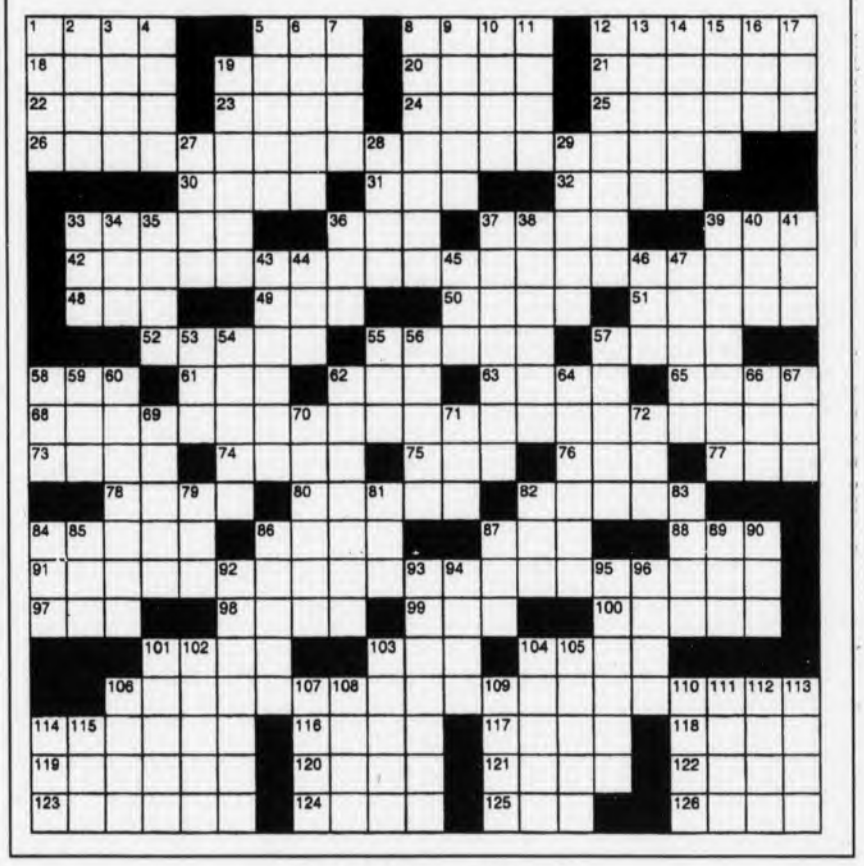
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Getting a boost in your self-esteem is one benefit that comes with a job well done. There are other plusses as well, including being noticed by all the right people. Good luck.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Make time to deal with family matters, especially where they concern your elderly kinfolk. Being there for them from the start can help resolve problems sooner rather than later.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Getting a project started can often be difficult. But the good news is that you won't want for lack of assistance from colleagues who would like to work with you. So, let them!

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A lot of work-related issues might be raised this week, and you need to be prepared for whatever comes along. Things should be easier when it comes to matters in your private life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) What might appear to be a very much unwanted change in your life right now could turn out to be a very welcome event after all. Give yourself a chance to see where it might take you.



(c) 2010 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK:
You exercise your strong leadership qualities well, which is why people believe in you and feel reassured by you.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Syncopation, an award-winning vocal jazz quartet based in Boston, will perform an all a cappella show at First Parish Cohasset at 4 pm on Sunday, Feb. 21.

Jazz quartet coming to Cohasset

Syncopation, an award-winning vocal jazz quartet based in Boston, will perform an all a cappella show at First Parish Cohasset at 4 pm on Sunday, Feb. 21. . Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

You may recognize Syncopation from this past year's Boston Pops Fourth of July performance at the Hatch Shell, where they were the featured guests. These four singer/musicians have performed across the United States at notable events like the Tanglewood Jazz Festival, The Tri-C Vocal Jazz Festival, The Boston Globe Jazz Festival, and The Meihou Music Festival. The group regularly tours Japan. They are also the winners of the 2008 Annual Boston Harmony Sweepstakes A Cappella Festival.

The Boston Globe describes Syncopation as "the 21st Century Manhattan Transfer or Lambert, Hendricks & Ross," and it is easy to see why. Like those legendary top-notch vocal groups, Syncopation performs jazz and pop music that is timeless, up-to-the-minute and arranged with killer tight vocal harmonies.

Syncopation's distinctive style reflects bebop, Latin, and pop influences. The group usually performs with a band, but their a cappella performances are equally exhilarating. They were formed in Boston in January of 2002 and mentored by the great Cheryl Bentyne of the Manhattan Transfer.

Syncopation is: soprano Aubrey Logan, alto Christine Fawson, tenor David Thorne Scott and bass Tsunenori "Lee" Abe (who also is the group's arranger/composer). More information about the group, including bios of the musicians, can be found at www.jazzsyncopation.com.

"We try to have something for everyone," says David Thorne Scott. "When we perform with a band, we each play horns; two trumpets, two trombones. Our a cappella shows draw from jazz, pop and world music." Christine Fawson adds, "We don't think of ourselves as an a cappella group. We are a versatile vocal group that sometimes performs without instruments!"

Syncopation's performance schedule this spring includes performances at high schools (Belmont and Hopkinton), jazz clubs (Ryles in Cambridge, MA and the Hi-Hat in Providence, RI), and concert halls (Merrimack College in North Andover, MA and Chelmsford Performing Arts Center in Chelmsford, MA).

Aubrey Logan took top honors in the 2009 Montreux Jazz Festival vocal competition. Lee Abe's book of arrangements was recently published by Yamaha Music.

For more information about the concert, please contact Allegra Martin at (617) 872-0461.

'Power of Hope' at Glastonbury Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey's Lecture Series, Listening to Other Voices: Transformation and Renewal: The Power of Hope," will be presented at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, Feb. 11. Rabbi Peter J. Rubinstein will present a lecture titled: Lifting Your Head: A Jewish Perspective During Times of Crisis."

Difficult times demand that people consider core values and the legacy each would choose to leave to the generations who follow. Rabbi Rubinstein, Senior Rabbi, Central Synagogue, New York City, a Reform congregation, will speak about how Jews have reclaimed their undying faith in the midst of devastating circumstances. Even when shaken to the core, they look to their bedrock: Decency, optimism, faith in God and those they love. Will that bedrock hold for those of the Jewish faith? For those who are not of that faith or who are of no defined faith, can something be learned? Teacher, writer and leader in progressive Judaism, Rabbi Rubinstein has received many awards, including the Face to Face/Faith to Faith Peace is Possible Award, and in May 2009 the American Jewish Committee National Human Relations Award.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. For information, visit the Web site at glastonburyabbey.org.

Jewish holiday of Purim

Purim in the USA is Hingham Quincy Chabad's creative twist to this year's community Purim celebration, which will take place at Hingham Woods Function Room, 150 Beal St., at 4 p.m., on Sunday, Feb. 28. The event will feature a live magic show, hot dogs, Kosher burgers, American fries, apple pie and raffle. Participants can enjoy all-American cuisine served with traditional Hamentashen. In addition, the celebration will feature a child-friendly reading of the biblical scroll of Esther, known in Hebrew as the Megillah.

In the spirit of Purim, participants are encouraged to come in costume and be included in the competition, which will award prizes to contestants with the most innovative or funny costumes. The event is a community-wide program, and all are welcome to join, regardless of Jewish affiliation or background. To help cover expenses, guests are requested to pay $5 per child, and $10 per adult.

The festival of Purim is celebrated every year on the 14th of the Hebrew month of Adar. It begins this year after sundown on Feb. 27 and ends at nightfall on Feb. 28. The holiday commemorates the salvation of the Jewish people in ancient Persia from Haman's plot "to destroy, kill and annihilate all the Jews, young and old, infants and women, in a single day." The name of the holiday, Purim, literally means "lots," for Haman determined the day of the annihilation by drawing a lottery. It is observed by public readings of the Megillah, or Scroll of Esther, to recount the story of the Purim miracle, sending food gifts to friends, giving gifts of money to the poor and enjoying a festive Purim meal. For more on Purim's history, observances and meaning, plus fun and other activities for the entire family, visit http://www.hqchabad.com/purim.

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom Temple news

The Writings of St. Paul through a Jewish Lens with Rick Small – This is a six-week course continues on Tuesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. will be held on Feb. 9, 23 and March 2. It is free for members and $54 for non-members. For more information, call 781-749-8103.

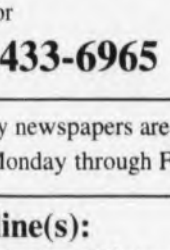
The teachings of Christianity's putative founder will be explored through careful reading of Saul of Tarsus's (later called Paul) letters in the New Testament. His writings often melded Jewish scripture with Greek philosophy and this study, in seminar format, will allow a thorough discussion and better understanding of Paul's thinking within the culture of the era.

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom Israeli Film Festival – Four Sundays at four.

The film series will run on Sundays at 4 pm. Movies only are free to members and $6/non-member/movie. Dinner option - $12/movie/member and $18/movie/non-member; Series of four movies with dinner - $44/members and $54/non-members.

Other movies include:

Sunday, Feb. 21 – "Broken Wings" directed by Nir Bergman.



Sunday, March. 21 – "Beaufort,", directed by Joseph Cedar

Sunday, April 25 – "Walk on Water," directed by Eitan Fox

Maureen M. Thayer

Maureen M. Thayer

COHASSET – Maureen M. (Murphy) Thayer of Cohasset, age 76, passed away peacefully in her home after a brief illness on January 31, 2010, surrounded by her family.

She is survived by her devoted husband of 55 years Frederick A. Thayer, Jr. of Cohasset and five loving children; Linda Thayer Nason, of Lexington, MA, Sally Thayer Mailloux of Falmouth, MA, Wendy Thayer of Cohasset, Geoffrey Thayer of Nantucket, MA and Diane Nealy of Waterbury, VT. Maureen is also survived by 12 loving grandchildren, her sister and brother-in-law Mrs. and Dr. Jason B. Roche of Yarmouth Port, MA and Naples, FL, her sister-in-law Nancy Thayer Tolman, a niece, and several nephews.

Maureen loved spending time at her home on the Gulf River and with family and friends. She enjoyed tennis, golf, skiing, sailing and was also an avid reader. She was a long time member of the Cohasset Golf Club, Cohasset Yacht Club and Pelican's Nest Golf Club in Bonita Springs, FL. She was a past president of Cohasset Swim Team.

After raising her five children, Maureen spent the last 25 years surrounded by herchildren, grandchildren and countless friends not only in Cohasset, where she lived for over 41 years, but also in Carrabassett Valley, ME, and Bonita Springs, FL where the family maintained homes.

A Memorial Service will be held February 6th at 11a.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA. Visiting hours omitted. Interment private.

In lieu of flowers, her family has requested that donations be made in her memory to: Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Drive, Braintree, MA 02184 or the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset, MA 02025.

'Sheer' delight

There's 'Madness' at Charles Playhouse

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Actress Jennifer Ellis won't give up any names, but the Whitman native says she didn't have to look too far for inspiration when she was cast to play Barbara DeMarco, the flighty and flirtatious beauty parlor assistant – and sometime murder suspect – in "Shear Madness" at Boston's Charles Playhouse.

"I grew up on the South Shore with girls like Barbara. She is a conglomeration of girls I went to high school with and there is part of me in Barbara, too," explained Ellis recently by telephone. " I use my mom's accent for the character, with traces of Lois Griffin from 'Family Guy,' to get Barbara's sound just right. My mother, Elaine, and father, Peter Ellis, both grew up in Randolph and they have what I would describe as thick Boston accents."

That regional sound comes in handy for Ellis in the long-running comedy murder mystery set in a Newbury Street hair salon. Now celebrating its 30th anniversary in Boston, "Shear Madness" lets audiences in on the action and asks them to help solve the hair shears stabbing of the famed concert pianist who lives above the unisex salon.

Jennifer Ellis

"I fell in love with the show the first time I saw it. It's sort of like Agatha Christie meets 'Saturday Night Live.' It is so Boston," says Ellis, a 1998 graduate of Whitman Hanson Regional High School who graduated from Bridgewater State College five years later with a degree in communications and theater arts. "It took me a while, however, to get to know and like Barbara, because she is pretty quick to snap at people who get on her bad side. I like her very much now though."

As armchair detectives, audiences sometimes feel differently.

"It is always interesting to me to see what affects Barbara's guilt or innocence. We get all kind of audiences, from locals and tourists to school groups and bridal parties. The ideal audience is made up of people from the area, though, because they get all the jokes and local references."

Even with two years' experience, Ellis is a relative newcomer to a three-decade phenomenon which began in 1978 with a Lake George, N.Y., run of the play based on "Scherenschnitt," by German writer and psychologist Paul Portner. Producers Marilyn Abrams and Bruce Jordan transferred the show to Boston in January 1980. The pair have subsequently presented "Shear Madness" – listed in the Guinness Book of World Records as the longest-running play in the history of the American theater – in 40 U.S. cities, and mounted 85 international productions for a worldwide audience of nine million. It is estimated that over 1.8 million people have seen the show in Boston.

An only slightly smaller number of actors, including several from the South Shore, have performed in the show, too, including Kathy St. George, real-life couple Paula Plum and Richard Snee, and Cohasset's own John Kuntz. The show's longtime director, Michael Fennimore of Weymouth, often joins his cast on stage to play the police detective, while actor Bates Wilder of Scituate serves as stage manager. Two other veterans, Alice Duffy of Hingham and Nancy E. Carroll, both of whom have played society matron Mrs. Shubert, can currently be seen on Broadway in Noel Coward's "Present Laughter."

Like many others before her, Ellis steps in and out of the Boston "Madness."

"This company is great, not only because it represents steady work in an Equity production, but also because it allows actors to take time off to do other things," says Ellis who appeared in Commonwealth Shakespeare Company's "The Comedy of Errors" last summer on Boston Common. "Being in the show is also great, because you get to work with people like Pat Shea and Paul Dunn who have been in it, on and off, for decades. Many of my fellow cast members have had long careers in this city. They're a really fun and talented group. "

"Shear Madness" is at The Charles Playhouse, 74 Warrenton St., Boston. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-426-5225, or go online at shearmadness.com.

TOWN COMMONS

FEBRUARY 4-12, 2010

A 'Dream' come true

By R. Scott Reedy

Syesha Mercado (Deena), Moya Angela (Effie) and Adrienne Warren (Lorrell) perform in "Dreamgirls" at the Colonial Theatre through Feb. 14.

When Moya Angela was cast as Effie White in the current national tour of "Dreamgirls," now at Boston's Colonial Theatre, she took a major step forward in her career and showed that she had more than just a powerful voice in common with her sometimes hard-scrabble character. Turned down for the role of Effie – which would win Jennifer Hudson the 2007 Academy Award for best supporting actress – in the feature film of "Dreamgirls," Angela subsequently ended a long run in the road company of "The Lion King" and, without another city to play, headed home to Indianapolis. Before too long, lean financial times led to a job as a restaurant hostess.

Angela just may have seated her last party, however, now that she is finally getting the chance to play the role that also won Jennifer Holiday a 1982 Tony Award for Michael Bennett's original Broadway production. The tour, which opened late last year at New York's historic Apollo Theatre, the setting for some of the show's key scenes, is a new mounting of the Motown-inspired musical. Most say the show, with music by Henry Krieger and book and lyrics by Tom Eyen and now being directed by Robert Longbottom, about the rocky road to fame of the fictional singing trio the "Dreams" Is really about the ultimate 1960s and '70s girl group, the Supremes.

She knows it won't be easy to fill the high heels of Holliday and Hudson, but Angela is eager to show what she's got. During a recent call from Chicago, the 26-year-old performer talked about all things Effie including that show-stopping signature song.

Town Commons: What was it like to open at the Apollo?

Angela: It was amazing. The energy in that building is crazy. We were the first Broadway show to ever open there and it felt almost like we were performing a concert in an arena. The audiences were very warm and welcoming to us. Once in a while, too, it would just hit me that we were actually at the Apollo in the dressing rooms and on the stage where so many amazing people had been before us.

Moya Angela

Town Commons: Describe your Effie?

Angela: It's been a real inspiration for me to follow Jennifer Holliday and Jennifer Hudson in this role. I want to make them proud, but my Effie is still all me. It is all about what I bring to the character. Effie is a special situation. She goes on a real emotional roller coaster. At first, she is like the mother of the group. Then she falls in love, gets pushed to the background, goes crazy, and then gets help. She's up and down, but she never loses her passion or her big personality. She has her heart broken, of course, and on that I can totally relate to Effie. I can really understand what it was like for her to go for something and then be shot down, or to be in love with someone and then be rejected. I've had my heart broken and I know what it is like to have a falling out with close friends, too, so this story hits very close to home, it's almost scary. When I'm doing the show, I think of all those experiences and do my best to push past them.

Town Commons: Are you a fan of girl groups?

Angela: One of my favorite girl groups was En Vogue. I loved their harmonies and I loved how each girl in the group could be the lead.

Town Commons: After the music, of course, the Dreams get their glamour from an eye-popping array of marabou-trimmed, sequin-encrusted ensembles. How great is it to slip into those William Ivey Long costumes?

Angela: Being a girl, I love the beautiful dresses and gowns very, very much. I also love the clothes we get to wear early on, before the Dreams hit it big. Every costume I wear makes me feel great. These clothes were made especially for us so they've never even been worn by anyone else and that is a wonderful thing. They fit perfectly, too, so you can't help but feel great in them.

Town Commons: Effie's tour-de-force act-one closer, "And I Am Telling You I'm Not Going," usually rips the roof off the theater and the hearts out of audiences. How do you do that eight times a week?

Angela: When I was in college at Kentucky State University, I was in a girl group and pretty much all we did was covers from "Dreamgirls" so I've sung that song for a long time. It is different, of course, doing it in this show. That song is so emotional and painful that I really have to prepare myself and be ready for it each and every time. I have to pace myself and remember that everyone who comes to the show must receive the song with full emotion, the way it is intended to be heard. It is my favorite number, but it is also the hardest on me physically. When I get done, I have to go straight to my dressing room and literally take a nap."

"Dreamgirls" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through Feb. 14. For tickets and information, call 800-982-2787 or go online at BroadwayAcrossAmerica.com.

Joseph's inventory seized

Last Friday, inventory from Joseph's Hardware on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) was being seized by the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department.

Closed stores include Cohasset location

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Residents throughout the South Shore, particularly in Cohasset, Norwell, Marshfield and Plymouth, are down a hardware store.

Baron Joseph — owner of the four Joseph's Hardware stores — is officially out of business.

In a dramatic scene, which caught some employees by surprise, the inventory at all four locations was seized late last week in an effort overseen by the Norfolk and Plymouth County sheriffs.

Now Joseph's former employees — as many as 25 full-time and part-time workers — are in the unemployment line. And some, who asked to remain anonymous, are worried they won't be paid wages due.

To further compound Joseph's financial problems, state tax liens totaling more than $6 million have been filed.

The seizure was the final act in a civil suit brought against the owners of Joseph's Hardware by Holbrook Cooperative Bank. In default, according to the bank, was a $500,000 loan signed about a year ago by Joseph's wife, Jenny Madden, who is also the company president.

CPC supports land purchase

Pledges $250K toward 13 acres near Town Hall

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Community Preservation Committee has supported – to the tune of $250,000 – the purchase of a 12-acre parcel of land located behind the Cohasset Town Hall.

However, the project will still need to gain support from Town Meeting, and receive additional funding.

Sandra Durant and Debbie Shadd from the Open Space Committee are the proponents of the project. Shadd doubles as the president of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a non-profit group that purchases and protects open space.

The property, known as the Morrissey property or Great Neck Ledge, abuts or is in proximity to several of the Cohasset Conservation Trust properties (Great Brewster Woods, Deans Meadow, Sumner Smith Overlook, Blake property) as well as some undeveloped town parcels making it extremely attractive for future public open space use, Durant said.

The 12-acre property includes two access points: one from the Town Hall parking lot and the other from Beach Street.

A Valentine of a new book

Weymouth native is mystery novelist

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Boy lost in Wompatuck State Park; found by psychic. Skeleton found in Great Esker Park.

These headlines are not ripped from the pages of the local newspaper, but they are ripped from the pages of the latest book by Weymouth native, Heather Webber.

"Truly, Madly," which hit bookstores last week, is the first in a series of mystery books featuring Lucy Valentine as the protagonist.

As couples and singles prepare for Valentine's Day on Sunday, Webber is hoping a little romance, a little mystery and a little bit of paranormal fun is on the agenda.

"'Truly, Madly' is a great escape for a little while. It takes your mind to another place, makes you smile and there is a happy ending," Webber said. "I took murder, romance, and happily ever after and tried to see how well they would blend together – I think I was pretty successful."

What may excite local readers is the setting of the mystery novel – the South Shore and Boston. Lucy Valentine makes her way in town via the Hingham commuter boat, finds a skeleton in Great Esker Park and she calls Atlantic Avenue in Cohasset home.

"I wanted to go home for the Lucy books – to where I grew up. It was completely fun to go back," Webber said, who currently lives in Cincinnati. Webber grew up in North Weymouth, graduating in the last class of Weymouth North High in 1990.

COURTESY PHOTO

Heather Webber, a native of North Weymouth, uses Boston and the South Shore – including Cohasset — as the setting for her mystery novel.

Lucy Valentine lives in a fictional Atlantic Avenue guest cottage on the water. Her meddling grandmother lives in the main house.

About two years ago she came home to visit and reminded herself of the lay of the land just before she began writing "Truly, Madly."

While she admits not everything is true to life, she tried to capture as much of the "flavor" of the area as possible naming New England as ideal place for the setting of a mystery novel.

Although the book takes place in a non-fiction setting the rest of the novel is entirely fictional.

The main character Lucy Valentine comes from a long line of matchmakers, but is a bit different from her father and her ancestors. They have the ability to read "auras" and pair up perfect

In better times, here is Baron Joseph outside the Cohasset store in July 2008.

Closed stores include Cohasset location

FROM JOSEPH'S, PAGE 1

Holbrook Cooperative Bank filed a civil suit against Madden, Joseph and their company, WDW Trading Inc., in late September, shortly after Joseph's Hingham location closed suddenly.

When Joseph spoke to the Mariner on Monday, he was subdued, but wanted to share his account of the last few months.

"We owned a little hardware company that provided a service on the South Shore for many years," Joseph said. "Everyone I've talked to is just shaking their head; it is a small amount of money in today's business world."

Since the Hingham store's closing, the bank alleges in court documents that store's inventory, the bank's sole collateral, was dwindling.

A relatively new venture in patio furniture in Hanover, Joseph's Casual Concepts, closed. In Marshfield, the bank alleged Joseph's Hardware was forced to move from a freestanding location at 863 Plain St. because the Bank of Canton foreclosed on the building as a result of Joseph's Hardware not paying its financial obligations to the building's owner.

Inventory was packed up and moved to 776 Plain St., where Joseph's shared retail space with Lapels Dry Cleaners and much of the stock was stored in the basement. A lease document indicated an addition was planned and the five-year term would begin in June 2010.

In court documents, the Holbrook Cooperative Bank contested the store in Norwell had significantly lowered its stock and believed it was getting ready to close.

An inventory inspection performed by a third party on behalf of the bank found the inventory has declined by approximately $850,000 with no reduction to the loan.

Joseph refuted the allegations he was disposing of collateral. He said the Hingham store's inventory was dispersed over the remaining locations and closed due to lack of business performance and on the heels of his wife's diagnosis with a rare and progressive neuromuscular disease.

"We were consolidating only to reduce expenses," Joseph said, adding the winter season is the slowest for a hardware store and inventory was down significantly as a normal course of business.

Joseph said he estimated the four locations had about $1.5 million in inventory when the seizure took place.

"Everybody on the South Shore knows we always have tons of inventory," he said.

Court records show that Joseph and Madden have been negotiating with the bank since September after making a handful of late payments on the $500,000 loan. At one point, Joseph offered three commercial properties in Cohasset and a 40-foot Hatteras motor yacht as additional collateral and requested 120 days to find other financing. The bank did not agree to those terms.

Paul Falvey, senior vice president at Holbrook Cooperative Bank, declined to comment. The bank's attorney could not be reached for comment.

The state Department of Revenue filed tax liens in June totaling nearly $6 million against Joseph for failing to make payments as far back as 1996. He declined to discuss the matter, other than to say that his lawyer had assured him he would end up paying less than $1 million.

The property taxes for all three parcels associated with the Joseph's Hardware location in Cohasset are behind for the current fiscal year, which began July 1, 2009.

Did you have something at Joseph's?

A sign was placed on the Joseph's Hardware stores giving information on how customers may go about getting a product they may have placed on order or dropped off for repair. E-mail should be sent to josephshardware@gmail.com.

The sign asks that a list of item(s) purchased (be specific as possible with item number and description), whether you have a receipt and a full name, address and phone number should be included. The note said someone would be in touch about the items as soon as possible.

Joseph's Do It Best Hardware started in Norwell in 1982 and expanded to Cohasset, Marshfield, Plymouth and Hingham over the course of the last 25 years. His Cohasset operation opened in 1994.

Joseph said he was not sure what was next for this family or future action they would take.

"I don't know what the rules are. I don't know what we're going to do next," he said. "I'm living the nightmare."

POLICE BEAT

Man helped by call from nurse

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

As it turned out the 32-year-old Hull man, who was in a 2004 Dodge Ram pickup, had had a reaction to his medications and had passed out.

An observant registered nurse alerted police at about 10:07 a.m. on Saturday (Feb. 6) when she saw a man sleeping in his pickup truck at the end of Doane Street by the Wompatuck Park gate and asked police to check on him.

As it turned out the 32-year-old Hull man, who was in a 2004 Dodge Ram pickup, had had a reaction to his medications and had passed out. The windows were open and the temperature was extremely cold. He was starting to have the effects of hypothermia, police said. He was transported to South Shore Hospital by the paramedics.

Larceny charges

A 30-year-old Scituate man is being summonsed to court on two counts of larceny under $250, police said. The charges stem from an investigation of a flimflam (swindle) reported by a Route 3A business in December.

The Scituate man allegedly purchased two cases of shingles from the store and then returned them for a refund of $64 for each case. Two days later, the store discovered that while the boxes appeared to contain the shingles — underneath the shingles were rocks. His court date is March 1.

Suspended license

An officer was monitoring traffic at about 1:50 p.m. on Monday (Feb. 1) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Beechwood Street and saw a 1997 Toyota RAV4 pass by with an expired inspection sticker. The officer stopped the vehicle and a check with the Registry of Motor Vehicles showed the operator, a 41-year-old Braintree woman, had a suspended license for nonpayment of fines. She will be summonsed to court on charges of operating after license suspension and having no inspection sticker.

Warrant arrest

An officer ran a random computer check on the plate of a 1996 Mazda at about 3:30 p.m. on Monday (Feb. 1), police said. The computer showed the registered owner had a warrant out of Hingham District Court for failure to pay a fine. The officer matched the photo from the Registry with the operator and stopped the car on Elm Street. The operator, at 29-year-old Weymouth woman was arrested on the warrant.

Suspicious call

A 29-year-old Cohasset woman notified police after receiving an annoying call; the caller, who had called from a cell phone, was breathing heavily, police said. The report came in at 5:15 p.m., Monday (Feb. 1). Police recommend residents report annoying or obscene phone calls right away, police said.

Car skidded

Police said an 18-year-old Hull man in a 1999 Jeep Wrangler skidded at the bend of the road on Jerusalem Road, between Forest Avenue and West Corner, striking a wall. The car, which was headed toward West Corner, turned onto its side, police said. The accident occurred at 7:19 a.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 3). The vehicle had to be towed but the operator was not injured. There were snow and ice conditions on the road, police said.

Deer hit

A 57-year-old Scituate woman, driving a 2001 Ford Thunderbird, was headed north on Route 3A when at about 6:35 a.m. on Friday (Feb. 4) a deer ran in front of her car. The vehicle had to be towed; there were no injuries. The deer ran off and could not be found, police said.

Missing items

A man came to the police station reported last week (Feb. 4) that some items were missing from his vehicle that was in for repairs at a local garage. The garage had been holding the vehicle on a "mechanics lein" because the owner did not have money to pay, police said. When he returned to his vehicle, he reported that a Fisher Plow module and his stereo were missing. The vehicle was open and there was no damage to it, police said. There were no witnesses and no physical evidence.

Lights sequence

A caller told police last week to have a mechanical engineer fix the traffic lights at the intersection of North Main Street, Forest Avenue and lower King Street. Police said the lights are working properly. The lights turn red in all directions when a train is coming to keep cars from backing up at the grade crossing on lower King, police said.

Canopy damaged

A 29-year-old Hull man in a large white box truck hit the top of the drive-through canopy at Rockland Trust off Chief Justice Cushing Highway last Friday at about 9:07 a.m. and kept on going, police said. Because the man had just finished conducting some banking at the drive-through, police were able to check the audit sheet and locate him. Police said he told them he knew he had hit the canopy but decided to leave. He is being summonsed to court for leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage.

Speeding

A 47-year-old Scituate man in a 2004 Pontiac Vibe was clocked on radar as traveling 52 in a 35 mph zone on Chief Justice Cushing Highway at about 9:45 p.m. on Saturday (Feb. 6). Police talked to the operator, who produced a learner's permit. He will be summonsed to court on charges of speeding and driving without a license. His car was towed.

Road rage

A 19-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court on charges of negligent operation and marked lanes violation after an apparent road rage incident on Sunday (Feb. 7) at about 6:26 p.m.

Police said a 17-year-old Cohasset boy called police after something was thrown at his vehicle on South Main Street near St. Anthony's. He told police that the pickup was tailgating and passed him on the wrong side of the road; as it passed the passenger threw something at his car. He provided police with a plate number.

Police stopped the pickup on Howard Gleason Road and said the 19-year-old operator admitted to passing on the wrong side of the road.

Police were unable to determine what was thrown at the 17-year-old's car.

Take part in police survey

In an effort to identify the needs of our community, the Cohasset Police Department has linked a survey to its web page at: www.cohassetpolice.com

Please take a few minutes and complete the survey. For those who do not have computer access, copies of the survey will be placed at Cohasset Police Station and Town Hall. Additionally, each police car will have copies of the survey and officers would be glad to drop off and pick up surveys from your home.

You can call the Cohasset Police Department at 781-383-1212.

Three-way school board race shapes up

MacCarthy, Astino pull papers

"I still feel there is a voice from me that needs to be at the table."
— Adrienne MacCarthy

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In one week there went from being an open seat on the School Committee to a three-way race for School Committee.

Current School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy and Flintlock Ridge Road resident Jeanne Astino both took out nomination papers on Monday.

MacCarthy will be seeking her third term on the School Committee; Astino her first. Beach Street resident Paul Ognibene took out nomination papers for the School Committee last week. Current school committee member Lucia Flibotte is not seeking re-election.

Citizens have until next Thursday, Feb. 18 to pull nomination papers for positions and until the following Tuesday, Feb. 23 to return their signature for certification.

As a parent of three boys — a Cohasset High alumnus, and a current senior and freshman — MacCarthy said she is a stakeholder. MacCarthy first became involved with the schools when she began serving on school building committee in the mid-1990s.

That historical perspective, she said, is something that is essential for the committee.

"I still feel there is a voice from me that needs to be at the table," MacCarthy said.

There are challenges ahead that she said she would like to be a part of – budget issues, strategic planning, and improving communication between the schools, parents and community.

"Everything we are doing is heading us in the right direction: toward the goal of challenging and motivating all students from kindergarten on up…I want to see that continue," MacCarthy said, adding a great deal of positive progress has been made over the past six years.

Astino has two daughters who are Cohasset Public School students, a 16-year-old at the high school and an 11-year-old at Deer Hill. She comes with the perspective more needs to change at the schools, especially at the secondary level.

"I think people in this town has lost faith in the schools," Astino said. "My mantra as a school committee member would be honesty and education."

Since September Astino has been attending the School Committee meetings regularly, but only decided last week to seek a seat — and a voice — on the committee.

"I'm excited to have the opportunity to effect some change…I believe in public education and hope to enable a positive exchange of ideas," Astino said.

Astino previously worked in the human resources/recruiting offices at two big accounting firms; she has been a stay-at-home mom with a small home-based direct sales business for several years.

For every position available in the 2010 Town Election, but one, a citizen has come forward to pull papers.

The exception is a one-year seat on Recreation Commission to fill an unexpired term.

Andrew Quigley, who was appointed to the position in 2009, pulled papers, but has since decided not to seek the post.

"I am very grateful to the selectmen and the Recreation Commission members for having elected me last summer to fill a vacancy on the commission, but for a variety of reasons that only recently have arisen, I will not seek election in this town election," Quigley said, adding he enjoyed working on the commission.

"I am making this announcement now so as to allow others who may wish to serve on the commission an opportunity to file the necessary nomination papers before the filing deadline," Quigley said.

Other candidates that have come forward to pull papers:

Library Trustees (three three-year terms): Sarah Pease of Sankey Road, Stacey Weaver of Nichols Road, and Henry Rattenbury of Briarwood Lane.

Recreation Commission (one five-year term): Abigail Alves of Stockbridge St.

Board of Selectmen (two three-year terms): Paul Carlson of Old Coach Road and Leland Jenkins of Jerusalem Road.

Housing Authority (one five-year term): Helen "Taffy" Nothnagle of Atlantic Ave.

Planning Board (one five-year term): Stuart Ivimey of Sankey Road.

Planning Board associate member (one three-year term): William Hannon of Linden Drive.

Sewer Commission (one three-year term): James Dow of North Main St.

Water Commission (one three-year term): Nathaniel Palmer of Little Harbor Road and Christopher Seebeck of Riverview Drive.

Board of Assessors (one three-year term): Elsa Miller of Reservoir Road.

Board of Health (one three-year term): Steve Bobo of Jerusalem Road.

*School Committee (two three-year terms): Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane St., Paul Ognibene of Beach St. and Jeanne Astino of Flintrock Ridge Road.

Denotes a race for that position(s).

Friday, March 5, 2009 is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting to be held on Saturday, March 27, 2010 and for the Annual Town Election to be held on Saturday, April 10, 2010.

Music Circus seeks change in liquor license

Requests time restrictions be removed

"If we have more flexibility, we can work better with our acts."
— Vince Longo, chief operating officer

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The raising of the green and yellow South Shore Music Circus tent is sure harbinger that summer is coming. Although summer is still along ways off – if this week's snowstorm is any indication – the South Shore Playhouse Associates is busy booking acts for the upcoming season.

Vince Longo, South Shore Playhouse Associates' chief operating officer, sought a change to the business' liquor license from the Selectmen this week.

Longo said over the years the business has changed slightly to where he has to be flexible when scheduling acts.

"In 1994, most bands has opening acts or a special guest that played for 30 minutes, which was followed by a 30 minute intermission," Longo said.

Now, an opening act may play a shorter set, or a comic will warm up the crowd for 10 minutes, or there won't be an opening act, Longo said. In addition, sometimes they schedule a double show for a popular act or a matinee show.

"If we have more flexibility, we can work better with our acts," Longo said.

As a result, Longo was requesting the removal of the time limits placed on the service of beer and wine.

Since 1994 the South Shore Music Circus has held a malt beverages and wine liquor license with certain restrictions imposed by the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Longo said the restrictions were originally placed on the license because the ZBA wasn't sure what kind of operator they would be.

Under the liquor license the South Shore Music Circus never had any violations or warnings.

The Music Circus's own self-imposed policy is to stop the service of beer and wine once the headlining act hits the stage (people waiting in line when the act goes on are served).

Selectman Ted Carr brought up that no other liquor license holder in the town of Cohasset was subject to additional restrictions.

"The difference is in the number of people," said Selectman Fred Koed, adding the restrictions were developed to help ensure the Music Circus is a good neighbor. "I'd be reluctant to make any changes without input from the neighbors."

Jennifer Oram, administrative assistant to the town manager and zoning board, said at the ZBA public hearing on the matter all neighbors were notified and none attended.

"We're not trying to build a model that will create more consumption," Longo said.

The Board of Selectmen approved the requested changes, which remove the time restrictions on the serving of alcoholic beverages. The changes allow beer and wine service seven days a week from 2p.m. to 10p.m.

Other requirements like having only four locations for the sale of alcohol, only allowing two alcoholic beverages per customer, having a police officer at each service location are still in place.

The Zoning Board of Appeals held a public hearing with the South Shore Music Circus to hear an application to modify an existing special permit. Specifically, the South Shore Playhouse Associates – parent of the Music Circus — wanted to increase the number of times the Music Circus could put up a temporary tent.

What's coming up at Town meeting

The Board of Selectmen breezed through four town meeting articles on Monday night. They voted to recommend all four of the articles for approval by Town Meeting.

• General bylaw amendment—Dog regulations (Article 22): The Board of Health is hoping to get Town Meeting support for an article that would require dog owners to pick up after their pet on any other place other than their own private property. Fines associated with violating the bylaw would be $25 for first offence; $35 for a second; and $50 for a third offense. The Animal Control Officer would enforce the regulation. The Board of Health adopted the same bylaw in 2000, but it never was brought before Town Meeting, which gives it more teeth. Board of Health officials said there is a potential health danger in public places from fecal material from dogs, as well as contaminated stormwater runoff.

• Motor vehicle tax deferment for active service veterans (Article 12): The Board of Assessors and the Director of Veterans Services, Joe McElroy, came forward with this request. The article would defer payment of motor vehicle excise tax for National Guard and reserve military personnel (and their dependents) while they are serving. After their service and return to Massachusetts they would have 180 days to pay.

• Residency requirement for veterans (Article 13): This article would reduce the residency requirement for veterans who were not living in Massachusetts six months before entering the service from five years to one year before applying to any veteran exemptions.

• Funding triennial revaluation program (Article 14): The Assessors will request $25,000 to be appropriated to carry out state mandated revaluation of commercial and personal property value updates.

• Property tax exemptions (article 15) and Property tax exemptions for seniors (article 16): Routine articles that must be voted on every year. The articles allows the Assessors to increase all property tax exemptions by 100 percent and two, to further assist seniors, allow an additional increase of 100 percent to applicants who qualify under Clause 41C (Seniors).

• Citizens Petition—Beechwood Ballpark (Article 23): This article will allow the transfer of $11,860 currently in a Beechwood Improvement Association trust fund under the auspices of the town to a new non-profit Beechwood Area Recreation Association to be used to maintain the ballfield, playground, basketball court and grounds.

Organic farming and gardening course

The South Shore Community Center will offer a new and exciting course this coming spring – Organic Farming and Gardening at Holly Hill Farm with John Belber. This is an opportunity for adults and families who wish to learn about working in a garden, while at the same time — help others in their community. This program will feature hands-on opportunities for participants to grow seeds, start seedlings, discuss soil and compost, prepare growing beds, transplant and discuss garden plans. Each participant will be able to take plants and plans home or be part of a community garden where some of the produce will go to a local food pantry. The session will end with a "salad party" in May.

There will also be many opportunities to see the rest of Holly Hill Farm in action as they prepare the fields and greenhouse with plants. This six-week course will take place at Holly Hill Farm beginning on Sunday, April 25 from 2 to 3:30 p.m. The cost is $150 per person with children ages 4 to 12 free when accompanying an adult participant. There is also a $20 materials fee payable to Holly Hill at the first class, which will cover seeds, pots and soil for the complete session. Call 781-383-0088 to register or stop by the Center at 3 North Main Street. Class size is limited.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

FIVE ADDITIONAL QUESTIONS TO ASK A CAMP DIRECTOR OR REPRESENTATIVE
by, Bette Bussel, Executive Director American Camp Association, New England

With the camp fair and camp open house season starting to heat up, here is a list of questions families can ask the camp directors or representatives they will have a chance to speak with. The first half of this list was published last week. Choose your questions carefully! Camp websites and materials often include FAQs; but if you've not had a chance to review these, don't be shy about clarifying key information.

How does the camp handle any adjustment periods at the beginning of the session?
Some overnight camps may ask that you send a letter to the camp before the child arrives so that (s)he will have something from home to read upon arrival. Others may recommend refraining from contacting the child by telephone (for a certain period of time or at all) to allow them to adjust. Day Camps often ask families to follow a certain routines when dropping off and picking up campers, designed to maximize the camp fun and minimize the goodbye. Either way, review camp information carefully so all family members understand how the camp transition will unfold.

Are references available?
Much like any other service you'd use, find out what others have thought of the camp. Ask the director for references – most likely parents of current or past campers—new campers of a similar age to your child. Most will be happy to connect you with a parent of a current camper. Hearing from another parent can help determine if this camp is the right fit for your child.

How does the camp recruit, screen and train its staff?
Ask how the camp screens and trains its staff—and where it recruits them. Certain state regulations address background checks. ACA Standards address many aspects of staff training.

How does the camp handle discipline issues?
Let's face it – kids will be kids! Just like any other environment, there may be times where camps need to discipline a child. Ask what camp's policies and rules are. Consider whether or not your child will respond to the camp's discipline policies.

Are there financial dicounts/ incentives available?
Each camp is responsible for the way they structure their financial systems, so don't assume what holds true at one camp is true for all of them. If you really like a camp, but think paying for it may be a challenge (especially if you have multiple children attending), talk with the director to see if there is anything they can do to help you out. Some may offer discounts for sending more than one child, while others may offer payment plans.

Budget view from Beacon Hill

State legislators say don't expect level funding

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With Town Meeting six weeks away, Cohasset is in the midst of preparing its budget for the next fiscal year.

As has become tradition, state legislators Representative Garrett Bradley and Senator Bob Hedlund provide Selectmen with the budget outlook from the state level.

The Governor's version of the budget, which came out last month, proposes level funding of local aid to cities and towns. But, the legislators are not so optimistic at that prospect.

Although for the last four months state revenues have been on the up tick – exceeding their monthly forecast — the total revenue is still 2.7 percent, or $292 million, below last year's level.

"It's going to be a slow climb (to get back to where we once were), that's for sure," Bradley said.

A large portion of the Governor's proposal is dependent on new revenues – and new taxes – being approved by the Legislature.

According to Hedlund's handout, there is $52 million expected from a new candy and soda tax; $15 million from taxing smokeless tobacco and cigars; $75 million by capping film tax credit and $608 million in a yet-to-be approved federal Medicaid funding.

In addition, Treasurer Tim Cahill anticipates a $66 million shortfall in lottery aid, according to the handout.

"It's going to be a stretch to get to level funding," Bradley said. "It would be prudent for the town to expect some reduction in local aid when calculating the municipal budget."

Local aid funding is both legislators number one priority in this budget, they said.

Ted Langill, Hedlund's chief of staff who appeared in front of the Selectmen on the senator's behalf, said the challenge was holding local aid, which accounts for $5 billion of the $28 billion budget, harmless.

"That is the challenge, but it still remains Senator Hedlund's number-one priority," Langill said.

Langill said they were also keeping a close eye on other state aid accounts, like the school's "circuit breaker" special education aid and municipal library grants that have already been significantly slashed.

Both legislators are looking at some legislative changes that, if passed, could help municipalities.

Efforts include requiring cities and towns to raise any snow and ice deficit on the following year's tax rate outside of the restrictions proposed by Proposition 2-1/2, finding a way to fund circuit breaker at 75 percent reimbursement and pass a minimum local aid resolution early so municipalities have firm numbers to build their budgets.

One of the items the Board of Selectmen and Town Manager Bill Griffin said could significantly help them balance the budget is the ability to have health insurance plan design. Griffin said if he had the ability to adjust employee contributions and offer tiered plans, it could be a $350,000 savings for the town.

"That's equal to more than a 10 percent cut in state aid," Griffin said.

Bradley said that is something that he could work toward and knowing it could have that kind of impact could get the issue "ramped up" during this fiscal year.

Griffin also said municipalities are constantly being encouraged by the state to regionalize services, but then face opposition from local unions. He asked if some legislation could be done to exempt regionalization efforts from collective bargaining procedures.

CPC pledges $250K toward 13 acres near Town Hall

The town has long targeted this land as needing protection – it was named in town's first open space plan written in 1970.

The property, which is mostly wooded, has expansive views of Little Harbor and the ocean as well as some interesting ledge outcroppings. The property is also home to wildlife from the red-tailed hawk to deer to coyotes. It also has some old cart paths, which could form the basis of a new trail system.

Property acquisition costs are estimated to be between $800,000 and $1.2 million. To complement the CPC grant (if Town Meeting votes favorably for the project), Durant said they would pursue private fundraising, state and federal grants and a $100,000 donation from the Cohasset Conservation Trust has been pledged.

The land has been up for sale several times over the past decade and for a time was considered for a three-building senior housing development. If the town purchases the land, it will come off the town's tax rolls.

To sweeten the possibility, Durant said she has a standing letter of intent with the owner of seven acres adjacent to the Morrissey property stating that if the town purchased the 12 acres, they would place a conservation restriction on their own property.

Al Moore, CPC member and chair of the Planning Board, cautioned against anyone thinking the purchase of this property was urgent.

"There is not an inch of this that's developable. It's pretty well protected on its own. This property has come before (the planning board) with different plans more times than I care to admit," Moore said. "There's an awful lot of land, but it doesn't have a lot of value."

Mark DeGiacomo, who sat in the audience, said the town once said none of the lots could be build on, but one now has a house on it. The other two lots have frontage on Beach Street and, with the right developer, could be built on.

"To think this property is worth nothing or worth considerably less that the (current asking price of $1.5 million) is just not correct," Durant said. The property is assessed by the town of Cohasset at $2.14 million.

CPC vice chair Jeff Waal agreed the purchase of the land was a "great opportunity."

"We can put together a significant piece of open space with public access close to downtown," Waal said.

Moore agreed to the importance of the land and the opportunity to create a contiguous piece of open space, "I just don't want to see the town overpay for it."

Durant said the CPC money simply opens up the opportunity for the Open Space Committee to seek other money and begin negotiating a fair deal, "we're going to get the best possible price for the town."

The Community Preservation Committee supported the project in a majority vote and gave the group until Dec. 31, 2011 to sign a purchase and sale agreement on the property.

CPC member Margy Charles was the sole opposing vote; she felt strongly the land would never be able to be developed.

The project will still have pass muster at Town Meeting, March 28.

The Morrissey property was part of a brief discussion with the Board of Selectmen in early 2009, but the effort, particularly the funding, never came together. The town pledged to work with a non-profit group, the Trust for Public Land in January, but the organization withdrew its offer two months later citing the economic climate made the purchase nearly impossible.

BRIEFLY

Griffin passes five-year mark

Town Manager Bill Griffin recently celebrated his five-year anniversary of service to the Town of Cohasset. Selectmen chair Paul Carlson acknowledged the milestone — and Griffin's professional and calm approach to the job — at Monday night's meeting.

"You have maximized the ability to do a lot with a little," Selectman Ted Carr said.

Selectman Fred Koed said whenever he attends statewide meetings he constantly hears what a good reputation Griffin has around the state.

Griffin said the time has "flew right by."

Quigley seeks input through Mariner polls

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley acknowledged the Mariner recent poll on why more citizens aren't seeking election to town posts. She was particularly disturbed that just 3 percent of the respondents said officials were doing a good job.

"It is really scary for the town going forward if most hold the opinion they are either too busy or don't care about town issues," Quigley said.

She encouraged more citizens to participation, come to Town Meeting, and find out what is going on in town government.

"Right now the 100 people who regularly attend town meeting are the ones making all the decisions," Quigley said.

She said it would be interesting to see the results of the Mariner's current poll on recent presidents. Go to www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset to vote in the poll. For the results on the meals tax poll, see page 11.

Cohasset flag officially heading to space

Cohasset's own native astronaut, Captain Steve Bowen, will be taking the official Cohasset flag to space with him on his shuttle trip this spring, Selectman Ted Carr reported. NASA has accepted the flag as an allowable item and the town donated the flag to be sent to Bowen.

Bowen has been scheduled to fly on the STS-132. The mission will lift off in May 2010 and deliver new technology to the International Space Station. This is Bowen's second mission into space and will involve at least three space walks.

The flag will be returned to the town after its trip to space and be flown on special occasions. The flag was originally designed for Cohasset bicentennial celebration in 1970 and was recently recreated by the Historical Society. Flag can be purchased for $40 at the Historical Society Paul Pratt Building on South Main St or by calling 781-383-1434.

Sixty one year old loses 30 pounds and gains self esteem!

I got to a point where I just had to do something about my weight. I was tired all the time. I met with the staff at Get In Shape For Women and little did I know that this would change my way of dieting and exercising. They have taught me how to eat right. I am toning as I lose the extra weight and no longer have any flabby skin.

John McNabb has been providing IT tech support services for homeowners and small businesses on the South Shore since 2005.

McNabb earns Windows 7 certification

John McNabb, who is an IT consultant at South Shore PC Services, based in Cohasset, has earned the Technical Specialist: Windows 7 Configuration certification from Microsoft.

"This certification demonstrates that I am qualified to provide technical support for Windows 7, which is Microsoft's newest operating system," said McNabb. Windows 7 was released for sale Oct. 22, 2009.

"I can help homeowners and small businesses to install Windows 7 by upgrading from Microsoft Vista or migrating from Windows XP," said McNabb. "I can also troubleshoot and solve problems in Windows 7, as well as in Microsoft Windows Vista, Windows XP, and earlier operating systems like Windows 2000 and Windows 98."

McNabb has been providing IT tech support services for homeowners and small businesses on the South Shore since 2005. He helps solve hardware and software problems with personal computers, laptops and networks.

McNabb also holds a number of other IT certifications, including Microsoft Certified Systems Administrator, Security, Microsoft Certified Desktop Support Technician and Microsoft Certified Professional. He also holds the A+, Network+, Server+, and Security+ certifications from the Computing Technology Industry Association, and is a certified computer service technician through the Electronics Technicians Association.

VALENTINE'S

Hello Cohasset. Happy Valentine's weekend to everyone as we also get ready to kick off the week of February Vacation. I hope that everyone enjoys the special day filled with love as well as the vacation week. Whether you are here in Cohasset or traveling to a new location, make sure to take photos, enjoy all that the week has to offer and don't forget to send in any news and share with us any of the great adventures you may have.

NURSING DEGREE

Congratulations are being sent to Katie James, daughter of Brian and Terry James, who graduated in December from Simmons College with a bachelor of science in Nursing. Katie completed her certification as an RN and is continuing on a 5-year program at Simmons to complete her masters in the Nurse Practitioner program. Katie is a CHS graduate of 2006. Katie's family and friends are so proud, especially Mom and Dad. Nice work Katie!

UVM

Congratulations to Lauren Allen of Cohasset, daughter of Bob and Joanne Allen. Lauren has made the Dean's List for the Fall 2009 semester at the University of Vermont where she is studying elementary education. Great news to hear Lauren, keep up the great work.

GETTYSBURG

Megan Sacks of Cohasset, a junior at Gettysburg College, has been placed the deans' honor list for outstanding academic achievement in the fall 2009. Awesome, Megan!

COOL FUN

FAIRFIELD

Charlotte Sida, a resident of Cohasset, was named to the dean's list at Fairfield University for the fall 2009 semester. Charlotte is a senior studying in the College of Arts & Sciences. Well done, Charlotte!

BENTLEY

The following Cohasset students were named to the 2009 fall semester dean's list at Bentley University.

Daniel Brady, a freshman; and Ryan Crough, a sophomore.

To be named to the dean's list, a full-time student must have a grade point average of 3.3 or higher with no course grade below 2.0 during the term.

Keep up the good work!

CONNECTICUT

The following Cohasset students achieved dean's list for the 2009 fall semester at Connecticut College.

- Charles Czerkawski, class of 2012.
- Owen Stevenson, class of 2011.

This is great news, congratulations to you both.

BOY SCOUTS

We have a few things to share in reference to some of the young men in our town. Feb. 8, 2010, marks the 100th birthday of the founding of the Boy Scouts of America. To commemorate this event, there will be a display of Boy Scout memorabilia in the display cases at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset throughout the month of February. Boy Scouts, Alec Hurd and Derek Benson, of Troop 28, created the display using memorabilia borrowed from Boy Scout Troop 28 and from Mr. Arthur Lehr, Jr. To learn more about scouting in Cohasset, please visit the troop web site at www.troop28cohasset.org.

CUB SCOUTS

On Saturday, Feb. 6, Cub Scout Pack 38 held their annual Blue and Gold Dinner at St. Anthony's Parish Center. This year's Blue and Gold Dinner celebrated the 100th birthday of the founding of the Boy Scouts of America. While many Cub Scouts received badges, there were eight 5th grade Webelos II's who received their Arrow of Light Award, which is Cub Scouting's highest award. The boys have worked toward this award for two years; this year's recipients are: George Bryan, David Hillman, Maxwell Nakashima, Patrick Slater, Henry Dormitzer, Ryan Conforti, Matthew Fitzpatrick, and Quentin Hill. In addition to their Arrow of Light Badge, each boy received a certificate of recognition from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts House of Representatives, signed and presented by Rep. Garrett Bradley, and a certificate of recognition from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Senate, signed by Senator Robert Hedlund.

WINTERFEST

Mark your calendars for WinterFest Beer and Wine Tasting event! On Saturday, Feb. 13 from 7 to 10 pm., beautiful Hatherly Country Club will host "WinterFest", featuring red and white wine selection, seasonal beers, gourmet food pairings and live and silent auction. Tickets are $50 and can be purchased online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org , in person at the Shelter during public visiting hours, or by telephone order with Visa or Mastercard at (781) 544-4533. Advanced ticket purchase is recommended; tickets may not be available for purchase at the door.

All proceeds from this event will support the exceptional care of the animals at the Scituate Animal Shelter. The Scituate Animal Shelter is a non-profit, no-kill animal shelter proudly serving the greater South Shore region.

FUN TIMES

For any families out there who are looking for some fun times for the kiddos next week while parents take some time for themselves, Creative Kidsclub at Our World is holding a Tuesday-Friday fun-filled adventure program with activities and themes each day. Niko is a new resident at the shelter; he is quite friendly and gets along well with humans as well as other felines.

Niko does not have any issues

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Niko, a 2-year-old male, medium haired, jet black cat. He's a new resident, quite friendly, gets along well with humans as well as other felines. He doesn't have any issues and would be a welcome addition to most any cat friendly home. We do require that any cat adopted from our shelter is to be kept indoors.

We do require that any cat adopted from our shelter is to be kept indoors.

Please come and visit during open hours from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays, or 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays. If this isn't convenient, please call Shirley at 781-925-3380 to arrange an appointment to see Niko or any of our felines listed on our website at www.hsar.org.

Our mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 587, Hull MA 02045. The shelter is at 50 L Street, Hull, and the telephone number is 781-925-3121 or 877-378-1195. We invite you to become a member with a yearly donation of $25. This helps keep our cats fed and sheltered and you'll receive a quarterly newsletter and the knowledge that you're helping strays rescues and surrenders to find loving homes. Please call Mary at 781 925 3121 for details.

You can also help by clicking on www.theanimalrescuesite to feed animals in many locations, then click on "vote today" and vote for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue. This could make us eligible for a grant from anywhere from $1,000 to $10,000. It's a click a day till April 18th. Thanks one and all.

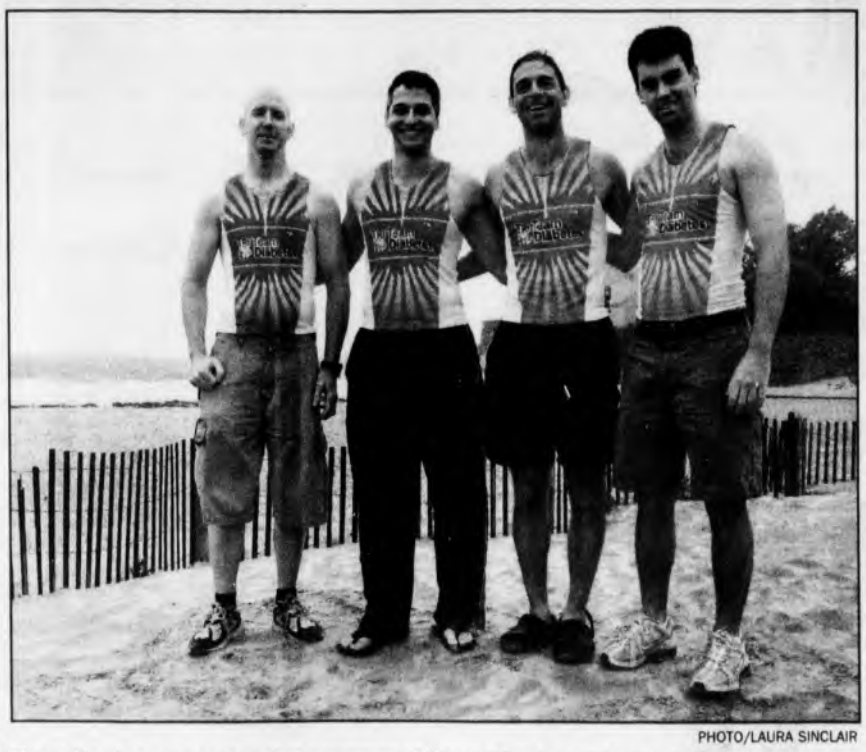
Cohasset reporter wins writing award

Nancy White, reporter for the Cohasset Mariner, part of GateHouse Media New England's South unit, was recognized for editorial excellence with a second place award in the Sports Story category during the New England Newspaper & Press Association's Better Newspaper Contest. The awards were presented Saturday night during a banquet at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel. Mariner photographer Robin Chan won three awards.

The south unit of GHMNE, which includes the Cohasset Mariner, won a total of 22 awards.



"We have a talented and dedicated staff that is committed to publishing the best community newspapers and Web sites possible," said Gregory Mathis, editor-in-chief. "It was terrific to see so many of our reporters, photographers and editors recognized for their outstanding work. Not only was the number of awards impressive, but the number of categories in which we won the awards is an indication to me of how talented and versatile our journalists are."

White won for her story previewing last year's Cohasset triathlon titled, "Putting a face on Type-1 diabetes."

"A neat twist on the goal of the triathlon – a team made up of diabetics competing to raise money for diabetes research," wrote the judges. "Well written, perfect for giving hope to those who suffer from the disease."

Some of the other highlights of this year's awards ceremony included the Old Colony Memorial staff winning first place for best newspaper Web site, the Scituate Mariner winning three awards, including two first place awards, and the Raynham Call winning four awards, including a first, two second and a third place.

Also, Raynham newsroom Managing Editor Alice Coyle and Mark Gardner, New Media Editor, won first place in the weekly class Web Convergence category for their collaboration developing the Wicked Local Web Jams Web site. Web Jams is a popular local band contest created by Coyle to bring exposure to South Shore bands.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Leveling, de-leveling

Back in our school days at Scituate High – leveling at the high school consisted of general education classes, college prep, and "accelerated" classes.

Those in the accelerated classes were dubbed "brains" and were relegated to being "unpopular" among the other students.

Competition to get into a "great" college seemed to be less. Applying to three colleges seemed like a lot.

We do not recall parents getting upset about "labeling" – in those days, teachers and administrators had more clout with the family. For better or worse, our parents put much weight into what the teacher thought was best.

Our Dad did fight the system when one of us brought home a report card with all "S's" for satisfactory in the fourth grade. There was not even a single S+ or S-. He told my sister's fourth-grade teacher that the report card told him nothing. It was a good opportunity to vent and I do think my sister's next report card had some variation.

Labeling was common back then and inclusion for students with special needs was practically non-existent, so the good old days were not all that good.

However, once we became parents "leveling" from everything from whether are kids were in the "red birds" or the "blue birds" reading group or whether they were on the Mite A or Mite B hockey team took center stage.

Everyone we knew had "gifted" children – whether they were brilliant musicians, mathematicians or athletes. Being picked for a travel team and the number of AP classes our student was enrolled in became a big part of conversation among parents.

Somewhere along the line – we, as parents – became more competitive about our children's accomplishments, abilities and brainpower, than our parents were about us.

What team, what reading group, what level of class and what college have become critically important.

As journalists and observers we see this all the time. Next door recently in Hingham, a mother's voice trembled as she pleaded with officials over the school budget that is facing some major cuts. Her son was applying to Georgetown and she explained how tough the competition is out there.

We cannot blame that mother. All parents want the best for their children.

Sports groups and educators created leveling – whether in reading groups, on sports teams or for high school classes. As parents, we bought into the system.

Students today are expected to "do it all." If you have the chance to read college scholarship applications – you will be amazed at what the "top" students pack into their day that also includes a range of community service activities. (There is clearly no time, in our view, for a "competitive" student to sit back, daydream and contemplate life!)

We mention all this in the hope of providing some perspective to the recent "de-leveling" controversy in Cohasset that included a recent forum for parents.

We continue to welcome the letters and commentaries that are providing a window into the system.

We agree with Superintendent of Schools Dr. Denise Walsh that labeling students is not a good thing.

But we live in the real world where levels and labels are a fact of life and parents are acutely aware of that.

Sadly, the importance placed on "levels" is unlikely to change anytime soon.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Just the tip of the iceberg'

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing in response to the "leveling" forum article in last week's paper. I am disappointed that the Mariner chose to print a lukewarm perspective on an important event. Over 100 dedicated and concerned parents turned out on a Tuesday evening because of information Mr. Joel Antolini had disclosed at the last School Committee meeting when he talked about using more "blended" classrooms at the high school and thereby de-leveling some of the academics. I hope your complete article will explore all of the concerns, not just the views of the school administration.

This meeting was just the tip of the iceberg. This is yet another example of a Superintendent, School Committee and Principal who present controversial issues and then don't encourage open discussion of key areas of education that directly affect this community. This attitude comes from the top down. In my 19 years as a parent with children in Cohasset schools, this current administration's blatant disregard for process and communication is both disturbing and disappointing. This is our children's only chance for a solid secondary education, and not a time for experiments.

I am writing to encourage and even implore those parents with younger children, who care to see Cohasset schools reclaim the reputation of excellence we once enjoyed.

PLEASE take out papers for School Committee by the 17th of February. I want to thank Mr. Ognibene for stepping up, and sincerely hope there is another citizen who can help lead Cohasset out of this quagmire and force a revamping of this administration. My last of four has only one year left, and I believe others with more compelling motivation could be more involved, more a part of the school-parent community, and more effective.

POLITICAL NOTES

Democrats to caucus Feb. 13

Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will hold their annual caucus at the Paul Pratt Public Library, located at 35 Ripley Road, on Saturday Feb. 13 at 9 a.m. to elect four (4) delegates and three (3) alternates to the 2010 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

The State Convention will be held on Friday, June 4th and Saturday, June 5th at the DCU Center in Worcester. At that time, Democrats from across the state will gather to endorse statewide candidates.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Cohasset. All ballots will be written and secret. Those not elected as Delegate and/or Alternate, who meet the qualifications, may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority, and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, disability, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland Street, Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129 no later than 10 days after the caucus date.

For caucus information please contact Chairman Kevin McCarthy at Kevin@cohasset-democrats.org or at 781-383-0639.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Paul Ognibene submits signatures

Paul M. Ognibene has become the first official candidate for Cohasset School Committee, having submitted nomination signatures for certification. Says Ogniben, "Thanks to the energetic efforts of our team, we've gathered enough signatures from Cohasset's voters to complete my nomination to run for Cohasset School Committee."

He adds, "As a father of two young children, I'm interested in doing what I can to help ensure that we capitalize on Cohasset's unique opportunity to not only be one of the finest public schools in Massachusetts, but in the country as well. I'm looking forward to the opportunity to bring my entrepreneurial spirit, business mind, and passion for creative problem solving to the School Committee."

HEALTH NOTES

Staying fit for the times

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Recent evaluations of the growth of business and therefore prosperity worldwide have signaled the greatest upheaval and growth ever affecting humankind.

Back in the 20th century, Jay Gould once said, "The days of saving paper and string are over; the thing to save now, is time." But in the present, the thing to save is resources; physical as well as people. Health issues are being affected by current events, becoming more complex. It's occasionally useful to consider current events. After all, staying fit physically and mentally is a matter of survival.

Fit for the Future — From a health standpoint, if you're losing a capability, like failure to remember (the use it or lose it syndrome), its possible to slow and sometimes reverse a condition. Consider your brain; it sends signals to your body to add vigor; blood, muscle, more hormones, etc. to the stressed body parts. For athletes, the method of stressing body parts to add muscles is to use them hard, like running until one is tired. Stressing other things such as the ability to remember formulas or the concept described in a paragraph of prose requires rereading the paragraph or reading similar prose, which evokes the mood or sensation one desires to reinvigorate. Unfortunately, reinvigorating cognitive function is in its infancy and the various brain fitness programs proposed by the Board of Health and available free at the Paul Pratt Library are in their infancy and just scratching the surface. But keeping the brain fit along with all the other body parts is more important than ever because of the upheaval currently going on all over the planet.

Recent evaluations of the growth of business and therefore prosperity worldwide have signaled the greatest upheaval and growth ever affecting humankind. It appears that the downturn of 2008 was an event that only demonstrated that a few "swindlers masquerading as respectable bankers and business managers" were unable to derail the largest period of worldwide growth and prosperity in history.

Growth going on worldwide for three decades has resulted in better education, increased ease of communication, low inflation, few shortages and more personal freedom resulting in vastly increased living standards for average people. Achievements bordering on unimaginable are just a portent of those to come. Most are based on the premise that if an individual makes a product which is salable a locally, and is provided with a means to tell about it and distribute it cheaply to many worldwide, sales will increase. Telling was established by the Internet. Distributing was provided by the increased worldwide maritime distribution system. The result is growth all over the world. Individuals with improved tools and implements are producing more and better crops. Manufacturers using power machines and the ready availability of electricity from small generating units can turn from hand tools to electrically driven saws, drills, and all manner of devices for improving productivity and capacity.

Women worldwide, increasingly, instead of being servants and beasts of burden are, with the marginalization of authoritarian and feudal ruling systems, demonstrating equal or better capabilities than their male counterparts. The fact of accelerated population growth limits the scope of ruling systems based on force, particularly those, which are male dominated.

If the fiction that women have few capabilities in modern societies with modern sources of energy is dispelled, then their presence nearly doubles the capacity of any political system effectively employing them.

The Impact on Health — Much information about health matters is available on the web, to the extent that many common ailments can be self-diagnosed. Diagnosis, antiseptics and clean bandaging are available at increasingly more and diverse sites — often available by phone. Soon, doctors and nurse practitioners will be able to treat and bill patients by telephone for many common ailments. People requiring bandages and antiseptic conditions will go to drop-in clinics not necessarily connected to a larger medical facility. Doctors and nurses can prescribe and bill individually — or use a web-based source to do so and maintain records.

Proliferation of health care resources is just another example of the burgeoning availability of services in the new growing world economy.

The character of the wave we're riding: The computer, prompting the information explosion, has brought us too much information available nearly instantly easily organized and transmitted. In the presence of such abundance, warfare itself as a political solution is no longer feasible

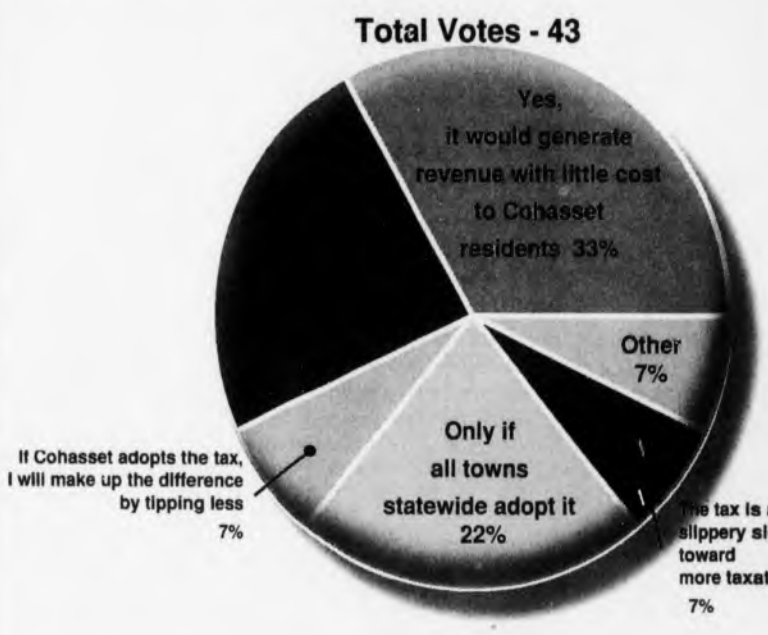
WICKEDLOCAL POLL

Meals tax poll results

The results from our on-line poll on whether the town should adopt a meals tax are in!

As you can see from the pie chart – 33 percent of the votes support a meals tax as a good way to generate revenue. As of Thursday morning, there were a total of 43 votes in the poll.

Cohasset is considering putting the potential of a meals tax that would have to be approved by Town Meeting.



Here's the scoop on the meals tax:

- Imposes a .75 percent (3/4 of 1 percent) sales tax on meals
- Would have to be accepted at Town Meeting
- Dept. of Revenue (DOR) estimated annual revenue accruable to Cohasset as upwards of $70,000
- DOR starts collecting and remitting revenue from the tax on the first day of the calendar quarter following 30 days after Town Meeting acceptance.

While our polls are not scientific, we think the polls can be a good vehicle to provide a quick snapshot of public opinion.

We have the ability to conduct polls as often as we want. Be sure to visit: www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset to vote in our weekly polls.

The poll is on the lower right of the homepage. Keep scrolling down and you will find it. We will publish results in next week's Mariner.

The poll question and the possible answers were:

Should Cohasset adopt the meal's tax at Town Meeting to generate revenue in fiscal 2011 and beyond?

- Yes, it would generate revenue with little cost to Cohasset residents (33 percent)
- No, eating out is expensive enough (24 percent)
- If Cohasset adopts the tax, I will make up the difference by tipping less (7 percent)
- Only if all towns statewide adopt it so the playing field even among restaurants (22 percent)
- This tax is a slippery slope toward more taxation (7 percent)
- Other (7 percent)

Total votes (as of Thursday) 43.

We welcome ideas for new polls. Please email your thoughts to editor Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com

In the meantime, please vote in our new poll on recent U.S. presidents and check out our newly designed Web site.

Unintended consequences of de-leveling

COMMENTARY

JEFF MOY

The concern should not be around the issue of labels, but around substance of the learning experience.

During the past week, I had many opportunities to reflect on the meeting that Mr. Antolini organized last Tuesday night at the high school library regarding the topic of future de-leveling of additional classes at the middle and high schools. Based on the significant turnout for this meeting, this topic is of great interest to the parents of children who will be affected by decisions made by the school administrators.

It is apparent from the beginning of the meeting that this topic of de-leveling is a new one to almost all parents of this town, especially those like me who do not have current children in the upper grades. It is not intuitive from that meeting that most parents truly understand how the benefits outweigh the risks of this trend towards further de-leveling of additional classes. It is uncertain how there will be a net benefit to all students and that such a strategy may not cause unintended consequences.

Like many parents in that room, I did not matriculate in the field of teaching and education. I am sure Dr. Walsh and her staff has had more exposure to this topic of de-leveling than all parents combined many times over. Therefore, I think it would be extremely useful for her team to provide us as parents a presentation of their comprehensive study to support this potential trend in teaching direction.

That does not mean that we shouldn't consider alternative approaches towards learning. I fully support the staff to continue finding better methodologies that may enhance the educational experience for all of our students.

It was also brought up by some administrators that one of the motives to de-level is to try to eliminate labels that students receive based on the level of classes they are enrolled. It is unfortunate that from the days that civilization began through today that human beings are labeled. Worse yet, our society unfortunately continues to label people for worse matters such as race, creed, religious beliefs, color, etc. for which we all hope one day such behaviors are eliminated.

Today, there are modern labels used in scholastic references such as nerds, or geeks, or jocks. I am sure there were equivalent pre-modern day terminologies that people used when referring to people like Thomas Edison or Jonas Salk or Alexander Graham Bell or Albert Einstein. Given their accomplishments to mankind, I am not sure that the labels they were tagged with while growing up would have been such a high price for their contributions to society that we all benefit from in our daily lives today. The concern should not be around the issue of labels, but around substance of the learning experience.

In that room of parents last Tuesday night, I am sure every one of us wants the best for our own child. I would also believe secondarily that we want the best for our fellow neighbors' children. I believe there is some rationale to the staff's initial statement that de-leveling classes would motivate and provide a more challenging setting by pushing those who have less scholastic capabilities to a higher water mark. I think it is also fair to say that classroom learning is not just about what the curriculum and teacher provides, but exposure to fellow students from their exchanges of ideas in class discussions to working effectively in group settings. It is less clear what the positive impact would be from the effects to the upper portion of this student body from de-leveling. How do we know we won't risk those students who are ready to accelerate at a higher and faster pace will not be held back?

I go back to the school administration that they need to be very careful that there are not any unintended consequences from the effects of de-leveling. The high turnout for this meeting suggests many others share the same concerns.

In order to minimize the risk of not making a fully thought out decision, I suggest that a task force be established to fully research and evaluate all the considerations regarding this approach. In this environment where resources are limited within our school system, perhaps this task force could include parent volunteers to help work with the staff to develop the findings. This issue of de-leveling is a significant one and the need to make an informed and methodical decision is absolutely necessary.

I hope the school committee and school administrators take these comments into consideration.

Jeff Moy lives at 33 Ledgewood Drive.

Straightforward communication critical

COMMENTARY

DIANE KENNEDY

I am grateful that a new dialogue among very passionate and thoughtful parents, teachers and administrators has started

I am hopeful that the recent, at times confrontational, discussions relating to possible curriculum adjustments at the high school will result in more positive engagement between the community and schools, as well as a greater understanding of the issues facing public education.

My husband and I are very pleased with our son's and daughter's education, their opportunities at the Middle-High School, the fabulous faculty, the level of rigor, the music and sports programs, etc. We have never more than glanced over the topic of independent schools. Cohasset schools are strong, they are producing quality students and curious and capable citizens who go on to college and meet with great success.

Having said that, I'm well aware of problems that do exist and while the easy thing to do is criticize the administration, we have a higher responsibility as members of the community and the state. Each year the budget realities require some kind of financial scaling back and, thus, conversations about how best to maintain the commitment to excellence. Issues the schools have to deal with — outside of the classroom — are also becoming more significant and costly. This is not unique to Cohasset, but particularly problematic given the size of the school district.

In a perfect world, we'd have all the money we want, our kids could play on sports teams or stay after-school to explore ceramics without fees, they could take Mandarin or German language studies, and courses would run with four kids or 20. But, let's take pride in the following scenario: close teacher/student mentoring; sports teams that have winning and championship seasons; an instrumental music program that is the envy of many significantly larger towns; a dynamic course of studies in which almost half the graduating students succeed in national AP exams; consistent, top "rankings" in all measurement rubrics; initiatives to partner with other communities so we can have a sailing program and cross-country team; STEM and technology labs for students K-8; the laboratory of the Atlantic Ocean and dedicated teachers who have established a summer coastal research program; a local newspaper that encourages articles written by students and has a weekly high school columnist; involved parents who do everything they can to support the schools and programs through the PSO, CEF, boosters groups; middle-school teachers who created an entire unit of study around the book Three Cups of Tea, that included topographical 3-D models of K2, raising "Pennies for Peace", and curriculum studies about the Middle East region. These are just a few of the many unique and important "extras" that exist in our schools.

I am grateful that a new dialogue among very passionate and thoughtful parents, teachers and administrators has started. My hope is that the administration and School Committee will better understand the importance of straightforward communication with the school community. And for all of us: We need to be advocates. Our community needs us to tell the positive story of Cohasset Schools and to use that story to advocate beyond.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from the week of February 1-5. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

BAN HAND-HELD CELL PHONES AND TEXT MESSAGING (H 4466)

House 146-9, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would prohibit all drivers from texting and using a hand-held cell phone but allow drivers over 18 to use a hands-free cell phone with voice-activated dialing.

The measure also requires senior drivers 75 and older to take a vision test every five years when renewing their license. A vision screening certificate from a doctor or optometrist could be provided by the driver in place of taking the vision exam at the registry. Drivers under 75 would still fall under current law that requires license renewal every five years but only requires in-person renewal and a vision test every ten years.

Supporters said that the bill would save lives and prevent accidents. They noted that the measure does not ban cell phone use by adults but simply requires the use of hands-free ones. They pointed to accidents, deaths and injuries involving texting and cell phones and reckless driving by some elderly drivers.

Some opponents said that the restriction is another example of government intrusion into people's cars and lives. Others noted that there are already laws on the books prohibiting driving while distracted and that the bill is a bonanza for insurance companies that will collect millions of dollars in surcharges. Some said that they opposed the bill because it arbitrarily discriminates against seniors over 75. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

BAN HAND-HELD CELL PHONES (H 4466)

House 92-66, approved an amendment that would ban the use of hand-held cell phones for all drivers but allow drivers over 18 to use a hands-free cell phone with voice-activated dialing.

Amendment supporters said that it is just as dangerous to dial while driving as it is to text. They argued that the amendment would save lives, prevent injuries and make the roads safer.

Amendment opponents said that the amendment goes too far and is the same old unnecessary government intrusion into people's lives. They noted that there are already many existing laws that prohibit distracted driving.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment banning the use of hand-held cell phones for all drivers. A "No" vote is against the ban).

FREEZE UNEMPLOYMENT TAX (H 4470)

House 152-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill freezing the unemployment insurance tax paid by employers at the current 2009 level through 2010 instead of allowing a scheduled increase to take effect. The payments go into a fund that provides benefits to laid off workers.

The contribution that employers pay into the fund was scheduled to rise dramatically because of the increasing number of laid off workers collecting unemployment benefits.

The average 2009 employer contribution into the fund was $584 per employee. Without this proposed freeze, the 2010 per-employee assessment would jump to an estimated $852.

Supporters said that the freeze would allow the state to borrow money from a federal loan pool that is funded by federal unemployment taxes paid by employers. They argued that it would save businesses $300 million during this economic downturn and is an appropriate balance between helping the jobless and the employers struggling to keep workers employed.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

LOGAN'S LAW WOULD BAN CUTTING THE VOCAL CORDS OF DOGS AND CATS (H 344) - The bill that would prohibit the cutting of vocal cords of dogs and cats was given initial approval by the House in November but has now been stuck in a House committee for three months. Dubbed "Logan's Law," in memory of a show dog devocalized and then abandoned by his breeder, the bill would prohibit vocal cord surgery except to treat disease, injury or congenital abnormality.

Supporters of allowing devocalization under any circumstance say that it helps manage the animal's behavior. They argue that devocalization may save animals' lives by allowing them to stay in their homes rather than being dropped off at an animal shelter where they could be euthanized.

Advocates for Logan's Law point to veterinarians who say that this cruel and unnecessary vocal cord surgery poses serious, even life-threatening, risks and does not change the distress, improper care or lack of training that often underlies persistent barking. Shelter executives maintain devocalized animals are surrendered to them just like those who still have their natural voice, and that barking is not cause for euthanasia. Advocates also point to a recent poll that indicated 84 percent of Massachusetts adults oppose vocal cord surgery to suppress a dog or cat's voice. They say responsible selection, housing and care of a companion animal, not vocal cord surgery, is the solution.

More confused than ever after meeting

COMMENTARY

BARBARA BUCKLEY

Let the Honors courses continue, with their faster pace, more rigorous curriculum and more challenging requirements.

A copy of this letter was provided to the Mariner for publication.

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am concerned about the continuing debate over de-leveling classes at the high school. I attended the meeting on this very topic last week, and came away more confused than ever. While the meeting was opened with the remark that no course changes are planned, the rest of the meeting was dominated by administrators' assertions that adding more blended classes is essential and that yes, the district is moving toward that goal. We were told that the NEASC standards require it, and that failing to add additional blended classes is to deny educational opportunities to some students. Are changes planned or are they not? And if not now, when? If no changes are planned, why argue so vehemently that change is important? Why not make the statement that no changes are in the works and then adjourn the meeting? Clearly changes are in our future, but no one is willing to say specifically what those changes are, when they will happen, and the real reason for making those changes.

I went through the Program of Studies and determined that the course distribution is as follows: Honors 24 percent, College Prep 42 percent, blended 25 percent and AP 9 percent. It seems to me that the issue is not the number of blended classes; there are currently more blended classes than there are Honors. Particularly since the NEASC website clearly states that groupings are "largely a local decision," wouldn't the fact that 25 percent of our classes are currently blended be satisfactory?

The issue is the number of CP courses. If the goal is to offer more challenging courses to all students, I'd like to suggest reducing the number of CP and adding to the number of Honors and AP offerings. To make the argument that we need more blended classes simply makes no sense. According to my research, only one exclusively Honors course currently exists in the entire CHS Social Studies department. We surely don't need fewer Honors classes. We need more. Safeguarding and adding to Honors classes is not about being elitist or denying others opportunities. It's about recognizing that students who want an Honors curriculum need enough courses offered so that there is always room for those students. It's also about recognizing that some students are very capable, very motivated, and ready to prepare for entrance to an Ivy League or other highly selective school. Let the Honors courses continue, with their faster pace, more rigorous curriculum and more challenging requirements. Encourage all students to take those courses. And give us more. After all, "continuing the commitment to excellence" is part of the mission statement.

It's a fact that no student can be denied entry to an Honors or AP course, as long as there is room. In fact, parents already have the right to put their children in any class they like. Even a child who is recommended for a CP class may, at the parents' request, be placed in Honors or even AP. That is the current policy.

I am left with the feeling, if you will pardon the pun, that we are not being leveled with. I don't buy the suggestion that we need more blended courses to satisfy NEASC or to give everyone the same educational opportunity. Without clear information, I can't help but wonder if this is a financial issue hiding behind a philosophy debate. How will the School Committee and Administrators clear this up for me and the hundreds of other parents who have the same questions and concerns?

The music/movement connection

CONSERVATORY NOTES

SU D'AMBROSIO

COURTESY PHOTO

Movement with Adrienne at the South Shore Conservatory.

Every day at South Shore Conservatory we see how music, movement and drama work together as essential elements of a balanced arts education.

As a professional musician and music educator, many people assume that I grew up in a musical family, surrounded by song and full of opportunities to make music. In fact, I am a great example of what a motivated musician can accomplish with a lot of practicing, hard work, great teachers and a diverse set of experiences that indirectly contributed to my musical skills.

When I was about 5, my mother enrolled me in a ballet class. Ms. Buda, the teacher, was classically trained and probably rolled her eyes when she saw this chubby, chatty kindergarten student enter her studio. I took my place next to the slender, serious kindergarten ballerinas and proceeded to spend most of my time admiring myself in the large mirrors! Somehow, Ms. Buda got through to me and, although I was not destined for "Swan Lake," I learned how to be graceful, feel and respond to steady beat, coordinate my motions with the form and style of the music and work with the group. These are all the most basic skills necessary for being a competent musician!

I'm sure it comes as no surprise that music and movement are closely linked, but when parents approach me and ask for suggestions of ways to influence their child's musical development they are hesitant to take the advice, "Enroll in a movement class!" I imagine it seems like it would be a lot of fun and there is probably no doubt that their child will enjoy it, but they are often looking for something that incorporates music making. Just like dominos, in order to get to the last one, there has to be a chain of events that lead up to it, and focusing on the pulse, rhythm, form and style of music through movement can be a powerful event.

Because music is something that many do naturally and effortlessly, (most of us at least sing in the shower, don't we?), we often forget how truly complex it is. It involves a total connection between the analytical parts of your brain and the creative parts. Combine that with the gross and fine motor skills required to manipulate an instrument and the cognitive and decoding skills necessary to read music, it's a wonder we can do it at all! Whenever we can isolate one of these skills we will be able to come back to the whole with a much deeper understanding and ability to put it all together.

Every day at South Shore Conservatory we see how music, movement and drama work together as essential elements of a balanced arts education. We encourage students to study multiple disciplines to round out their arts education. Comfort with the self is primary in drama, movement and musical experiences, and by increasing self-confidence through theater, students can approach the instrument at hand from a more grounded perspective. Experiences in drama and movement increase spontaneity and comfort in creatively expressing emotion, a skill which will certainly translate into musical performance.

For more information on the Conservatory's music, drama and movement classes, please visit www.sscmusic.org.

Assunta "Su" D'Ambrosio is the Conservatory's Director of Programs and Curriculum. Known as "Miss Su" by SSC's preschool and kindergarten students, she is the classroom music specialist and teaches private recorder lessons and Drum and Sing class. She lives in Plymouth with her husband, Bob, and her two daughters, Maria and Rosa.

Sweet Relief to hold open enrollment

Provides home-based preschool environment

By Courtney Palek
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Sweet Relief, an early education learning center at 38 Summer St. in Cohasset, will be holding open enrollment for morning and afternoon sessions of the 2010-2011 school year beginning Monday, Feb. 22.

Sweet Relief is a home-based preschool environment enrolling students ages two, three and four years old. It is a developmentally appropriate program offering myriad opportunities for students to flourish and grow in an atmosphere providing enrichment activities suited to address their social and cognitive skills.

Director/owner Lyn Congdon Previte and assistant teacher Kelli Rodgers.

Sweet Relief is licensed through the State of Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care. The EEC, founded in 2005, was created by consolidating the former Office of Child Care Services with the Early Learning Services Unit of the Department of Education. It provides the foundation that supports all children in their development as lifelong learners and contributing members of the community, and supports families in their essential work as parents and caregivers (www.mass.gov/eec).

In addition to its EEC accreditation, Sweet Relief is insured and occupies a brand new schoolhouse, a large fenced-in secure play yard and has a consistent emergent curriculum, which follows the Massachusetts Department of Education Curriculum Guidelines.

Lyn Congdon Previte, director and owner of Sweet Relief, has over 20 years experience in early childhood education, holds licenses in CPR and First Aid, regularly attends continuing education courses in early childhood development and recently studied American Sign Language. Previte is a Cohasset native and presently lives in her childhood home. She has studied early education and Montessori methods, has lived for several years in Europe and was employed as president of the Wholesale Division of Design Research before opening the doors to Sweet Relief in 1984.

Working alongside Previte in the Sweet Relief classroom is Kelli Rodgers. Rodgers holds a bachelor's degree in social and rehabilitation services, with a minor in education, and is a state certified teacher's assistant. Rodgers is also CPR and First Aid certified and holds her own certification through the EEC. Rodgers was also born and raised, and currently resides, on the South Shore.

Previte and Rodgers are also accompanied in the classroom by therapy dog, Barron "Bear". Bear has been a nurturing, soothing and valuable presence to many students enrolled in the Sweet Relief program. Bear is licensed and registered with Therapy Dogs International. TDI is a volunteer organization dedicated to the regulating, testing and registration of therapy dogs and their volunteer handlers (www.tdi-dog.org). The use of therapy dogs and "Animal Assisted Activity" are becoming commonplace at educational institutions, nursing homes/hospice and hospitals and are trained to nurture, engage and calm children and adults that may experience apprehension outside of their familiar home environments.

"We are vigilant of the socio-emotional and cognitive needs of all of our Sweet Relief children; individually and as a group," said Previte. "We selectively guide each child to be the best they can be now because we believe this type of learning is what prepares them for the 'next' level of their education. We challenge the entire child – addressing their multiple gifts. Sweet Relief is a 'play to learn' environment; playing to learn the emotional, social and cognitive skills that are an integral part of the lifelong learning process."

The Sweet Relief curriculum works with the seasonal times of year. Students are given the tools and resources to combine their classroom lessons with hands-on learning opportunities; stimulating the senses and encompassing the element of playing to learn. Lessons are reinforced and integrated using arts and crafts, music and books.

The teacher-to-child ratio at Sweet Relief is two to 10 (2:10). Initial enrollment proposes a minimum of two or more sessions per week. The morning session begins at 8:30 a.m. and concludes at noon. The afternoon session begins at noon and concludes at 3:30 p.m. "By enrolling your child in our program for a minimum of two days the first year, and a minimum of three days the second year, you are giving your child the opportunity to become comfortable and secure in our classroom environment. Your child, in turn, will become completely open to learning, communicating and discovering all of the potential that lies within him or herself," said Previte.

Parents are encouraged to enroll their children as soon as possible. Current students, siblings of current students and all legacy Sweet Relief families receive priority registration. Following this, all available spaces are placed on a wait-list and those spaces will be given to new families in the order in which applications are received. Confirmations of acceptance will be communicated in late winter, once the majority of the local preschools have mailed their acceptance letters.

In addition to the traditional school year enrollment, Sweet Relief offers a Summer Camp Program with a nature- and science-based curriculum. A large part of the day is spent outdoors exploring, creating and learning about the natural beauty of the world at large. The study of animals, insects, oceans and beaches reflect the broad subject matter covered by Previte and her staff. Years past have also included the specific study of Pirates of the Eastern Seaboard, the lobster industry and raising and releasing Painted Lady Butterflies.

For more information, or to have an information brochure sent directly to you, please call Lyn Congdon Previte at 781-383-9723 or email to sweetrelief143@aol.com.

Celebrating anniversary of fall of Berlin Wall

Professor Sergei Khrushchev of Brown University, son of former Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, will make a special appearance with award-winning film producer and Boston College professor John Michalczyk at "Breaking Through: Remembering the Berlin Wall and the End of the Cold War," a fundraising event at the Red Lion Inn in Cohasset on Sunday, Feb. 28.

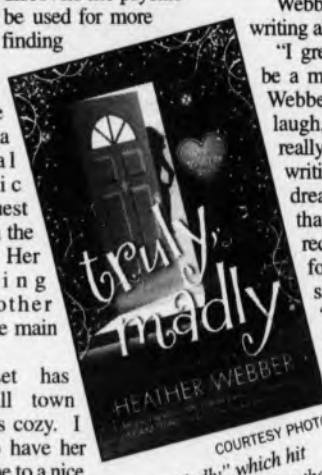
This event will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall and will also support post-production costs of Michalczyk's new film, "Writing on the Wall: Remembering the Berlin Wall," which premiered at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston in October.

In this production, Khrushchev recalls his father's perspective in building the Berlin Wall, and he will comment further at the event. The music composer for the film, Ralf Yusuf Gawlick of Boston College, will attend to present selections from his original film score. Raymond Helmick, conflict studies scholar from Boston College and former senior associate at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, D.C., will also attend. Clips from the film will be screened and discussed.

In this production, Khrushchev recalls his father's perspective in building the Berlin Wall, and he will comment further at the event.

The Rotary Club of Scituate has co-sponsored Michalczyk's conflict resolution films and has recently been invited to screen this film on the Berlin Wall at the 2010 Rotary International Convention in Montreal next June with a panel, featuring Michalczyk and Helmick, on "The Use of Conflict Resolution Films in Rotary Educational and Peacebuilding Programs."

Cocktails and appetizers will be served at 4 p.m., and the program will start at 5:15 p.m. A dinner with the special guests will be held at 6:30 p.m. Cost per person for cocktails, appetizers and the program will be $75. Cost per person for cocktails, appetizers, program and the special dinner will be $150.



For registration information, send e-mail to Janice Brown at janice.h.brown@bankofamerica.com or call 781-826-6831.

Mystery novel has Cohasset connection couples. Lucy lost her ability in an electrical surge when she was 14, leaving her with only the ability to find lost objects. In the novel, she discovers her psychic talent can be used for more than just finding lost keys.

"Truly, Madly," which hit bookstores last week, is the first in a series of mystery books featuring Lucy Valentine as the protagonist.

"Cohasset has that small town charm; it's cozy. I wanted to have her come home to a nice, safe area considering all the stuff she goes through in the books," Webber said. "As a kid I loved going along Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Ave. and seeing all the big houses. I remember then and now thinking 'oh, someday I'd live there.' I guess I'm vicariously living though Lucy!"

Webber diagnoses her main character as suffering from "love conquers all syndrome," a theme she says plays out in "Truly, Madly" and the subsequent novels.

The Lucy Valentine novels are Webber's second book series; she is the author of the Nina Quinn mysteries, a five-book series.

"As a reader I love book series. As a writer I love developing the characters. I'm very fond of secondary characters and developing them along with the main characters," Webber said.

She gleans ideas for her characters in part from an active habit of people watching, "I like to take different quirks from people" and she incorporate them into her characters.

Webber stumbled into writing almost by accident.

"I grew up wanting to be a medical examiner," Webber said with a laugh, adding never really gave a thought to writing. But, a vivid dream changed all that. When she recounted the dream for her husband, she said the plot "would make a great book." His response: "why don't you write it?"

"As if it was that easy!" Webber said, but she launched into it and hasn't looked back since. That first manuscript is still in a box under the bed, but she has met success as writer with her subsequent efforts.

Her first book was published in 2002 and "Truly, Madly" is Webber's ninth published novel, and second book series. At least two more "Lucy Valentine" novels are planned. The second installment, "Deeply, Desperately," comes out this fall and "Absolutely, Positively" will hit bookstores in early 2011.

Webber's other books include the five-book Nina Quinn mystery series and three historical romances.

Lady Skippers finish perfect regular season

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Girls' Basketball

The Cohasset girls basketball team put its name in the history books on Tuesday with a 47-26 win over Abington on Senior Night at Cohasset.

After celebrating the illustrious careers of Tori Lehr, Meredith Kelly and Samantha Crough, along with team manager Izzy Franklin, the Lady Skippers went out and won their game against Abington, giving the team it's 20th consecutive victory and a perfect regular season.

The Lady Skippers should be a top seed in the upcoming Div. 4 South Sectionals.

Make no mistake, a perfect regular season is a huge accomplishment, especially in a league like the South Shore League that has teams like Carver, Norwell, Hull and Abington to name a few. Those teams can beat any other team on any given night.

Cohasset senior captain Tori Lehr knew the importance of winning the Abington game.

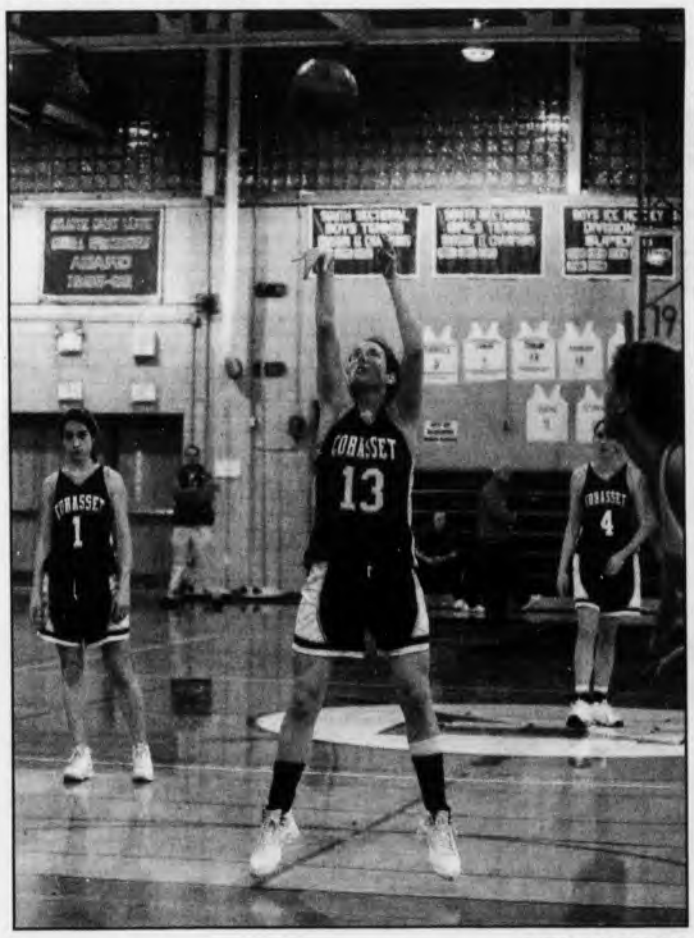
"Abington has been rough for us," Lehr said. "They were the only team to beat us (regular season) in the last two years. We already beat them at their court this year. We weren't going to lose to them at home."

Lehr said the game was special.

"It was Senior Night," she said. "It was really fun, but a little sad. We got through it. I think (20-0) is something we'll look back on and be proud of. To be undefeated in the South Shore League is a great feeling. We've been so successful the past three years. We don't want to see it end."

Cohasset will have a little time to savor the perfection, but not too much.

There's still a matter of the tournament to get ready for, and hopefully another state championship.



"We'll have a couple of days off," Lehr said about upcoming plans. "Then we'll be practicing and we have some scrimmages."

Busy week on the ice

Skippers battling for playoff life

The Cohasset Skippers hockey team had a busy week with three games, including two against South Shore league rivals.

Hockey

Wednesday night they faced off against Abington/East Bridgewater in what was expected to be a hard fought contest. Earlier this season the two teams battled to a 2-2 tie and the expectations were high for another battle as they faced off at Rockland arena. The Skippers came out flat and just couldn't get the offense going as Abington/East Bridgewater built an early lead of 4-0 and never let up. Sophomore Travers Craven potted a goal to close the gap to 4-1, but it was just an uncharacteristic off night and Abington/East Bridgewater cruised to an easy 8-1 win.

With hopes of qualifying for the state tournament on the line, Cohasset traveled to Tabor Academy to face Old Rochester. The Skippers lost 6-5 earlier this season and they knew a maximum effort was desperately needed to keep their tourney

Girls rise to top

Norwell/Cohasset gymnasts win conference meet

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

Heading into the Cranberry Gymnastics Conference meet, it seemed as if the Norwell/Cohasset gymnastics team had an uphill battle. Ranked fifth out of eight teams coming into the competition, the girls went up against some of the top teams in the league.

Gymnastics

But the girls certainly rose to the occasion and then some. The combined Cohasset/Norwell gymnastics team won the meet, finishing ahead of Hingham/Scituate (second place), Carver/Sacred Heart (third), Plymouth (fourth), Silver Lake/Pembroke (fifth), Rockland/Hanover (sixth), Brockton (seventh), and Nantucket (eighth).

hopes alive. The boys certainly didn't disappoint as they came out flying from the opening face off and never stopped skating. It was easily their best game of the season. Their tenacious forechecking kept Old Rochester off balance all night and even Old Rochester's Gage Silva, one of the state's leading scorers, was rendered a non-factor.

Senior captain Connor Queenan opened the scoring with a blistering wrist shot to the top corner to put Cohasset on top 1-0.

Netminder Jack Nelson had another strong game and Cohasset's defense limited OR's scoring opportunities time and again. Defenseman Coleman Hernan had a goal saving shot block that denied OR a certain goal in the second period. OR banged home a goal at the end of the second period to tie the game 1-1.

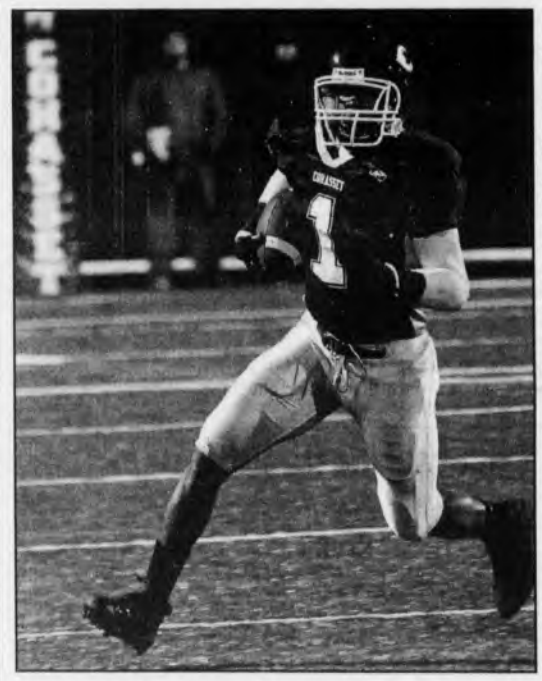
Cohasset took the lead for good when sophomore John Collins backhanded home a rebound off senior defenseman Geoff Evans' blast from the point. Collins has appeared to have found a home at wing since being promoted to the top line with Anders Goetz and Andy Mckenna. Defensemen Evans and Eric Bartucca each had their best games of the season.

The Skippers are back on the ice this Saturday against South Shore Vo-Tech at 8p.m. at Connell Rink in Weymouth.

Sophomores Jamie Faber, Vinny Calorio and junior Andrew Whitney are earning more and more ice time with their solid play of late.

The next night the Skippers paired off with league leading Norwell before a standing room only crowd at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena.

From the opening faceoff, Norwell realized they had their hands full as the Skippers were flying from the start. Norwell got on the scoreboard first as Alex Clemens got one by goalie Jack Nelson. The lead was short lived as Cohasset's Connor Queenan tied the game with a beautiful wrap around tally to send both teams to the locker room deadlocked at one after one period. The second period was more of the same as both teams traded scoring chances only to be denied by great goaltending by both teams. Cohasset's Jack Nelson had an outstanding game and provided a highlight reel save as he sprawled across the crease to make an unbelievable glove hand stop to keep the game tied at one. As the final seconds of the second period were winding down, Norwell's Ryan Brown barreled down the left wing and finally got one past Nelson to take a 2-1 lead after two periods.



As the third period got under way the Skippers continued their relentless forechecking to keep Norwell off balance. Midway through the third period speedy sophomore Alex Evans outraced the Norwell defenseman and was hauled down from behind resulting in a rare penalty shot. As the capacity crowd was on it's feet, the smooth skating Evans came in alone and showing the poise of a veteran, faked a shot, drew the goalie out of position and slid the puck five hole to tie the score at 2-2. Evans has been a stalwart all year anchoring the team's second line and is the Skipper's third leading goal scorer as a sophomore. Unfortunately for Cohasset, Norwell led by Ryan Brown put the game out of reach with two quick strikes and an empty netter to win 5-2. Although a tough loss, Coach Bob Walsh has to be happy with the way his team is playing, as Norwell had all they could handle to walk away with the victory. The Skippers are back on the ice this Saturday against South Shore Vo-Tech at 8p.m. at Connell Rink in Weymouth.

Honored

Congratulations to Cohasset's Will Lynner and Dana Valentine for being named to play in the 32nd annual Shriners Football Classic. The game is the premier high school football event in New England. Having two senior players from Cohasset in the same game is a rare feat. It has only happened one other time in school history. Will and Dana will be the 9th and 10th players ever from Cohasset to play in this storied game.

Norwell/Cohasset gymnasts win conference meet

"This goes to show you how much you need every player at every level," Co-Head Coach Ruthann Ardizzoni said. "The team really stood out with great routines. (Co-Head Coach) Nancy (Durkin) and I were really proud of all of them."

The Norwell/Cohasset team began the competition on the balance beam and got strong performances from Betsy Crawford (8.0), Maddie Ward (8.4), Amber Silvia (8.5), and Sam Sprague (9.0).

"This was a great start for the competition because beam and bars can be so inconsistent with falls and mess-ups," Ardizzoni said. "The girls really did an awesome job."

Tumbling over to the floor exercise, the girls continued to perform flawless routines, according to Ardizzoni. Izzy Ortigoza hit a personal best of 7.3, Abby Smith scored a 7.60, Betsy Crawford finished with an 8.3, Silvia reached an 8.5, Ward received an 8.85,and Sprague scored a 9.10.

"The girls improved 13 points over the course of the season, which is huge in gymnastics. We are hoping to have two or three girls qualify for the state competition."
Co-Head Coach Ruthann Ardizzoni

"By the third rotation on the vault, the girls still managed to continue to do well," Ardizzoni said.

Hannah McKitrick (7.2), Caitlin Sullivan (7.35), Sam Casey (7.30), Smith (7.55), and Ward and Sprague, who both earned an 8.40.

The last rotation was the uneven bars, and Jillian Crawford, Ortigoza, Betsy Crawford, Silvia, Ward, and Sprague each scored identical scores of 8.50.

During the awards ceremony, Silvia was awarded the sportsmanship award, Ward was named as an uneven bar all-star, and Sprague was named as an all around all-star. Silvia medaled fifth on the floor exercise and third on balance beam. Ward finished second in the all around, while Sprague finished as the first place champion in the all around.

"We started the season with a 121.00 finished the season with a 134.00," Ardizzoni said. "The girls improved 13 points over the course of the season, which is huge in gymnastics. We are hoping to have two or three girls qualify for the state competition."

That meet will be held this Sunday (Feb. 14) at Algonquin Regional High School.

FRESH START with Lucie Rice

Part 3: Cardiovascular Exercise for Health, Fitness and Performance

Where do I begin?

Now the rubber meets the road and the fun begins! By now I hope you have developed a plan of attack and consulted your physician if necessary. Many of you are ready for action – in fact some of you have already begun because you have called me or e-mailed me and told me so.

Do I need to warm-up before doing cardiovascular activity and warm-down afterwards?

Yes. It is important to warm-up. You can often do your intended activity at a lighter pace to warm-up and do the same thing to warm-down.

So how much exercise "should" I do each day or week?

The 2008 Physical Activity Guidelines recommendations for adults are: For important health benefits adults need at least 150 minutes of moderate intensity aerobic exercise per week, and an additional 2 strength training sessions per week (more on this next article.) This translates into brisk walking for 30 minutes 5 days per week

That sounds like an awful lot?

Remember the point is progress not perfection, so you're going to start at an appropriate and doable level for you and move consistently towards your goal. Your goal may be to do 2 "easy" 20 minute sessions per week, not optimal but very possibly doable, which is the key point. Go to www.cdc.gov for additional detailed information about exercise intensity, type of exercise etc.

So how do I figure out what intensity is right for me?

We use a procedure called "the talk test." During low intensity activity you should be able to talk easily, during moderate intensity exercise you can talk with interruption for breathing and would have a hard time singing, but during vigorous or high intensity activity you can't talk easily and are breathing heavily. High intensity/vigorous exercise should be reserved for those prepared for it and some people may never want to work at this intensity. You will need to listen to your own body, go at a pace that feels right for you, educate yourself, and seek professional assistance when necessary or helpful.

So far you've talked about only walking, running and cycling. What else can I do?

The possibilities are endless. Try "walking in place" - a possible exercise to do during TV commercials. If you have been very inactive this could work well. If you want to work out at home, you could also purchase a treadmill, stationary bike, or an elliptical machine, but I recommend you try them first to make sure it feels right for you as lots of them end up as expensive clothes hangers. You could join a gym, you may want to hire a personal trainer to help you figure out all the options. You can also look into other community resources such as senior centers which often offer various fitness classes. Of course you can also go outside and try cross country skiing or snowshoeing, and when it is warmer-biking, walking/jogging/running, kayaking, hiking, swimming. Think about what might work for you.

Remember the point is progress not perfection, so you're going to start at an appropriate and doable level for you and move consistently towards your goal.

I thought you focused on doable, not optimal, so why all this discussion of exercising so much?

It is critical that we all understand how profound the connection is between health and exercise. Most of us are not even in the ballpark, but it is valuable to understand what we want to work towards. Doable is to take the minimum goals – 30 minutes of moderate activity 5 times per week, and make a plan that takes that into account but will work for you. I often ask my clients at our first session how many days per week and minutes per session are they willing to commit to. That needs to be your starting point.

Can I do too much cardio?

Yes. Those of us who do endurance events sometimes do "too much" activity. Too much intensity, frequency, and duration can lead to overtraining. Among athletes and the most determined fitness enthusiasts this can be a problem. If you start experiencing excess fatigue, an elevated resting heart rate, decreased performance, etc. then you may be overtraining. I often say I have 2 types of clients, those I have to push forward and those I have to hold back. When I am working with athletes of all level and ages, not overdoing becomes as important as doing too little. Think of always trying to push just enough to stress the body, but never enough to hurt it. We used to say, "No Pain, No Gain", today many of us in the field prefer the saying, "No Brain, No Gain."

Can older, heavier people, or those with chronic diseases do vigorous exercise?

Yes, many can. However, they need to be certain they are medically safe to do so and choose the right activity. Our videos show people working at all different levels of intensity, many are older. I always try to steer anyone at risk of orthopedic injuries (overweight/obese, pre-existing conditions, older) towards low impact activities like walking, elliptical machines, bikes, and swimming. There are, however, many older adults who are highly fit, 60-80+, who push the outer limits of what we thought possible, breaking records and entirely challenging our understanding of human potential.

If I want "optimal" cardiovascular health how much exercise should I do?

The Guidelines say that "even greater health benefits" are gained from exercising moderately 300 minutes per week or 5 moderate one hour cardiovascular sessions! For those of you who are further along the curve - pretty fit and with a regular history of exercise, the guidelines go on to say if you increase the intensity to vigorous exercise (say running) you can get approximately the same benefit with half the number of minutes or 150 minutes. So running hard for 20 minutes gives you a similar benefit as moderate intensity exercise for 40 minutes. This option can be chosen by those who are already highly fit and wish to reduce the amount of overall time used exercising.

Next week's Q&A with Lucie Rice will tackle Strength Training. Lucie is an ACE Certified personal trainer based out of the Workout Club in Marshfield. To contact her

Cohasset hosting State Wrestling Championships

Skippers tune up at Team Sectionals

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset wrestling team had a nice tuneup for the upcoming Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament and the Div. 3 State Tournament over the next few weeks.

Saturday, at Pembroke, Cohasset finished 1-1 at the Div. 3 Team Sectionals, beating Hingham 48-24 and losing a close 36-31 decision to Canton.

Jack Murphy led the way for Cohasset, winning both of his bouts on the day.

With the wins, Murphy continued to climb closer to some big milestones.

His win total at Cohasset now stands at 114.

That's just seven wins shy of Ryan Freeman's 121 wins, and two short of 1997 State Champ Kevin Duffy's 116.

Murphy (31-1) will have a chance to catch Duffy if he has a successful next few weeks.

This weekend, Cohasset will wrestle in the Div. 3 Individual South Sectionals at Canton High School, then the Skippers will play host to the Div. 3 State Tournament.

"I'm excited," Cohasset wrestling coach Torin Sweeney said. "When we held it here in 2004 it was the most exciting wrestling even we've ever had here. It was tremendous for Cohasset. We had three state champions that year. I wasn't expecting that, but things came together."

Scituate wrestling coach Mike Dillon said having the States at Cohasset is a motivational factor for his wrestlers.

"It is something we've talked about," Dillon said. "Last year States was three hours away. This year it's practically at home. I made it a point to tell the kids that they should go whether they're in it or not. Just seeing the tournament up close is an experience, and if they make it another time, and haven't been there, it can be a disadvantage. Not knowing what you're up against is tough."

For Cohasset, other double winners at the Team Sectionals were Andrew Littauer, Thomas Flibotte, Alex Kinnealey and Cam Washak.

Cohasset finished the season 12-15.

Sweeney was pleased with the way his squad has developed and is hoping to make a splash at Sectionals.

"I'm hoping we have a half dozen competing," he said. "I think we're in good shape. We've wrestled a tough schedule, so I think our guys are prepared. We should have a few good seeds."

The Individual Sectionals are this Saturday in Canton, and the Div. 3 State Tournament is Friday, Feb. 19 and Sat., Feb. 20 at Cohasset Middle High School.

Friday's action starts at noon and continues to 8 p.m.

Saturday's wrestling begins at 10 a.m. with the finals scheduled for 5 p.m.

Hingham/Hull Babe Ruth Baseball registration underway

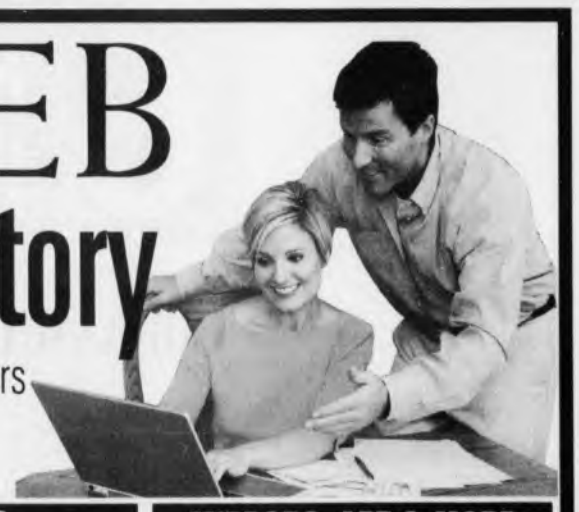
Registration for Hingham Hull Babe Ruth Baseball—both the spring and summer seasons— is underway. Registration deadline is March 8.

The form can be found at www.hinghamhullbaberuth.org.

The cost is $175 per player, $250 for two or more players from one family. Register for both seasons at once and save: $325 for a single player and $400 for two or more players from one family.

HHBR is now proud to welcome Cohasset 13-15 year old players as well.

HHBR is still seeking managers, coaches and other volunteer help.



Any questions, please call Mark Igo at 617-523-2492.

Tournament seeds are announced next Friday.

"I hate suspense," Lehr said of the long wait before seeding.

In the Abington game, Cohasset did what it does best, spreading the scoring around while playing lockdown defense.

Carli Haggerty led the Lady Skippers with 12 points. Lehr and Anna Serakis added 11 each.

The night before, Cohasset was on the road in Hingham, facing the Div. 2 Harborwomen, one of the better teams in the Patriot League.

Cohasset won that game 50-36.

Again, the scoring was spread around.

Lehr led the attack with 15 points, while Crough chipped in 13. Haggerty added 11 and Meredith Kelly and Serakis both had four.

Hingham gave the Lady Skippers a game early, taking a 10-7 lead into the second quarter.

A 13-0 Cohasset run starting at the end of the first quarter, ending with a Hingham timeout with 5:09 left in the half gave Cohasset the advantage and a recipe for victory.

In the early going, Hingham was running the ball well, and Cohasset wasn't clicking yet.

The Lady Skippers countered with a slowdown style, passing around the perimeter, using the shot clock to find open looks and easy shots while running down time.

That took away Hingham's running game and put Cohasset totally in control.

The Harborwomen made a bid to get back into the game when a three-pointer by Katharine Alger cut the lead to 27-23 with 4:50 left in the first half, but Crough answered with a three of her own and Lehr forced a turnover and hit inside to push the lead back to nine, 32-23.

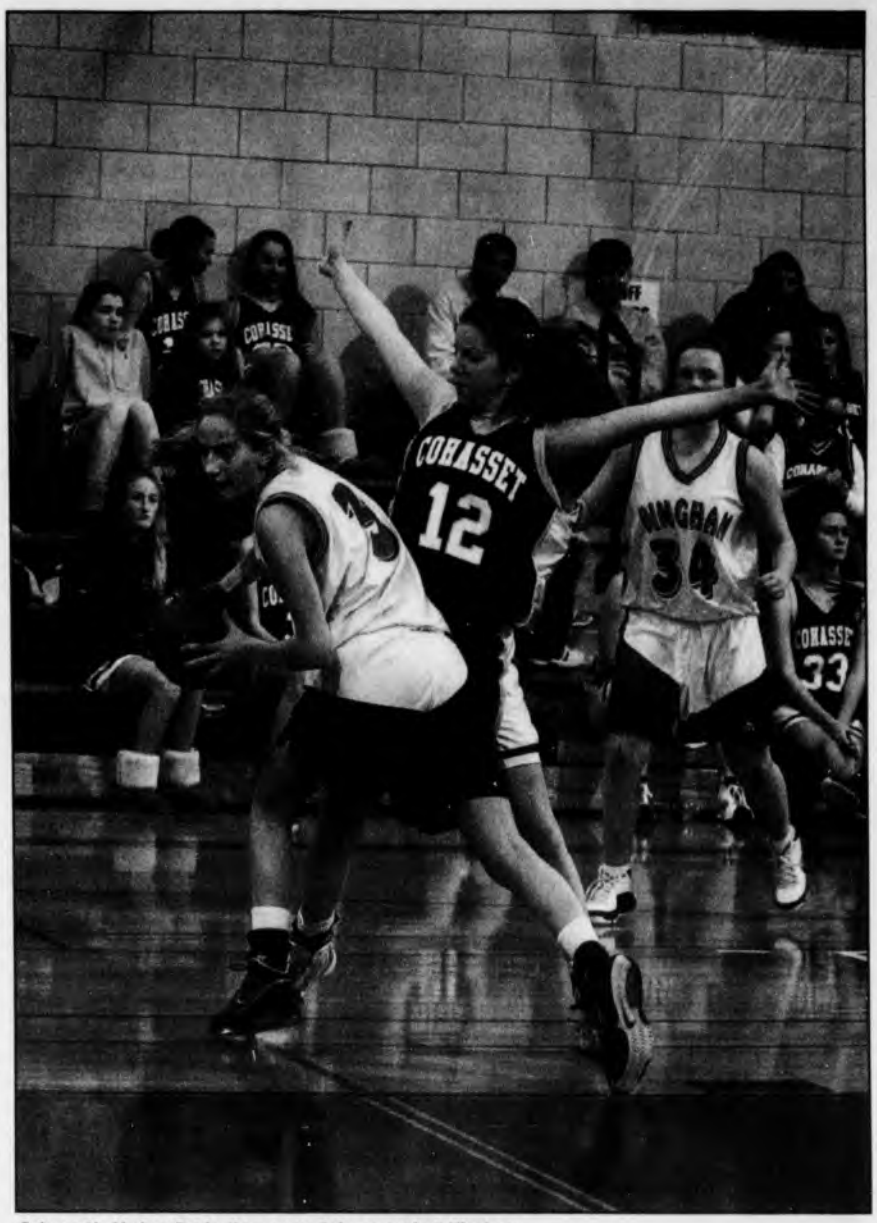
That was all Cohaset needed.

"That was a tough one," Hingham coach Dave Hickey said. "They're very, very good. Probably the best team on the South Shore. They match up well and make everything difficult offensively. This was a good experience to get us ready for the tournament."

Lehr said Cohasset knew it had to adjust after falling behind.

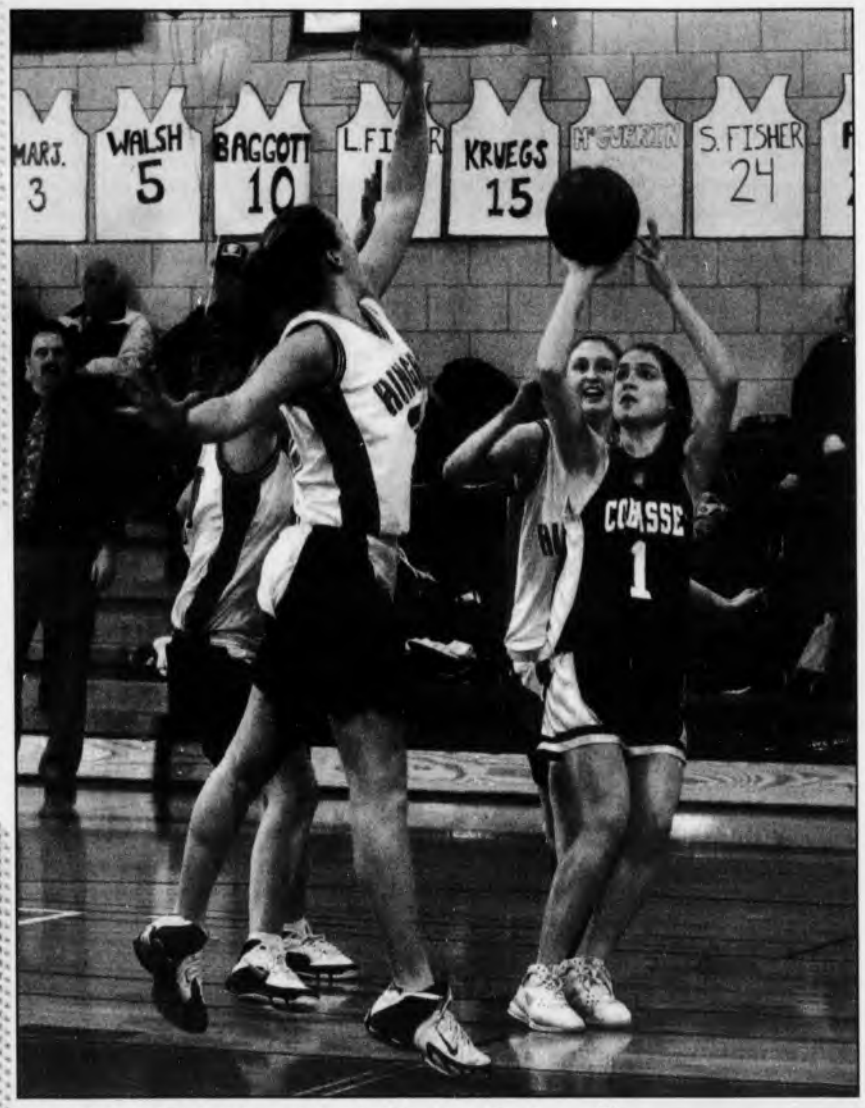
"We looked to see what we could to to change it up," she said. "We didn't start quickly and they did. We knew we had to pick things up. We don't like to lose. When we see we're losing, something kicks in and we know we can win if we work our butts off. It's a mental thing."

As for the Princeton style slowdown offense, Lehr said it's just one of many things Cohasset does.



"If they attack the center, we go outside," We adjust to things. Against Hingham, we had to slow it down and break down their defense."

After the Abington game, Cohasset celebrated with a team dinner.



They know the best is still yet to come, like a visit to the Garden for a chance at a state title.

Lehr said Cohasset will be ready for the challenge.

"We're feeling good," she said.

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Derby Academy accepting applications

Derby Academy is now accepting applications for the 2010-2011 school year. The school's PreK program for 4- and 5-year-olds takes place mornings, Monday through Friday, while programs for kindergarten and later years is full day, ending at 3:15 or 4 p.m., Monday through Thursday, depending on age and athletics, and ending at 1:15 p.m., on Fridays. Class sizes are small with excellent teachers in optimal educational surroundings.

Derby Academy, in its 225th year since its founding in 1784, is one of the oldest co-educational day schools in continuous operation in the United States. Located in Hingham, Derby Academy is dedicated to serving students in pre-kindergarten through eighth grade and is committed to providing an exceptional educational experience that includes academics, arts and athletics programs in a welcoming and nurturing environment. For more information about Derby Academy, call 781-749-0746 or visit online at www.derbyacademy.org.

Rockland Trust to award scholarships

'White' Wednesday won't make history books

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

In my last article, I asked when Groundhog Day was. Correction: I stupidly asked when Groundhog Day was. It has now come to my attention that Groundhog Day was actually last week and once again, the Groundhog saw his shadow. Shocking isn't it? I guess he was right about winter not being over though. Just ask the Superintendent who let everyone out of school early on Wednesday after the news people really hyped up a lot of snow that didn't end up coming till the night. Hey, no complaints on this end.

Monday was once again the slowest day of the week. There were a few people whining about getting grounded by their parents because of their report card grades, but other than that, the day was good. The AWESOME Spinnaker Staff had a meeting about their next issue, which is coming out sometime after February break.

Tuesday was an incredibly important day: The start of Mr. Skipper planning. The men signed up to perform and the women signed up to plan the event. All of the initiative-taking seniors, who volunteered to help out with the glorified male beauty pageant, are sure to make it one that will be remembered for quite some time. That is certain. The only other thing that is certain: Sean MacCarthy will be wearing the yellow slicker at the end of the night (that means I will win). Wait…people don't like arrogance do they…new strategy: The only other thing this is certain: Everyone will have fun and have a better understanding of one another at the end while raising money to benefit the Senior class. Oh and something about World Peace. That's better.

White Wednesday. That's what this past Wednesday is going down as in the history books. Actually…it probably won't…as previously stated, we were given a half day at the last minute because of the "accurate" weathermen who said we were gonna get destroyed by snow. Once again, Mother Nature toyed with New Englanders and delivered very little snow and delivered it 6 hours late. Also on "White Wednesday", we had a new type of drill in which the entire school was brought to the gymnasium. This drill, as explained by Mr. Antolini, was to prepare the students and faculty for all different kind of scenarios besides gun and fire threats. Cohasset's finest was there to make sure everything went smoothly…and to hand out MORE tickets. ZING!

Thursday hosted the Student Council meeting that was supposed to be on Wednesday. But because of Wednesday being cut short, there was no time for the meeting. At the rescheduled meeting, the Student Council members discussed doing another dance, most likely, GLO JAM: The Second Coming, because some of the underclassmen felt left out of the Junior-Senior Semi Formal (go figure). Also, organizing a pep rally of some sort for the Spring Sports season was also discussed. Things are looking up, once again.

Friday. Exactly 1 day before February vacation. As a few students got hammered with tests before the break, many were just counting down the minutes till the weeklong break. The International Club met this day too but you know all they were thinking about was jumping into another time zone, an international time zone (get it?), so they could start vacation already. Long story short, trying to keep a kid focused in class the day before a week long vacation is like trying to keep a fish from swimming.

Well that sums up the past week in CHS. There are actually some big events going down this vacation. (Cue poor attempt to win affection of the female readers) The most magical and special holiday of the year is this week: Valentines Day! 143! I <3 Valentines Day and Roses and boxes of chocolates. (Poor attempt stopped) FAT Tuesday is also (go figure) this Tuesday. Party it up people. Finally, the Division III MIAA Wrestling Tournament is going to be held in Cohasset on Friday and Saturday. Go out and support the Cohasset Wrestlers as they compete against the states finest. That's all I got for you now. I got my vacation next week so I will restart the week after. Ciao.

Sean MacCarthy can walk without crutches.....again!

Parents and schools as partners discussion Feb. 24

What are your child's rights in regard to their education?

All are welcome to join Dr. Denise Messina, Director of Student Services, for coffee and a discussion regarding Rights and Responsibilities in Special Education on Wednesday, Feb. 24, from 9-11 a.m. at the Osgood School Library.

Dr. Messina wants every parent to feel that they are partners with their child's school. She will help you to understand the educational laws and your child's rights. This is an open invitation, please feel free to invite a friend. The discussion will include information for children pre-school age of three through twenty-one who have not attained a high school diploma or its equivalent.

Fall in love... with your hearing!

February is the month to fall back in love with your hearing!

-Do you have to ask others to repeat themselves?
-Do your loved ones complain you watch the television too loud?
-Do you struggle to hear phone conversations?

Retired US Navy Commander Donald Grief of Hingham looks for his flag before the start of the dedication ceremony at the Healing Field last May. He was a commander during World War II.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The effort should result in hundreds of American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

The Healing Field will be on display from May 22 to June 1. The dedication is scheduled for 1 p.m., Saturday, May 29.

'History Trivia' should be a fun night!

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold the second of its 2010 regular Wednesday Night Lecture Series on Feb. 17 and invites members and non-members to join in an evening of "History Trivia." This program is a light-hearted look at people, places and events throughout history with a goal of having fun, seeing what we can recall and, maybe even learning a little something new.

Program coordinator, Judy Dickstein, playing the role of game host, will administer a series of questions, some easy, some hard, and a couple tricky. The game can be played on your own, or as a team with small prizes at the end. This event will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Society's headquarters in the Pratt Building at 106 S. Main St. As always with the Wednesday Night Lectures, there is no charge for the program and light refreshments will be served.

Mia and Nick Petrocelli of Scituate riding in their third Kids PanMass Challenge Bike Ride in Hingham last year. Volunteer for the 2010 event at Hingham Library Wednesday, March 3 at 7pm. The ride will be Sunday, June 13 this year.

Volunteer now for Kids Pan Mass Challenge

The fourth annual Kids PanMass Challenge Bike Ride in Hingham has been scheduled for Sunday, June 13, from 9 a.m. to noon. The 2010 ride will take place entirely in Wompautck State Park and just like the events from previous years, kids from all around the South Shore will raise funds for the Jimmy Fund to benefit Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. The Kids PMC Bike Ride has proven to be a fun and meaningful event for kids from 3 to 14 years old as well the South Shore community.

The initial volunteer meeting will take place from 7 to 8:45 p.m., on Wednesday, March 3, at Hingham Library. The meetings are few, but the participation is great fun and satisfying. A variety of volunteer roles from lending ideas and concepts at the beginning of planning to just helping out on June 13 will be outlined and available for sign up. The day couldn't happen without all the volunteers that have participated in the last three years and those that will pitch in this year. "We have a great group of volunteers coming back from previous years, but it takes many hands to make the event safe and fun" said this year's coordinator Lisa Patterson of Hingham. Coordinator Jackie Temple of Scituate said "Many levels of commitment are needed from the start of organizing to the day of the event."

Watching the kids celebrate their efforts at fundraising is a joy. So many of the young bikers have been personally touched by cancer and find special meaning in this event. Each year about 500 kids participate and more than 100 volunteers help put the day together. More than $150,000 has been raised by the children of the South Shore to aid the fight against cancer in the three years the event has taken place. The purpose of the Kids PMC Bike Ride is not only for the kids to have fun, but to teach them the pleasures of helping others and initiate them into the world of philanthropy.

The Kids PMC Bike Ride is an outgrowth of the adult 190 mile two-day Pan Mass Challenge Bike Ride that has raised more than $270 million in its 31 year existence. It is the largest one day athletic fundraising event in the country, drawing bikers from all over the world. One hundred percent of funds raised by the adult PMC as well as the Kids PMC go to the Jimmy Fund in support of cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Come to the Hingham Library at 7 p.m., on March 3, to volunteer to make the Kids PanMass Challenge Bike Ride in Hingham an even greater success in 2010. The meeting is open to all on the South Shore and beyond who want to support the fight against cancer and help kids learn about giving. Kids can register now and volunteers can sign up on line at kids.pmc.org/hingham. South Shore businesses and organizations are encouraged to join in supporting the event in any way they can. More information is available by email at pmchingham@comcast.net. To see highlights of previous Kids PMC in Hingham rides, go to kids.pmc.org and click on Hingham ride.

Take part in police survey

In an effort to identify the needs of our community, the Cohasset Police Department has linked a survey to its web page at: www.cohassetpolice.com

Please take a few minutes and complete the survey. For those who do not have computer access, copies of the survey will be placed at Cohasset Police Station and Town Hall. Additionally, each police car will have copies of the survey and officers would be glad to drop off and pick up surveys from your home.

You can call the Cohasset Police Department at 781-383-1212.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF FEB. 15, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) There could be some negative reaction to your tough stance when making a recent decision. But overall, your efforts result in well-earned recognition and all that can follow from that.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your financial situation seems confusing, even for the fiscally savvy Bovine. Maybe it's the conflicting advice you're getting. Check it out before things get too tangled to unknot.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A relaxed attitude goes a long way in helping you deal with any of life's irritants that might be popping up this week. You're also a reassuring role model for others in the same situation.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspect favors creativity, which should persuade you to work on your artistic projects. If time is a problem, prioritize your commitments so that your work isn't compromised.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Scrutinize all the job offers that interest you. Most are honest and worth considering. But a few might not be completely forthcoming about what the job is and what the salary and benefits are.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An unexpected snafu could delay the completion of a project you're eager to finish. Find out what's causing it, fix it, and if you need help, don't be shy about asking for it. Good luck.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An idea that could be helpful to you comes from an unlikely source. Listen to it. Discuss it. If necessary, adjust it. If it looks as if it might work out quite well, go ahead and use it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be careful about allowing someone to share a very personal secret with you. This could cause problems down the line with others who are involved in that person's private life.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A cooling down of a relationship could be the result of neglect, unintended or not. To save it from icing over, you need to warm it up with a large dose of hot Sagittarius passion.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is a good time to get involved with a number of family matters that involve money and other issues that might jeopardize the closeness between and among family members.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Cheer up. That difficult person who appears to be deliberately stalling your project might just need to be reassured of the value she or he brings to it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Good news! Expect to feel re-energized now that you've gone through that stressful energy-depleting period involving a lot of changes. Now, go out there and show them what you can do.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

The Raging Readers Team tries to come with the names of the "top eight fairytales" at the Deer Hill School during the Family Feud –like quiz game, dubbed "Character Fued."

The Bookworms Team works together to come up with the right answer to the question "Name a reading goal of the Deer Hill students." As part of the kick-off event, fifth-graders dressed up as their favorite book characters.

Liliana Astino and Tayja Wright listen to a question before hitting the button to be the first one to answer during the game Character Feud. The game show host is Noel Hart.

The Reverend Gary Ritts presented a slide show to the Deer Hill students of the Appalachia Service Project's journey to West Virginia last summer to help repair houses for those less fortunate before the start of the read-a-thon.

Award-winning jazz quartet coming to Cohasset

Syncopation, an award-winning vocal jazz quartet based in Boston, will perform an all a cappella show at First Parish Cohasset at 4 pm on Sunday, Feb. 21. . Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

You may recognize Syncopation from this past year's Boston Pops Fourth of July performance at the Hatch Shell, where they were the featured guests. These four singer/musicians have performed across the United States at notable events like the Tanglewood Jazz Festival, The Tri-C Vocal Jazz Festival, The Boston Globe Jazz Festival, and The Meihou Music Festival. The group regularly tours Japan. They are also the winners of the 2008 Annual Boston Harmony Sweepstakes A Cappella Festival.

Syncopation, an award-winning vocal jazz quartet based in Boston, will perform an all a cappella show at First Parish Cohasset at 4 pm on Sunday, Feb. 21.

The Boston Globe describes Syncopation as "the 21st Century Manhattan Transfer or Lambert, Hendricks & Ross," and it is easy to see why. Like those legendary top-notch vocal groups, Syncopation performs jazz and pop music that is timeless, up-to-the-minute and arranged with killer tight vocal harmonies.

Syncopation's distinctive style reflects bebop, Latin, and pop influences. The group usually performs with a band, but their a cappella performances are equally exhilarating. They were formed in Boston in January of 2002 and mentored by the great Cheryl Bentyne of the Manhattan Transfer.

Syncopation is: soprano Aubrey Logan, alto Christine Fawson, tenor David Thorne Scott and bass Tsunenori "Lee" Abe (who also is the group's arranger/composer). More information about the group, including bios of the musicians, can be found at www.jazzsyncopation.com.

You may recognize Syncopation from this past year's Boston Pops Fourth of July performance at the Hatch Shell, where they were the featured guests.

"We try to have something for everyone," says David Thorne Scott. "When we perform with a band, we each play horns; two trumpets, two trombones. Our a cappella shows draw from jazz, pop and world music." Christine Fawson adds, "We don't think of ourselves as an a cappella group. We are a versatile vocal group that sometimes performs without instruments!"

Syncopation's performance schedule this spring includes performances at high schools (Belmont and Hopkinton), jazz clubs (Ryles in Cambridge, MA and the Hi-Hat in Providence, RI), and concert halls (Merrimack College in North Andover, MA and Chelmsford Performing Arts Center in Chelmsford, MA).

Aubrey Logan took top honors in the 2009 Montreux Jazz Festival vocal competition. Lee Abe's book of arrangements was recently published by Yamaha Music.

For more information about the concert, please contact Allegra Martin at (617) 872-0461.

Jewish holiday of Purim

Purim in the USA is Hingham Quincy Chabad's creative twist to this year's community Purim celebration, which will take place at Hingham Woods Function Room, 150 Beal St., at 4 p.m., on Sunday, Feb. 28. The event will feature a live magic show, hot dogs, Kosher burgers, American fries, apple pie and raffle. Participants can enjoy all-American cuisine served with traditional Hamentashen. In addition, the celebration will feature a child-friendly reading of the biblical scroll of Esther, known in Hebrew as the Megillah.

In the spirit of Purim, participants are encouraged to come in costume and be included in the competition, which will award prizes to contestants with the most innovative or funny costumes. The event is a community-wide program, and all are welcome to join, regardless of Jewish affiliation or background. To help cover expenses, guests are requested to pay $5 per child, and $10 per adult.

The festival of Purim is celebrated every year on the 14th of the Hebrew month of Adar. It begins this year after sundown on Feb. 27 and ends at nightfall on Feb. 28. The holiday commemorates the salvation of the Jewish people in ancient Persia from Haman's plot "to destroy, kill and annihilate all the Jews, young and old, infants and women, in a single day." The name of the holiday, Purim, literally means "lots," for Haman determined the day of the annihilation by drawing a lottery. It is observed by public readings of the Megillah, or Scroll of Esther, to recount the story of the Purim miracle, sending food gifts to friends, giving gifts of money to the poor and enjoying a festive Purim meal. For more on Purim's history, observances and meaning, plus fun and other activities for the entire family, visit http://www.hqchabad.com/purim.

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom Temple news

The Writings of St. Paul through a Jewish Lens with Rick Small – This is a six-week course continues on Tuesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. will be held on Feb. 23 and March 2. It is free for members and $54 for non-members. For more information, call 781-749-8103.

The teachings of Christianity's putative founder will be explored through careful reading of Saul of Tarsus's (later called Paul) letters in the New Testament. His writings often melded Jewish scripture with Greek philosophy and this study, in seminar format, will allow a thorough discussion and better understanding of Paul's thinking within the culture of the era.

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom Israeli Film Festival – Four Sundays at four.

The film series will run on Sundays at 4 pm. Movies only are free to members and $6/non-member/movie. Dinner option - $12/movie/member and $18/movie/non-member; Series of four movies with dinner - $44/members and $54/non-members.

Other movies include:

Sunday, Feb. 21 – "Broken Wings" directed by Nir Bergman.

Sunday, March. 21 – "Beaufort,", directed by Joseph Cedar

Sunday, April 25 – "Walk on Water," directed by Eitan Fox

'Heatless Sundays'

For the past seven winters, New North Church's "Heatless Sundays" have highlighted the plight of area families who are not served by government-sponsored fuel assistance programs.

New North is leaving the Sanctuary in its historic meetinghouse at 1 Lincoln St., Hingham unheated on the second Sundays of January, February and March. The money saved by not heating the sanctuary will be combined with proceeds from a special collection taken at the service and donations from the public to provide fuel assistance to hard-pressed local families.

The church teams with Alvin Hollis Co. and Williams Coal and Oil to provide assistance to homeowners in South Shore towns who are having trouble paying their fuel bills. Money raised by the church, supplemented by donations from the fuel dealers, pays for a free tank of oil for households that need help.

On the "Heatless Sundays" the 10:30 a.m. worship service takes place in the Ruth Curry parlor in the parish house at the rear of building.

One hundred per cent of the collection at each of these three services will go to the fuel assistance program. In addition, the church asks for donations from citizens who would like to support this effort.

The public is welcome to attend any of the "Heatless Sunday" services. Those who cannot attend but who would like to support this program are invited to send their tax-deductible donations to New North Church/Fuel Assistance Effort, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham, MA 02043.

Company Theatre to perform well-known musical

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Company Theatre co-artistic and musical director Michael Joseph remembers having his share of spelling bee success during his childhood. The Weymouth resident says he'll be quite happy, however, to be in his customary spot leading the show band, as Company opens its 2010 theater season this week with the Tony Award-winning musical "The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee."

"I loved spelling bees when I was in middle school and I was pretty good, too, but I'm not sure I could spell half the words used in this show," said Joseph by telephone from the Norwell theatre this week.

In the one-act musical comedy, with music and lyrics by Natick native William Finn and book by Rachel Sheinkin, six hyper-competitive, off-beat adolescent characters demonstrate their spelling prowess alongside audience members invited to join them at the bee.

Company Theatre co-artistic and musical director Michael Joseph.

"We'll be selecting four everyday people from each audience to appear in the show. They'll have to participate in a few musical numbers and, of course, they'll have to know how to spell, too," explains Joseph who asks that anyone interested in being considered please plan to arrive at the theatre at least 30 minutes before show-time.

The one-act musical comedy about a fictional spelling bee, based on "C-R-E-P-U-S-C-U-L-E," an original improvisational play by Rebecca Feldman, was first developed in 2004 by the Western Massachusetts-based Barrington Stage Company. From the Berkshires, it moved off-Broadway to the Second Stage Theatre in January 2005 before transferring to Broadway's Circle in the Square Theatre in April of that year. The New York production ran for 1,136 performances. In the fall of 2006, a sit-down production transferred from San Francisco to Boston and spent four months at the Wilbur Theatre.

Joseph – who was also music director for Finn's "Falsettos" at the Company Theatre several seasons ago – says he understands why a little show about a spelling bee became such a big hit and the winner of the 2005 Tony Award for Best Book and Best Featured Actor in a Musical (Dan Fogler).

"It's just a really charming show. I usually have an innate opposition to adults playing children, but here you really need the conceit of adults playing children for the show to really work. The characters are not caricatures – they are rooted in reality. The innocence of their reactions lends itself perfectly to the humor of the piece."

Whether it's the boy sent packing from a previous bee because of a peanut allergy, the politically aware, politically correct girl with the two Dads, or the over-achieving, multilingual transfer student, Joseph believes everyone will find something in the show to which they can relate.

"There is something very direct in William Finn's writing. You don't have to wait for layers to be peeled away for the story to be revealed. His shows feature characters that you recognize immediately and this one is no exception. The bee participants are all people pleasers, which, of course, we all are to some extent. And it's not too hard to see the reason why they all spell."

"The 25thAnnual Putnam County Spelling Bee" will be at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, through Sunday. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787, or go online at companytheatre.com.

Hitting the high notes with the 'people's diva'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

It is not only for gracing the world's greatest opera stages and concert halls that American soprano Renee Fleming has earned the moniker "the people's diva," but also for branching out into other mediums like movie theaters and television where she hosts the Metropolitan Opera's "Live in HD" series, and "Live from Lincoln Center" on PBS. In 2008, Fleming became the first woman in the 125-year history of New York's Metropolitan Opera to headline an opening night gala.

A Pennsylvania native, Fleming has performed in Italian, German, French, Czech and Russian, in addition to English. This season at the Met, she will sing Strauss's "Der Rosenkavalier" and Rossini's "Armida." Fleming won her third Grammy, in 13 nominations, for Best Classical Vocal Performance for her 2009 Decca release "Verismo" just last month.

Fleming, who will turn 51 on Valentine's Day, joins James Levine and the Boston Symphony Orchestra this week for concerts featuring Richard Strauss's "Four Last Songs," which the composer wrote as something of a late-life love letter to his wife Pauline de Ahna, on a program that also includes Mahler's "Symphony No. 4" and Alban Berg's "Three Pieces for Orchestra." At home in New York last week, Fleming took a telephone call from Town Commons.

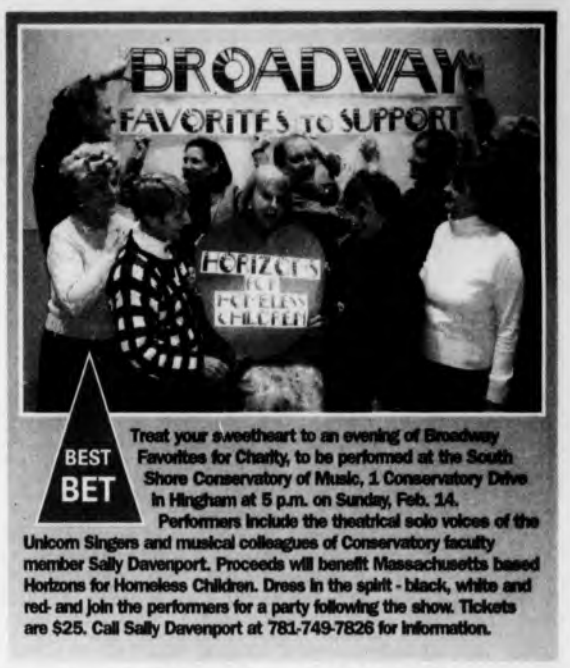
Town Commons: Congratulations on winning your third Grammy. What was that like?

Renee Fleming: The third time around is much calmer. When I won my first Grammy, I jumped up and down. This time, I just thought, "Isn't this lovely." The classical categories are among those presented at the Grammy pre-show event, which is not broadcast on television. I wasn't there, but I did happen to be on my computer checking out the streaming live Internet broadcast when my category was announced. Roberta Flack presented and also accepted for me, which was wonderful. As soon it was over, I immediately ran to share the good news with my daughters.

Renee Fleming will perform with James Levine and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Feb. 11-13.

Town Commons: Your parents were music teachers and it's been written that the importance of music education was a frequent dinner table topic when you were growing up. Do you take a similar approach with your children?

Renee Fleming: Music education by osmosis is a hit-or-miss proposition. Both of my daughters are terrific singers and the older one has performed with the Met Children's Chorus. Amelia is 17 and Sage is 14 now, though, so if I encourage them they will do the opposite just like most teenagers. Instead, I provide them with a wide array of experiences and let them make their own choices. They've had some amazing opportunities traveling the world with me. We were on five continents last year alone. I'm pleased that they have both developed very eclectic tastes in music. They love theater, too, and they've probably seen at last half of everything playing on and off-Broadway right now. They definitely keep me connected to mass culture.



Town Commons: What is your history with the "Four Last Songs"?

Renee Fleming: The "Four Last Songs" are iconic works for soprano with orchestra. I've recorded them twice and have performed them more than anything else in my repertoire. They are perfect for my temperament and voice with their range, the tessitura and the long, sustained singing they require. They're wonderful, too, because you can invest your own life into the performing of them.

Town Commons: How important to opera are programs like the Met's "Live in HD" series?

Renee Fleming: "Live in HD" is the greatest development since super-titles. The program has made opera more accessible and more available all over the world and has been especially important in attracting young audiences. This is my third year as host, and it has been amazing because it's given me a platform to be a personality and not just a singing head. People approach me now and say things like, "We loved your hair last week, but the jacket the week before was even better."

Renee Fleming will perform with James Levine and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Feb. 11-13, at Boston Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-1200 or go online at bso.org.

Detective division has remarkable record

By Mary Ford

CSI is working 24/7 right here in Cohasset.

Cohasset's crime scene investigation unit, dubbed the Criminal Investigation Division, has an impressive record of solving local crime – one that can stand up to those of much larger police departments, officials say.

"We provide a service here in my opinion that is unparalleled in terms of responsiveness and capabilities," said Detective Lt. Gregory Lennon. "We provide 24-hour-seven-days-a-week investigative support to our police department."

Lennon said the CID unit is always on call and will respond to a crime scene "no matter when or where it occurs."

Lennon explains that studies show that an immediate response to a crime scene by investigators plays a significant role in the "solve-ability" rate of crime.

"It is referred to as the 'golden hour,'" he said. In crime investigations that is when the majority of witnesses

Does Cohasset still want turbines?

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Are wind turbines a possibility in Cohasset?

Two years ago when the wind energy facility bylaw passed unanimously at Town Meeting it seemed like the sight of the twirling blades were only a matter of time. The bylaw was supposed to pave the way for turbines and set parameters for their construction.

Now, two years later, the writers of the bylaw are unsure if a turbine is even possible under the parameters they set. After last month's denial of private developer CCI Energy's two-turbine project, which brought to light a zoning setback issue that could prohibit turbines on all previous sites targeted for turbines, the Alternative Energy Committee is unsure what's next for wind power in Cohasset.

"We don't know what's next. We know some people want to see turbines succeed and some people don't want to see turbines come to Cohasset," said

Shadow finds his way home

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There is a "miracle dog" among us.

Shadow, a seven-year-old, 90-pound black lab, made a great escape from this invisibly fenced yard last Friday morning.

For the next two days and nights he made his way through Wompatuck State Park – braving the cold, wild animals and whatever else Mother Nature threw at him. On Sunday afternoon he had traveled all the way to Hingham Centre on Route 228.

There he stumbled upon a bit of luck. Passersby and a neighbor in the area spotted the lab and after much coaxing was able to leash him. Then began the challenge of locating its owner.

Shadow, who is the beloved pet of the Dicksons of King Street, is big and tall, even by Labrador retriever standards. His coat is short and silky and he absolutely hates the cold, owner Kelly Dickson said.

He also will do anything for food, Dickson said. He has escaped from the invisible fence a few times before through a weak spot in the backyard, but had always returned within an hour — after taking a peek through the neighbor's trash cans.
